E. E. ROGERS PRESIDENT OF STATE COMMERCE CHAMBER

The new board of directors of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce, at its first meeting held early this week, elected Ernest E. Rogers, treasurer of the state of Connecticut, and president of the Winthrop Trust Company of New London, as its president for the next year.

Mr. Rogers succeeds Stanley H. Bullard of Bridgeport who has been president of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce for the past four and a half years and who was recently elected a director of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

The directors elected James T. Moran, president of the Southern New England Telephone Company, as the first vice president of the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce.

George T. Kimball, vice president of the American Hardware Corporation of New Britain, was elected Second Vice President.

George E. Chandler was elected to the two offices of executive vice president and secretary of the chamber.

R. LaMotte Russell, president of the Manchester Trust Company, was elected Treasurer of the Chamber.

The directors expressed their deep appreciation of the work that Mr. Bullard had done in upbuilding the chamber during his four years and a half as president. They also paid a high tribute to the work of Mr. Chandler in reorganizing the chamber in 1919 and to his subsequent successful efforts to build the chamber into an organization of broad and practical value to the people of Connecticut and to the business interests of the state.

In retiring, President Bullard said that "the Connecticut Chamber of Commerce stands today as an institution of undoubted value. It is being used as a model from which other state chambers throughout the country are being formed."

Connecticut College

Miss Dorothy Pasnik, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Pasnik of Williams St., a freshman at Connecticut College, was awarded an athletic association triangle as a reward for athletic points received throughout the year. Miss Pasnik made the second hockey team in the fall season, indoor track team in the winter, and baseball team this spring. The awards were given out at the athletic banquet which was held on Tuesday evening in Thames hall.

This banquet is one of the most outstanding events of the college year. The faculty act as waiters and usually devise some unusual way of serving the various courses. This year Professor Jensen was head waiter. He led a large and able body of co-workers into the dining-hall in much the same way as the Pied Piper of Hamlin led the children long years ago, to the tune of a pipe. Each faculty assistant was dressed as seemed best to personify the perfect waiter. Much merriment resulted when President Marshall asserted that without undue reference to names there were all specimens of the circus there from fat lady

K. of C. WILL DECORATE GRAVES AND HOLD MEMORIAL SERVICE AT CHURCH

Next Sunday will be memorial day for the members of White Cross council, No. 12, Knights of Columbus, and the committee in charge of the arrangements has made plans to honor the memory of their deceased members in a solemn and impressive manner.

Sunday forenoon a special committee, under the direction of Worthy Lecturer, F. T. Diggins, and which includes the officers of the council, will decorate the graves of all the members of the council, in St. Mary's, St. Joseph's cemeteries as well as visit St. Mary's cemetery, Jewett City, where repose the remains of several former members of the local council.

In the evening, at 8 o'clock (daylight time) a special memorial service, which has been arranged by Monsignor, M. H. May, will be held in St. Patrick's church. Rev. Joseph M. Griffin, of St. Thomas seminary, Hartford, who has a state-wide reputation as an eloquent and forceful speaker, will preach the sermon at this Sunday evening service. A special musical programme has been arranged, for the occasion, by Prof. Farrell.

The members of White Cross council have been instructed to report at the Knights of Columbus home, on Broadway, at 7:30 Sunday evening, and will march from there in a body to St. Patrick's church where seats will be reserved for them. It is expected that members of nearby councils of Knights of Columbus, in Taftville, Baltic, Jewett City and Montville will unite with the members of the local council, in making the evening memorial service as impressive as possible.

The memorial service is open to the public and the officers of the lodge are extending a cordial invitation to all to attend these services at St. Patrick's church.

will be the theme of the exercises and Dr. McConaughy is expected to deal with this thought in his installation address which is awaited eagerly by the hundreds of Wesleyan alumni who are returning to the campus for the joint installation and commencement program which will continue through Monday. The greetings of the sister colleges to the new president will be extended at the exercises by President James A. ### DR. LEWIS BUYS BIG WATER STREET PROPERTY

Another sale of valuable business property in this city was recorded Thursday when Dr. Napoleon B. Lewis of 314 Main street bought from Max Rosenthal of Los Angeles and Harry Rosenthal of New York City the Strand Theatre building and the Olympic building on Water street and the Auditorium hotel property on Water street at the corner of Market street, the whole making an extensive group of land and buildings that front on Water street and extend through to Commerce street. The buildings were erected by the late J. B. Shannon.

The Auditorium hotel property on the corner is a five story fireproof building. Adjoining this to the west is the Strand theatre building, which, besides the theatre has about a dozen rooms on the upper floor that are used by the hotel and also has three tenants, Forbes, Greiner & Kane, Thomas W. Wilson and W. C. Noyes. The Olympic building contains a large hall, above which are rooms occupied by the Young Men's Hebrew association. The store on the ground floor is occupied by the Connecticut Sales and Engineering Co. Broker John A. Moran who made the sale for the Rosenthals had previously sold another large piece of property for them as they were the owners of the old Y. M. C. A. building on Broadway.

COUNCIL WILL ORGANIZE FOR CURRENT YEAR

The new court of common council will hold its organization meeting this (Friday) evening in the council chamber at the court house. The republican victory of Monday leaves the council the same as it was last year, six republican aldermen and councilmen and six democratic aldermen and councilmen with a democratic mayor. The organization meeting tonight will consist of the swearing in of the new members of the council, the adoption of parliamentary rules, the appointment of new committees, referring of all unfinished business to new committees and other appointments.

TAFTVILLE

Mr. and Mrs. Theophile Cantara and family of South B street, are spending some time in Canada.

John Panek of North Third avenue, is enjoying his annual vacation.

Thursday was pronounced the hottest day of the season, and the Ponemah mills closed because of the heat. All the swimming places in the Shetucket river were crowded throughout the day, and several went to Mohegan Park to enjoy a dip in the lake.

The Thursday evening basketry class held its weekly meeting in the Red Cross rooms in the Ponemah building.

Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Armitage and Mrs. J. Reynard and son, Herbert, have returned from Stamford where they were the guests of Mrs. Candlish, formerly of Taftville.

Heat Shuts Down Ponemah Mills.

Due to the excessive heat the Ponemah Mills at Taftville closed Thursday noon for the remainder of the week.

HEALTH TALK GIVEN FOR NORWICH LIONS

With the usual large attendance the weekly luncheon meeting of the Lions club was held Thursday noon at the Wauregan hotel with President C. Edward Carpenter presiding. Tyler Stanton acted as song leader and there were the usual number of club and group songs. Secretary Edward Rich read an invitation from the Norwich Rural association to attend the annual picnic of the association at Lowthorpe Meadows Friday afternoon and evening. Committees submitted reports of progress after which the meeting was turned over to the entertainment committee.

The chairman of the entertainment committee, George Madden, introduced Dr. David Sussler as the current topic speaker. Dr. Sussler spoke on What Everybody is Indebted to Themselves in Reference to Their Health., saying in part;

I will try to show you folks things that you owe yourselves that almost 90 per cent. of the people don't do.

You are all business men and I'm sure you look after that end, if not you would soon be out of business. You do that by checking up system, called semi and annual inventory. If certain departments of your business show a loss you investigate, find out the trouble and correct it, and in that manner you are able to go along and prosper. But how many of you people, not only here, but all whom you know, do the same thing with your body. Not many. I can safely say about 10 per cent. I mean how many go to their accountant in this instance, their doctor, and have an inventory both semi and annual to find out if every branch of their body is on the positive side of the ledger and showing profits, and if they have any on the losing side of the page. And if so that they can be advised probably to correct the defect before anything serious develops. This is the reason of these life extension institutes managed by the insurance companies open to their clients free so that they will check themselves up and prevent serious illness, so that their clients can live longer and in that way benefit themselves as well as their clients.

My advice to folks is that they should have a complete physical examination of themselves. This examination including the eyes, ears, nose, throat, chest, lungs and heart, abdomen in reference to the stomach, liver, intestines, kidneys, nervous system, circulatory system, especially towards blood pressure and urinalysis. I'm sure if people will do that every six months they will surely prevent a lot of serious conditions from ever getting a good start. For medicine today has reached a period to prevent sickness. So do your share to yourself.

Following Dr. Sussler's talk there were popular piano selections by Louis Fox. An innovation in the entertainment line was a short debate on the subject, Resolved, That the Tall Man Has Better Advantages Than The Short Man. Peter Ethier and Jean Kieffer argued for the affirmative and Ed. Rich and Louis Fontaine spoke on the negative.

The entertainment committee chairman announced that the speaker of the meeting next week will be Rev. Charles H. Ricketts with Ben Pullen as the current topic speaker and Herbert Corey as song leader. After a vote of thanks to those providing the entertainment the meeting closed with the singing of The Star Spangled Banner.

MISS LEAHY RECEIVES M. A. DEGREE AT COLUMBIA

Miss Agnes Berkley Leahy, of this city, received the degree of Master of Arts, at Columbia university, New York, on Wednesday of this week. For the last year Miss Leahy has majored at Columbia in sociology and related subjects, and since the first of February she has been an assistant to Miss Eliza Butler, head of Johnson hall, who is the sister of President Nicholas Murray Butler, of Columbia.

Miss Leahy, who is the daughter of Mrs. Thomas Leahy, of 33 Otis street, is a graduate of Broadway Grammar school, Norwich Free Academy and of Connecticut college for Women where she received the degree of Bachelor of Arts in the class of 1922. She is president of the college alumnae association and is to resume her duties at the college on July 1.

NORWICH HAS HOTTEST JUNE 4TH IN HISTORY

Norwich like other New England cities awoke Thursday morning to find itself in the grip of the hottest June 4th in the memory of any citizen. The thermometer registered at 78 degrees at 8 o'clock and from then on continued on a steady march upwards and by noon had reached 92 degrees.

As though this was not got enough to suit the people of Norwich the weather continued on warm and the hottest part of the day came during the mid-afternoon when the mercury stood at 99 in the shade in many places throughout the city. Reports of 95 and 100 in the shade were heard from some places and at 4:30 o'clock in the afternoon, two thermometers, one on the West Side and another on the East Side read 95 degrees.

Little relief came when the sun went down and it was late in the evening before the mercury began to descend. After sunset a slight breeze sprang up and by midnight the mercury had fallen back to 80 degrees, the highest point registered at that time for many years.

Thermometers in houses and schools and in business blocks registered high throughout the day and it was reported that one of the classrooms in the Norwich Free Academy building was of a temperature of 103 during the early afternoon. Open windows and doors had little effect on houses and many thermometers stood at 90 or better during the day.

A searcher of old records found something which sent his own temperature to the boiling point, Thursday, when he found that Norwich people, fifty years ago June 4th, found light overcoats very comfortable, as the climate was more of December than of June.

The Backus hospital reported no cases of heat prostration Thursday despite the heat and the death list for the hot spell remains at one person thus far, one death from heat prostration being reported Wednesday.

Thermometers in the sun Thursday registered over 110 in many places in the city and everyone who could do so jumped into automobiles and cars and made for the seashore and country to escape the heat, the crowds at the beaches rivalling the usual July crowds.

Factories and mills, including the Hall company mill at Trading Cove and the Crescent Fire Arms company closed at noon Thursday the employes being unable to stand the heat. The Ponemah company at Taftville closed at noon and in other plants it was reported that many employes refused to continue at work after noon because of the heat.

At the Yantic mill Thursday employes in one of the departments where heat is of necessity much higher than elsewhere, were forced to resort to clothing as near their "birthday suits" as possible during the day, and almost to a man jumped into the river after work to cool off.

Children could be seen all day at the swimming hole at Cold Springs and at the White bridge near the old boat club, thus starting the swimming season earlier than usual in these two places.

The weather bureau gives no hope of relief for Norwich and vicinity during the next 48 hours, although slight relief is promised for northern New England today (Friday).

Ice cream and soda parlors were practically sold out before closing time Thursday night and in many of them it was impossible to buy ice cream after 9 o'clock, the demand having been too great during the day.

Traffic officers at the bank corner found the heat unbearable during the day Thursday and were forced to work in shifts of much shorter hours than usual in order to keep fit for duty.

Gasoline stations also had a good business Thursday for practically every owner of an automobile was out riding during the evening, this being one of the best ways of keeping cool.

One of the popular places during the day was the big swimming pool at the Y. M. C. A. and those who had the privilege took advantage of its cool waters to beat the weather man.

Only a few of those who see articles displayed in store windows of Mexico can read so that the goods are identified by the pictures displayed instead of by name.

MAKING FINAL DRIVE FOR SALVATION ARMY

A final drive to secure the pledges or money for the $1,500 needed to complete the $5,000 for the Salvation Army home service fund is to be made in the days that remain of this week. The workers are making a final appeal to those who have not yet been reached either by personal solicitation or by letter to send in their pledges to Treasurer Theodore Sage at the Dime Savings bank or give it to the tag day lassies on Saturday.

It is believed that there are many, especially in the residence districts, who would have made pledges if they could have been reached but as this has not been possible the appeal is made to send their pledges along to the treasurer.

It was stated Thursday evening that Mrs. Wilbur, who has been away in South Norwalk since January 1 for the benefit of her health has declared that her interest in seeing the drive completed successfully is so great that she proposes to return here Saturday to participate in tag day.

NOVA SCOTIA COAL MINES REPORTED TO BE FLOODING

Glace Bay, N. S., June 4—After withdrawing union men who had been engaged in maintenance in the Nova Scotia coal mines today, 200 striking miners forcibly removed officials of the British Empire Steel corporation who had been doing maintenance work at the New Waterford Power Station. Three office employes were injured during the action.

With the consequent stoppage of work at the plant the mines in the Glace Bay and New Waterford districts were reported to be flooding and the town of New Waterford was said to be without light and water. Arrangements were being made for the removal of 20 patients from the hospital there.

15-YEAR-OLD BOY WAS DROWNED AT NEW HAVEN

New Haven, Conn., June 4—Joseph Debes, 15 years old, of this city, one of eight occupants of a row boat, was drowned at City Point in New Haven harbor tonight. The other seven occupants, one of them a brother of the drowned boy, were rescued, only one of them needing first aid treatment when he reached shore. The body was not recovered. The boat began to leak after the boys had left shore and when several of the frightened lads jumped overboard, the craft was overturned. Joseph Debes, who could not swim, grabbed hold of his brother and the latter tried to get him to shore but failed.

Holdup men have been known to take to the highways in order to raise sufficient coin to enable their wives to take to the byways.

In 1925, he has had to June 1, 217 gifts, amounting to $121. From the present outlook he says, it seems as if we might go beyond the good results of 1924.

GENERAL WARFARE IN CHINA REPORTED TO BE IMPENDING

Authentic Sources of Information Have Notified the Washington Government—Authorities Declare That Hostilities For the Military Mastery of China is Inevitable—President Coolidge is Being Kept Advised of the Situation.

Washington, June 6—Information from authentic sources of the swift approach in China of general warfare which promises to dwarf present disturbances in Shanghai, Canton and Changsha, is in the hands of the Washington government.

The purport of this information, which also has reached the Associated Press, is that a clash for military mastery of China is impending. Whether it will come immediately on the heels of the trouble in the coastal regions, or break later is held problematical, but authorities on the ground declare it is inevitable.

Chang Tso Lin, Manchurian war lord, with his force of 200,000 men, and Feng Yu Hsiang, with a following of 175,000, are being watched by observers. Friction between them already has developed to the point where armed struggle may be precipitated at the last provocation.

[illegible] has the sympathy and probably some form of substantial aid from Japan. Feng, the so-called Christian general, admittedly is receiving active and material assistance from Soviet Russia. Unquestioned sources have reported a continuous supply of arms, rifles, machine guns and ammunition to be reaching Feng's troops from Moscow and Urga.

Feng has already withdrawn from Peking, which he took in 1924 by a coup executed while he was a subordinate commander of the Chihli military party, then headed by Wu Pei-Fu, who was thrust out of the political picture in China because of Feng's defection. There has been no open clash as yet between the forces of Chang and Feng. The outbreak of hostilities cannot be long delayed.

In view of these circumstances, the disturbances in Shanghai and elsewhere precipitated by Chinese students, the only central objective of which is the stripping of special rights from foreigners in China, take on new significance.

The demands made by student and other discontented elements printed in hand-bill style and scattered through the streets of Shanghai, Canton Changsha an even in Peking, synchronize exactly with Soviet propaganda which has been broadcast in China since the arrival in Peking of the Soviet ambassador, M. Karakhan.

President Coolidge is being kept advised of the situation in China. He intends that the American naval craft now in Chinese waters, as well as the marines landed in Shanghai, the legation guard at Peking, and other American detachments shall be utilized for the protection of American lives and properties. Secretary Wilbur, Washington, commanding the Asiatic squadron, free to use his discretion meanwhile has left Rear Admiral in the employment of the ships and men at his command.

At present, not including the additional ships and men now enroute to Shanghai, the American forcer of the army, navy and marine corps in China comprise the 841 officers and men under command of Brigadier General Wam D. Connor, at Tientsin; the Pekin legation guards, and the marine detachment landed at Shanghai with two companies of volunteers, one infantry and one cavalry, serving as part of the Shanghai volunteer corps. In addition to these and excepting the emergency detachments now at Shanghai, there are 940 British, 604 Japanese, 1,622 French and some Italian troops in China for the protection of their nationals and interests.

The Washington government has no intention that its forces in China shall become involved in the situation there unless faced with actual necessity of protecting American lives and property. Should future developments in Shanghai, Canton, Peking or other centers distributed by the present anti-foreign demonstrations make it necessary to alter the administration's policy in this regard, it is probable that concerted action on the part of governments to protect their citizens would be agreed upon.

There is no attempt on the part of their anxiety regarding the Chinese Washington authorities to disguise situation. While declining to comment publicly, they have realized for months that the trend of the nationalist spirit in China and the lack of a central government in Peking portended difficulties of an intricate and delicate sort that would have to be solved sooner or later.

Main dependence for the solution of the present difficulties lies in the diplomatic corps in Peking and from a physical standpoint, in the presence along the coast and in the troubled cities of the foreign military forces.

The diplomatic body at present is exerting every possible pressure to bring about a solution in a peaceful way and is certain to be supported in its work by the home governments of the respective [illegible].

Ferdinand Mayer, charge ad interim of the Peking legation, is participating in the deliberations of the corps as the American representative pending the arrival of Minister John Van A. MacMurray. Mr. MacMurray surrendered his office as assistant secretary of state today and prepared to depart tomorrow for San Francisco where he is to sail June 13 for China.

ITALY NOT IN POSITION FOR THE FUNDING OF WAR DEBTS

Rome, June 5.—(A. P.)—Finance Minister De Stefani announced in the Italian senate today that Italy at the present moment was not in a position to consider the funding of war debts.

"No systemization of the inter-allied war debts can be accepted," he declared, "unless subordinated to the possibility of payment, and such possibility can only be offered by the financial situation of a state and by the budget of international payments, which budget today cannot support any further burden."

Referring to the credit of $50,000,000 which the government had arranged with the American firm of J. P. Morgan & Co., the finance minister asserted that it was not a debt and could not be transformed into a debt. He added, that the officials of the banks of emission handling the credit were covered by rigid instructions not to use more credit than can be covered immediately to avoid the risk of needing gold covering.

Signor Schanzer, former foreign minister, said that a creditor, when discussing the amount and method of debt payment must consider Italy's condition, adding: "Without a great windfall there would be no possibility of immediate payment."

He agreed with Senator Ricci in the necessity of obtaining a moratorium, permitting no discussion of the question of the payment of interest or amortization for ten years, after which there could be provision for wiping out the debts by installment payments over a long period. He declared that Italy eventually would have to return to the gold currency basis, but that internal and international conditions were not yet ripe. It was necessary to await considerable deflation and certain revaluation of the lire.

Referring to debts, Senator Ricci remarked:

"If we say we are rich, Senator Borah will want us to pay 100 per cent., if we say we are poor, the value of the lire suffers on the exchange market."

WOMAN MASQUERADING AS MAN WHEN SENTENCED

Albany, N. Y., June 6—Mary Agnes Mitchell of Lowell, Mass., who had been confined in the Albany county jail for two weeks as a man under the name of James F. Schaefer, today revealed that she had been masquerading when she was sentenced to from one and a half to five years in Dannemora prison on a charge of theft of an automobile. Official steps will be taken immediately to have the sentence changed, it was said, as Dannemora is exclusively a man's prison.

The woman, with Margaret McCann and Grace Schaefer, who posed as Miss Mitchell's wife, Fred Burnette and George Prince were arrested in Batavia two weeks ago for theft of an automobile.

COOLIDGE PREPARING FOR HIS TRIP TO MINNESOTA

Washington, June 5.—(A. P.)—Apparently unperturbed by the heat which has stifled Washington and the territory through which he will travel, President Coolidge went ahead today with plans for his Minnesota trip, which will take him away from the Capitol from mid-afternoon tomorrow until Wednesday morning.

With the temperature on the street soaring above 100 degrees, the president put in a full day in his office, dressed in a dark gray woolen suit. He had doffed his vest but otherwise was attired as usual.

Railroad officials who will be in charge of the president's train on its 30-hour run from Washington to St. Paul, while hopeful that there will be a material drop in temperature, are making arrangements to give the official party all relief possible in the event the heat wave continues.

Traveling on a special section of regular trains with accommodations limited to members of his party, the president will have the seclusion he preferred to forego last winter, when he traveled to Chicago, sharing accommodations with the public.

Arrival at St. Paul is scheduled for shortly after 8 o'clock Sunday night and the President and Mrs. Coolidge will go to the home of Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg, who will make the trip with them, to be overnight guests.

EMERGENCY MEASURES IN NEW YORK FOR HEAT WAVE

New York, June 5—Drained of resistance by 120 hours of unbroken equatorial weather, New York's sweltering millions tonight welcomed even the few degrees of relief afforded by the disappearance of a brazen sun.

Holding consistently in the 90s, the temperature even in shaded parts of the city set records as the daylight hours passed until at 4 o'clock the weather bureau's thermometer registered 96 an advance of 5 degrees over the previous high for June 5, set in 1892.

The city automobiles prepared to take emergency measures for the relief of the congested districts as scores of business houses gave up the fight and announced a holiday over Saturday.

Transit companies were ready for a riotous rush out of town as the business day closed and bus lines to adjacent resorts reported capacity patronage. Railroad stations were crowded from early afternoon with fugitives of the congested city, seeking the comparative coolness of the suburbs.

Although few deaths directly attributable to the heat wave were recorded during the day a wave of prostrations crowded the city hospitals during the afternoon and ambulances of every institution were busy attending those not sufficiently overcome to require hospitalization. The incomplete police record listed between 30 and 40 heat prostrations.

A group of chorus girls after an arduous rehearsal on top of a sun drenched building, donned one-piece bathing suits and dashed to the pool at Columbus Circle. They had caused a crush of sight-seers before they were dispersed by the police, one being arrested charged with disorderly conduct. At every point where flowing water was available street urchins gamboled.

City magistrates sacrificing dignity to comfort permitted court attendants, spectators and prisoners to remove coats, collars and neckties. A number of schools were closed during the day.

101° Degrees in Jersey City.

Jersey City, June 5.—(A. P.)—F. K. Pearso, of the United States weather bureau here, announced today that a temperature of 101 degrees was recorded in Jersey City, and Plainfield, N. J., at 3:45 o'clock this afternoon.

Three Deaths in Philadelphia.

Philadelphia, June 5.—(A. P.)—The heat wave reached its height today at 3:45 p. m., when a temperature of 100.2 degrees was registered by the U. S. weather bureau. This shatters all records for the month of June during the fifty-four years of the local bureau's history.

Nine deaths from heat and many prostrations were reported during the day, making a total of fifteen deaths since last Monday.

INSTRUCTED AGAINST HAVING GLOOMY FUNERAL

Little Rock, Ark., June 5—Mrs. Margaret T. Rose, widow of U. M. Rose, former ambassador to France, who died yesterday, left instructions that singers at her funeral sing in their natural voices. "I do not want my funeral to be gloomy," said a letter written shortly before her death. The letter, giving many details for the ceremony, asked that there be no eulogy. "The world thinks me much better than I am," she wrote.

Pews on one side of the pulpit are to be reserved for negroes the letter directed. "The negroes have done much for me; have waited on me and kept me from drudgery all of my life and I have never received an act of unkindness from one of them."

She closed by urging her children who were at her bedside not to "mope and stay at home," but to "go out and brighten the world."

Riffian Forces In Violent Offensive

Determined Attack Made on Both Sides of the Fighting Front in Morocco.

Paris, June 5.—(A. P.)—The Riffian forces of the tribal leader Abd-El-Krim took the offensive in violent manner on both sides of the fighting front in Morocco yesterday.

While Abd-El-Krim's choice storming troops were, according to an official communication, assailing in vain points along the Ourgha river, his sympathizers in Communist circles in France became extremely active in spreading literature inciting the soldiers to desert. Several arrests have been made.

The attack of Abd-El-Krim was so determined as to bring forth the opinion by French military authorities that he has not given up his original plan of reaching Fez. His immediate objective is Taounat, in the center of the front, and the key to the crossing of the Ouergha river. The tribesmen crossed the river at a few points; but the French succeeded in pushing back, and after a series of counter attacks some posts which the French had abandoned on the north side of the stream, were re-occupied.

The negotiations between France and Spain, as regards events in Morocco, are going on favorably.

It was 48 hours ago that the physicians first reported Secretary Weeks making slow but steady improvement out of the critical condition in which he had been for a week. During the last two days it was reported that Mr. Weeks was taking nourishment and liquid more freely and that the nausea from which he had suffered had stopped.

Dr. Daniel Fiske Jones issued the bulletin this evening and it was said at the hospital that unless there is a sudden change he will not visit the patient again tonight.

PAINLEVE MIISTRY HAS SURVIVED FIRST CRISIS

Paris, June 5—The ministry of Premier Painleve today survived its first crisis. It was a short one, which seriously threatened a fatal termination and in the course of which Minister of Finance Caillaux took occasion again to declare that he intended to fund the French war debts as soon as possible.

The premier and M. Caillaux, in conference with disgruntled representatives of the four groups that form the government majority in the chamber, were hotly pressed, especially by the socialists and the extreme radicals, who dislike the government's financial policy.

Germany's Default In Disarmament

Outlined in Detail in Note the Allied Powers Have Sent to Berlin.

London, June 5—Germany's failures to carry out the disarmament requirements of the Versailles treaty were outlined in detail in the note the allied powers have presented to Germany, the text of which was made public here today. The note was handed to Chancellor Luther in Berlin yesterday morning by Baron D'Aberson, the British ambassador, representing the council of ambassadors.

Germany must comply with an extensive list of rectifications and demands before the disarmament obligations of the peace treaty are considered fulfilled, justifying the evacuation of the first, or Cologne, zone of occupation in accordance with article 429 of the Versailles pact.

The chief of these demands includes radical modification of the Reichswehr general staff, reduction of the country's military forces to 100,000 men, and suppression of short-term enlistments. The military character of the security police must be abolished and the force itself reduced from 150,000 men to 150,000.

Wholesale destruction of industrial plants of the Krupps and a dozen other big concerns, which in their present state are held adaptable for the production of war material, is demanded.

The note itself is only a long document, but it is accompanied by long detailed annexes setting out in tables and in minutes details what the allies consider Germany's defaults, and the requirements which alone will justify the commencement of evacuation and the withdrawal of the allied control commission.

After referring to previous communications and the report of the control commission which established Germany's shortcomings, the note states the allied governments "consider it of capital importance to place in the foreground of their argument that the defaults unless promptly rectified would in the aggregate enable the German government eventually to reconstitute an army modelled on the principles of a nation in arms.

"This would be directly counter to the treaty of peace," continues the note, "under which the German army was to be used exclusively for the maintenance of internal order and for the control of the German frontier. It is this circumstance which, while it demonstrates the importance of each individual default, renders the total of these defaults so serious a menace to peace."

"It should be clearly realized that the breaches of the treaty thus specified constitute the most serious, but not the only evidence of Germany's non-fulfillment of this essential portion of the peace treaty."

GERMANY DISGUSTED OVER ALLIED DISARMAMENT NOTE

Berlin, June 5—Disgust mingled with ridicule and gloom, may be said to characterize the sentiments in German official quarters over the allied disarmament note.

Semi-official comments are candid, out of the critical condition in which he had been for a week. During the last two days it was reported that Mr. Weeks was taking nourishment and liquid more freely and that the nausea from which he had suffered had stopped, [illegible] so far as they are likely to produce fresh embarrassments in Germany's foreign relations.

Internally, the note is viewed as providing the nationalists with much welcome grist for their reactionary mills, and government leaders say that the prospects of negotiating a security past have been materially damaged.

For the time being, official quarters are confining their observations to informal discussions of the situation. The Luther government will take its time to draft a reply, and in all probability it will dissent from the note in such a manner that its various accusations will constitute subjects for individual treatment.

Next week the government will confer with the reichstag committee on foreign relations and with the premiers of the federated states.

PRESIDENT SMITH OF YARN MILLS COMMITTED SUICIDE

Troy, N. Y., June 5—George E. Smith, president of the Smith yarn mills here, today ended his own life by shooting himself in the right temple when in his office at the mills.

WEALTHY PHILANTHROPIST SHOT DEAD IN NEW YORK.

New York, June 5—Shot down in the sight of scores crowding the lobby of his William street building, Thomas L. Leeming, wealthy importer, philanthropist and prominent in civic and artistic circles of Brooklyn, died today a few minutes later at a hospital.

Charles L. Miller, giving Philadelphia as his home, was charged with the shooting. He expressed no regret when informed of his victim's death, the police said, but declared "if the gun hadn't jammed, I'd have emptied the whole chamber into him."

The motive for the killing—one of the most sensational in New York during many months—had not been clearly established. But, according to the police, Miller claimed to be the illegitimate son of Leeming's deceased brother and had made repeated efforts to obtain money from the importer.

Before dying, Leeming is understood to have said he befriended Miller four years ago, but despite that the youth had extorted $7,500 from him last December.

The attention of a number of persons waiting in the William street lobby was attracted by the entrance of the two men, apparently engaged in argument, with Leeming denying the other's importunings. The importer finally turned to an attendant and asked that Miller be prevented from following him, explaining that he had been bothered for several months by the man.

As Lee started to enter an elevator, Miller's right hand, still concealed in his coat pocket, rose to a level with the other's shoulders and three shots spat forth. Leeming stumbled and his assailant dashed from the building pursued by several of the crowd and two armed express messengers, who captured him within a few blocks.

For years head of the Brooklyn Academy of Music, Leeming was intimately identified with the central activities of that and allied organizations in Brooklyn. He was senior member of the drug and perfume importing firm of Thomas Leeming and Co., reputedly wealthy. Among his other company and was considered indirect connections were the Nestle Food company, Leeming, Hicks Co., Ltd., of Montreal, and the Dime Savings bank.

John McQuade, treasurer of the Thomas Leeming company, told the police of taking a check for $7,500 to Leeming in a Broadway hotel last December. When he arrived at the hotel, he said he found Leeming and Miller in a room before a stack of cards on a table. When he asked Leeming about the check the next day, McQuade said, the former replied:

"I paid that money under durress. That man had a gun in his pocket and was aiming it at me even while you were in the room."

McQuade said he asked Leeming why he did not report the case to the police.

"I would create too much scandal", he quoted Leeming as saying.

W. H. Kaufmann accompanied the singing of the children and Miss Ethel Popple accompanied Mrs. Murphy in her solo. Cars were furnished the committee gratis for the veterans—William Downing, for transportation of speakers; John Lewis, for guests; Edward B. Clarke, for decorating graves in St. Thomas' cemetery, Rob-bins' and Kennedy cemetery. Mrs. Du-pont expressed the committee's appre-ciation to everyone who contributed in anw way toward the successful outcome of this patriotic observance.

Nearly every home along the line of march on Saturday morning was decorated with the national colors.

A large number of former residents of the town were back home for this annual event.

A large crowd of local fans went to Groton Sunday, and rooted strongly for their team, Mgr. Bray is taking the boys to Plainfield Sunday, and expects to bring home the bacon.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Burgess, of New York, were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Kaufmann.

Mrs. Henry Kaufmann was a recent visitor in New York.

ANTICIPATING GOOD SEASON FOR BEES

This year there will be a good hon-ey season, provided the bees are at their maximum strength when the real, big honey flow comes, which will be the first or second week in June. The thing all beekeepers should do now is to make sure that the bees have plenty of stores and are given every chance possible to be prepared for field work when the haryest is on. The bees used a surplus amount of feed because they are rearing a big fami-ly at this season of the year and when cold, rainy days come they cannot go to the field for food. The next step is to see that all queens are lay-ing and have plenty of room—let them have two brood chambers. Latter on, one of these can be used as a super. A young queen with plenty of food is not very likely to send out a swarm.

The bees should not be forced to do much heavy house cleaning such as carrying out accumulated mater-ial on floor boards, and cleaning too many damp, mouldy frames. A good, strong colony can do this but it re-quires too much of their time to do what can be done for them in a mo-ment's time. All poor combs or those filled with drone cells should be re-placed by new ones. It doesn't pay to let the bees have them. Make sure all old, empty hives are not left open—keep them closed, not only to guard against mice and stray bees, but to prevent your own bees from entering them. These old hives are dangerous sources of bee diseases.

Small, weak colonies, at this time of season, should have very small en-trances, only large enough for two or three bees to pass in and out at a time. For strong colonies, open the entrance wide. All weak colonies should be united with stronger colo-nies. If you have weak colonies, unite them into one, but before doing this, make sure which is the yonger and better queen, as the united colony must have but one queen. Don't re-queen at this time of year, unless nec-essary. Better unite colonies where there is a good queen than try to re-queen now. With the main honey flow only three weeks away, one cannot af-ford to upset hives now by re-queen-ing. This should be done during July or August. The big job now is to help the queen build up her family of field workers ready for the real honey flow, which seems appearent early in June.

LET THE LAN MULCH ITSELF

Lawn movers have been called into action already, due to the early spring and grass needs cutting in large sec-tions of the country. Do not delay too long with the first cutting or there is trouble ahead. In the early spring the growth of the grass will be uneven and tufty in most lawns, due to an uneven distribution of plant food and trimming will be necessary to estab-lish a level sward.

Rolling after a soaking rain is a requisite for a good lawn. It is a good plan for several neighbors to go into partnership in buying a roller to serve them all, as its use is limited to spring and fall, to a large extent, and if a heavy enough one to do good work is secured, it will need several neighbors to work at once to oper-ate it.

Do not rake up the first few cuttings of grass but leave the clippings on the lawn. The spring rains will work them around the roots of the grass to act as a mulch when the scorching days come when this mulch of dead grass will be helpful in keeping the soil from dry-ing out and the grass turning brown. It will also save some watering and will keep the moisture in the soil from evaporating as rapidly as when the grass is raked clean.

Usually enough clippings will be left even after a container is attached to the mower in the first three or four mowings to answer the purposes of mulch. If the grass seems backward this is a good time to give a sprink-ling of nitrate of soda. The grass will show the effect of this fertilizer by vigorous growth and dark-green color.

Fill in any hollows that may appear with good soil and seed it over. This is great weather for the germination of grass seed and the bare spots will be covered and part of the lawn by June if seed now—but don't forget the roller. A velvet sward is well nigh impossible without this leveling and firming process each spring.

CROPS UNDER THE SOIL

Root crops are favorites in the veg-etable garden, because they require no particular skill, and anybody is reasonably sure of getting at least a fair crop. Also, they can be planted at almost any time until midsummer, with few exceptions, and produce a crop.

Carrots, beets, radishes, turnips and oyster plant or salsify constitute the chief root crops. The onion might be added to this class, although its prod-uct is a bulb and not strictly speak-ing a root. They all want a cool soil for their success, and to add this re-quirement to the garden deep spading or plowing is needed for the best suc-cess. This lets the roots get down where it is cool without difficulty. The root crops also need to get away to a flying start, and to be kept going to make tender vegetables when it is time to pull them.

In order to start them quickly a fertilizer with a good supply of ni-trogen in it should be given to them. Nitrate of soda fills the bill, and a sprinkling along the rows, lightly, and not coming in contact with the leaves, will start them on their way with a rush.

Although the root crops are capa-ble of fighting weeds better than other types of vegetables, they cannot be ex-pected to do their best if they are obliged to do so. Hoeing and keep-ing the soil stirred is the secret of good root crops, as it prevents evapo-ration too rapidly, keeps the soil cool and maintains the best growing condi-tions. Many gardeners are accustomed to let their carrots and turnips run to weeds when the weather gets hot, trusting that the roots will hold their own.

This method will cut down the size of the root materially. A wheel hoe run up and down the row will keep down the weeds with a minimum of exertion. After the weeds are cut with the cul-tivator or hoe blades, the rake teeth tools can be put on and the soil may be kept stirred very easily and pre-vent a fresh growth of weeds. Try good cultivation on the carrot patch and note the difference when it is time to pull them. Root crops must be rig-orously trimmed to give proper space for growth to succeed.

STARTING THE CABBAGE PATCH

An event of the greatest importance in the life of the cabbage is transplant-ing it. On the care taken with this step depends to a large extent the success of the cabbage. Care must be taken in moving the cabbage plant from the seed bed or seed box not to injure the root system. If the roots are broken in taking it up it is best to throw the plant away. Take up as much of the root system as possible and place it carefully in the hole pre-pared for it, water it gently and firm the soil about it, setting the plant deeper in its new soil than it was in the seed bed, about half way up to the leaves.

When the roots are injured in trans-planting it may be a week or ten days before the cabbage really begins to grow and this check stunts it, and it will never be as goo as a plant moved with its root system intact.

Cabbage needs continuous growth to do well, and in setting out the plants this month be careful not to break the roots. It is a very hardy plant, and is often handled carelessly because of this fact. Select a cloudy day or just before a rain threatens to transplant the cabbages, if possible. Otherwise it will be necessary to shade them with strawberry boxes, papers or shingles stuck on the south side of the plant for a day or two until it takes hold.

Avoid transplanting on a hot day.

There are eight sections of the cab-bage tribe, the Wakefield and Win-ningstadt group, the Copenhagen Mar-ket, Flat Dutch or Drumhead, Savoy, Danish Ballhead, Alpha, Volga and Red Cabbage groups. The Wakefield and Winningstadt group which in-cludes cabbages with pointed heads, is the early-crop group. Jersey Wake-field is a typical example of it. The plants of this group mature earlier than the others.

Every cabbage does not need as much space as the later types, and plants may be set 12 to 18 inches apart in rows 24 to 36 inches apart. The distance should be regulated by the moisture conditions.

CLIMATE AND SOIL

Vegetable growing success depends in great measure upon the condition of the soil in the garden as well as on the climate. Although weather fore-casting as a science has advanced rap-idly, it is impossible to guess far enough ahead to plan a vegetable gar-den on forecasts. But by preparation of the soil the rigors of climate, par-ticularly the hot, parching dog days, may be ameliorated. This can be done by adding humus to the soil.

Start at once, saving all the vege-table vines that have served their use-fulness and produced crops to dig in-to the soil. Particularly save pea and bean vines and stake out some obscure corner to stack them up as the time for crop picking comes around. If you have no further use for the soil where the early vegetables come out, sow it to clover or rye, and spade it under this fall. This will help to make the soil cool and add humus.

Light, sandy soils need constant ap-plications of vegetable matter. Some of the finest vegetable gardens are on "built up" soil, sand patches to which has been added yearly stable manure when it was available, followed in these later days by all the refuse veg-etables matter that could be accumu-lated, grass clipping, pulled weeds potato peelings and old vegetable tops.

With this supply always in mind as the season advances, the compost heap will be under way right now with the early lawn clippings to be added to by pea vines and bean tops later on. But while this is waiting, keep the soil in the vegetable garden stirred. It will be a light task after the original hoe-ing to down the early crop of weed. A stirring with a garden rake every few days will loosen the roots of new-ly sprouted weeds and keep them from getting a start.

The best time for this task is after a rain and as soon as the soil is dry enough to work. This is the time when weed seed jumps into life. From early summer until September, the main task is keeping the soil as cool as possible by cultivation and wa-tering when needed to counteract the broiling sun. The hose with the hoe is a great cooling factor.

USE SALT TO KILL NCOMMON BARBERRIES

Crushed rock salt is the best chemi-cal to use in killing the common bar-berry which spreads the black stem rust of cereals. Officials of the United States department of agriculture se-lected salt from more than 40 differ-ent chemicals as the most satisfac-tory for this purpose. The four prime requisites of a satisfactory chemical with which to kill barberries are cheapness, availability, effectiveness and a minimum of danger to adjacent plants and to grazing animals. In the final selection of chemicals for this purpose only 3 were found to be both cheap and effective. These are salt, sodium arsenite and kerosene.

Sodium arsenite is very effective but it is extremely poisonous to livestock. Because of this danger it is not rec-ommended for general use. Kerosene is cheap and effective but its action is slow. Barberries treated with ker-osene in the summer often are not dead until the beginning of the next sum-mer. Another great disadvantage in the use of kerosene is the difficulty experienced in transplanting it to the place of application.

Salt, preferably crushed salt or ice cream salt, seems to be ideal for the purpose as it is comparatively cheap and easily obtainable. It is very ef-fective. Ten pounds will kill a bush having a diameter of 12 inches at the base. Salt ordinarily is not poisonous to livestock, but overdoses of it have proved fatal to some animals, espec-ially hogs and poultry. Some pre-cautions must be observed, therefore, in the application of salt to barberries, to prevent any possibility of harm to livestock. If salt is applied to bushes growing in pastures, the cattle and horses should be properly salted be-forehand to insure that they are not salt-hungry when they are turned into the pasture. The salt applied where poultry and hogs have access should be well covered with stones, sticks and dirt.

In spite of the fact that salt is very satisfactory as a killer for barberries its use is not recommended in every instance. If the barberry to be killed is close to valuable plants or trees, it is advisable to dig it. Bushes or trees whose root systems intermingle with the root system of the barberry undoubtedly will be somewhat dam-aged by salt applied to the barberry.

The Japanese barberry does not spread stem rust and should not be destroyed.

USING FERTILIZERS IN THE GARDEN

Fertilizers for the garden produce results quite out of proportion to their cost. Crops may be grown without them. If one has a supply of that rap-idly disappearing article, well-rotted stable manure, fertilizers are not need-ed. But seldom is enough manure ob-tainable, and fertilizers are the best substitutes.

They are applied in small quantities to the surface of the soil, not dug in. They are available to the plants very quickly, and need to be close to the shallow roots. Apply them first after the garden has been spaded and raked smooth. Other applications should be made between the rows after cultivation. This applies to prepared ma-nures, such as sheep, cattle and poul-try, and to the mineral fertilizers as well. Care must be taken with all not to overdo for fear of burning the plants.

Three Elements Beneficial

There are three chemical elements proved to be beneficial to plant growth, and fertilizers are valued according to their content of these elements: Ni-trogen, usually in the form of ammo-nia; phosphates, and potash.

Nitrogen chiefly stimulates leaf growth; phosphates stimulate stem and stalk growth; potash, the develop-ment of fruits. These are general statements, because the knowledge of fertilizers and their effects is general; and it should be understood that no one can pretend to say exactly what each element does, or whether there are not other chemicals of benefit to plants.

The analysis of a commercial fer-tilizer is expressed in a formula of three numbers, each separated by a hyphen, as, for example: 5-8-7. The first number indicates the relative amount of nitrogen or ammonia con-tained in the mixture; the second, the relative amount of phosphates, and the third, the amount of potash. The best all-around fertilizer is one in which these elements are well balanced, as is the case in 5-8-6, or 4-8-6.

If for a particular crop it is desir-able that one element shall dominate, then mixtures for that purpose can be obtained, reading: 3-12-4, or 2-12-2, for example.

Specials for Leaf Crops

Home gardeners can seldom bother to use special fertilizers for particular crops, except in the case of leaf crops, such as lettuce and cabbage.

In this case, nitrogen is the element needed, and it is best found in nitrate of soda, the cheapest and best form of nitrogen. It acts quickly and is valuable as a general stimulant, to ap-ply to any crop which seems to be growing slowly and needs a tonic. It is also excellent for lawns, and for fruit trees. If will burn foliage, if allowed to touch it, but may be dis-solved in water and applied with out danger.

With nitrate of soda and a well bal-anced mixed fertilizer, in which the potash content is up with the others, the home gardener is well prepared to get the best growth possible out of his vegetable patch. He will find it very interesting to experiment with fertil-izer on his flowers, to increase the size and brilliancy of their blossoms.

BORDEAUX MIXTURE

Bordeaux mixture is used for the control of blight or rust on many dif-ferent crops such as potatoes, toma-toes, etc. It is also used for the con-trol of wildfire in the tobacco beds. It may be bought to be used as a dust or a spray. It one wishes to buy the ingredients and mix it as a spray he can do so by securing blue vitrol or copper sulphate and lime.

For general crops the 5-5-50 mix-ture is best, that is, 5 pounds of blue vitrol, 5 pounds of lime and 50 gallons of water. The blue vitrol should be dissolved in a wooden container as it will destroy metal containers. It should be placed in a sack and half submerged in water the night before using, or dissolved in a small amount of hot water, then cooled before mix-ing. The lime should be stone lime. If hydrated lime is used, 7 pounds should be taken rather than 5 pounds. The blue vitriol and lime should be mixed separately, then run together in a third container at the same time.

It is always a severe strain on the angelic qualities of a woman when she has to use her wings to dust the fur-niture.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Big Feature Moving Pictures at Y. M. C. A. Sunday

The thrilling account in the Bible of The Fall of Jerusalem will be por-trayed on the screen in moving pic-tures at the local Y. M. C. A. tomorrow (Sunday) afternoon and on the fol-lowing Monday at 4 o'clock, daylight; the first half tomorrow and the last half on June 14th. The story is most fascinating and interesting: The Baby-lonian hosts are encamped without the city walls, while within the city the Court life moves on with gaiety and splendor dominated by the queen who rules Zedekiah, the weak King of Ju-dah. There are circles of intrigue on every hand; plottings within the pal-ace and disheartened people in the streets. The common people are pin-ched with hunger, but to dock the hea-then queen with more jewels, the king's treasurer increases the price of bread. The Prophet Jeramiah is the only one who dares to put the needs of the people and the sins of the court plainly before the king. The queen plots against his life, but her plots only meet with failure, and Jeremiah stands firm-untouched and unafraid. The Babylonians attack the city and are defeated. The king takes courage and the gaiety of the court life continues. Jeremiah meanwhile comforts the peo-ple and warns the king, but the wick-ed queen still holds the balance of power. The queen secures a decree allowing human sacrifice to Baal. Jeremiah pours water upon the at-tar fires and rescues the children about to be sacrificed, and for his interfer-ence he is condemned and ordered thrown into an abandoned well to per-ish. These and other thrilling scenes will be shown by the movine pictures in the big gymnasium. The picture story is very true to the Bible ac-count of the great fall of the great city.

The expense to produce this wonder-ful picture was enormous, and to see it is a real privilege and rare opport-unity. The public is invited, the children must be accompanied by par-ents. The doors will be open at 3:30 o'clock.

Bijou Theatre

It isn't often that you can see a novel on the screen only a short time after its publication in book form, but Metro-Goldwyn offers Married Flirts, screen version of Mrs. Paramor, Louis Joseph Vance's latest novel, which is coming to the Bijou theater on Sun-day for a run of three days.

It is the first production made for this organization by Robert G. Vig-nola, who directed such pictures, as When Knighthood Was in Flower, Yo-landa, and many other successes. Pauline Frederick plays the title role, and is said to do the best work of her career. Then there are Conrad Na-gel, Mae Busch, Huntly Gordon, Alice Hollister and others to make this film stand out as one of the most worth-while of the season.

Y. P. Jubilee Rally.

The Eastern Connecticut Branch W. B. M. will hold a jubilee rally for young people over fourteen years of age, Saturday, June 6th, at 3 o'clock in the parish house of Park church, Norwich. The programme will con-sist of dramatics by various organ-izations and an address by an in-teresting speaker.

The young people have been asked to bring a basket supper so that all may enjoy a pleasant social time to-gether.

Recital by Pupils of Mr. Knox

On Friday evening, June 12th, Ben-jamin M Knox, teacher of [illegible] will present several of his pupils in a recit-al of solos, duets, and quartettes, to which the public of Norwich and vi-cinity is cordially invited. The Academy orchestra will give its twentieth annual concert on Wed-nesday evening, June 10, at Slater Me-morial hall.

This concert promises to be every bit as good and perhaps better than previous concerts presented by this organization.

The solo numbers on the program will be unusual and in themselves will more than justify the price of admis-sion. From the orchestra, Miss Ruth Drechsler and Henry Bryman have been selected for solo numbers, and by fortunate circumstances two high school girls from Hartford—the Misses Ruth Garber and Betty O'Donnell—have been secured for three dances of unusual merit.

Tickets for admission are 50c each, and may be secured from members of the orchestra or at Cranston's Store.

Careful observation on the part of the produc-ers during its run of two solid years in New York, proved that not one in a thousand among the half million people who saw The Cat and Canary had even the slighest cue as to the

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

It does not yet appear that any plan is developing in Danielson or other towns along the local branch of the New Haven road for conferences with railroad officials relative to changes in the running time of the boat trains. The announcement that the morning boat train will run to carry mail, milk and such relieved some of the tension over the matter. Business and manufacturing interests generally are not so much interested in an early passenger train service from the south, or, if they are, do not say much about it.

The change in the south-bound evening boat train running time is the thing that looms large just now. If, as advance announcements indicate, the boat train is to go south from Danielson at 4:48 p. m. standard time, that means the closing of the last mail of the day here not later than 4:25 p. m. That time limitation is going to create a great deal of difficulty for many concerns and individuals for approximately 75 per cent of the Danielson mail for New York and points west each day goes out on the evening boat train, the mail now closing at 6:30. Due to the very nature of many business enterprises it is practically impossible to get the final letters for the day out in time to catch a mail closing at 4:25. Yet this is the proposition that Danielson will have to meet beginning a little more than a week hence.

Plans for the local campaign for the American Legion Endowment Fund are being perfected and the drive will be launched within the next few days. Sidney W. Bard has accepted the chairmanship of the citizens' committee and Alfred L. Reed will head the committee of ex-service men. The campaign will be under the leadership of the commander of Leo G. F. Homme Post, Joseph F. Burton, as general chairman. The organization will be finished by choice of captains, under whom the teams of canvassers will work.

A quota of $2,690 has been assigned to the Legion here, to be secured in the territory over which the local post has jurisdiction, including Killingly, Brooklyn and Wauregan. Donations to the endowment fund are accepted in cash or in pledges covering a period of ten months or any shorter interval.

This campaign is a nationwide drive to secure $8,000,000 to guarantee for all time the adequate financing of the Legion's rehabilitation work. Some states have gone over the top and ended their work. Connecticut started June 1 and the Danielson men hope to be among the first to reach their full quota.

The reason for this drive is two-fold. The American Legion takes care of thousands of disabled war veterans and is also trying to furnish a good home for every orphan of a World War soldier. The United States government is doing all in its power to aid these victims of war, but it is limited in the service which it is able to render. The efforts of the terrible days of 1918 are still appearing in apparently healthy men and there are thousands who need the temporary relief and, permanent cure, which the Legion strives to give. Today there are 5,000 war orphans penalized by loss of childhood privileges and opportunities because their fathers made up the growing casualty list. Hundreds of them are emergency critical cases needing immediate care. The American Legion promises these children a proper home and a real opportunity to get ahead in life.

President Coolidge is chairman of the honorary committee of the fund. Mrs. Coolidge and General Charles G. Dawes, together with a long list of nationally known men and women, are members of the committee. Among those who have heartily endorsed the drive are Otto H. Kahn, Major General John A. Lejeune, commandant of the Marine Corps, William Cardinal O'Connell, archbishop of Boston, William Green, president of the American Federation of Labor, Frank T. Hines, director of the U. S. Veterans' Bureau, Mrs. Anthony Wayne Cook, president general of the D. A. R. and John Barton Payne, chairman of the American Red Cross.

At Dayville, the Assawaga Woolen company is engaged in laying about 1,500 feet of new concrete walk along the mill frontage and, easterly of the bridge, along other property of the company. When this walk is completed there will be a continuous stretch of fine sidewalk from near St. Joseph's church property to the very center of Dayville.

The Service Battery, 102 F. A. will not on July 5, when other units of the leave here July 7, for Tobyhanna, Pa., regiment start on the journey for 15 days' field service. The Service Battery has duties to perform that takes it away ahead of the bulk of the regiment.

"This car is driven only from the left front seat" reads a nifty little sticker that has made its appearance in town and is intended for use on automobiles.

Boxing fans here are boosting Commissioner Frank Murphy of the boxing commission for appointment as the sole commissioner who will have charge of boxing in Connecticut under a recent enactment of the legislature. The appointment is to be made by Governor Trumbull and there are various candidates.

Sleeping out of doors—in hammocks, summer houses or on veranda couches—has been adopted by scores of Danielson people who are finding the heat almost unendurable.

The wedding of Miss Beatrice LaFrance of Central Village, daughter of County Commissioner and Mrs. Urgele LaFrance, and Attorney Louis A. Woisard of Danielson is to take place Monday.

W. Irving Bullard will sail Wednesday for the general congress of the International Chamber of Commerce at Brussels. His son, Edward Jacobs Bullard will make the trip with him.

Orient lodge, K. of P., has a memorial service planned for next Monday evening. This service will be open to friends of members of the lodge.

The coming week the state armory will be a very busy place, with all the preparations underway for the textile products exhibit opening next Thursday under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association. About two score booths will be erected and much other work done.

McGregor corps, W. R. C., will be represented next Wednesday at a reception to be given at Willimantic in honor of Mrs. Maud S. Deming, department president.

Next Thursday afternoon at the town hall the grammar school graduating exercises are to be held, admission being by ticket. A few tickets for those especially interested are available from Supt. William E. Parker of Killingly's schools.

Luther C. Dix of Springfield was a visitor with friends in Danielson on Friday.

Myriads of little flies with a bite like a wasp have appeared as one feature of the heat wave. The pests seemingly bred of the streets and byways.

A number of Danielson young people who are students at colleges are expected at their homes here the coming week.

On the afternoon and evening of June 18, the Church Army Crusaders are to hold four services in Danielson, some of the services in the open air, and a service at St. Alban's church. The crusaders recently arrived here from England for a tour of New England and New York.

From one viewpoint, these are the happy days for the icemen. They are handling a remarkable rush of business. And in doing it they are getting up around four o'clock in the morning and working until after dark, which is not so pleasant.

FIRE HOSE TURNED ON MILLS TO REDUCE HEAT OF WALLS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Danielson, June 5—Wilting under the tropic heat that had sustained a five days' drive, hundreds of workers in this territory either were off duty Friday, or producing at greatly reduced efficiency. No heat wave in years has been so long sustained or so devastating to vitality and energy. Some manufacturing concerns entirely suspended operations, due to the extreme heat.

Thermometers in departments of some mills in the town of Killingly showed temperature ranges from 113 to 118, the highest records touched in many years. In some instances fire hose was brought out and streams of water directed against the brick or stone walls of the mills in a successful attempt to drive down the temperature inside the plants. Reductions of as much as 10 and 12 degrees were obtained through this system of drenching the walls until the bricks were literally saturated with water.

It would be interesting to know the aggregate shrinkage of the weight of the people of the town of Killingly under the stress of the heat wave. There are nearly 10,000 of them. Few are those who have not felt they were experiencing a continuous Turkish bath since Monday and many of them have been almost willing to believe they were just melting away. Many have lost pounds in weight and the total shrinkage in poundage for the townspeople must run into tons.

There are scores of people who have been subsisting for the past 48 hours on things no more substantial than sodas or milk shakes or other drinks of that sort.

Business has suffered through the fact that many people have postponed all but urgent activities and buying many lines of merchandise does not come within that category.

Bathing places in this territory have been mobbed the past few days by the great numbers seeking relief from the heat through a swim.

Noon Saturday will bring relief from work at least for thousands in the territory who have carried on through it all. Looking over the days since Monday, the heat wave rates the most trying in years. Yet up to Friday afternoon no really serious cases of illness had been reported as due to the unusual weather.

PUTNAM

The outdoor meeting of the Woman's Missionary Society of the Second Congregational church is to be held at the home of Mrs. W. R. Barber on June 9.

Sunday there will be an Institute at Woodstock Congregational church under the auspices of District No. 3, Windham County Sunday School Association. It is expected that a delegation from Putnam will attend.

The Ladies' Aid Society of the Methodist church met at the home of Mrs. Perry on School street, Thursday afternoon.

The Women's committee of Danielson has turned over to the Woman's Board and to the Hospital Guild of the Day Kimball hospital $428.05 which is the amount collected in that town by the recent canvass for the hospital.

The amount is gratifyingly large and will be greatly appreciated by the friends of that institution. The Danielson people were found very ready to respond to such an appeal and the sums collected range from ten cents up to $100, there being one for the latter amount given by the Killingly Worsted Company.

At the annual meeting of the judges of the superior court the following court officials for this county were reappointed:

WESTERLY

In the Friday morning session of third district court before Judge Michael J. Turano there were no new cases entered in civil suits and the civil calendar was not called, as most of the cases had been continued from the previous week to next Friday.

Clerk M. Walter Flynn, Jr., read the following docket:

Bertha M. Cooke vs. E. Alston Blackler. Ready.

E. R. Sweet vs. Daniel Jackson. Ready.

Daniel Jackson, truck garden and chicken farmer off Potter Hill road, was called to the stand by Judge Turano to know why he had made no effort to pay a judgment rendered against him. The defendant a colored farmer, said that he would begin payment at the end of the month as soon as his garden stuff was marketed. That was the reply that was received last year, and year before, on the collection of the account, interrupted Attorney Roche. "but either the season was bad and the market good or else the market was poor and the season good—not a cent has been paid." Judge Turano directed the clerk to enter up an order for the defendant to start weekly payments of $5 beginning June 27th and through September until all costs are paid. "Who'll I pay it to, Judge?" Mr. Roche said the judge. "Congratulate you, Mr. Roche, on your judgment," said Mr. Jackson as he stepped down from the stand, and passing out of court room. "Good morning, gentlemen!"

Not so pleasing a termination had the second case, Emanuel Granda, 32, a Spanish young man, was arraigned on complaint of Chief of Police Thomas E. Brown, that on June 5th "he did beat and wound" his wife, Rosie. The couple were married last May by Justice Turano and the services of an interpreter were required to explain the seriousness of the charge against him. Defendant pleaded guilty. A plea of not guilty was directed by the judge and Town Solicitor Ferguson told the court that the Westerly police were called to the home of the defendant on High street after 2 o'clock that Friday morning, when the wife was so beaten up with a chair that she was unable to appear in court that morning.

A knife had been secured by Granda with which, it was claimed, he threatened his wife and more serious results might have followed if neighbors had not intervened.

Granda told the court that his wife had come in late four nights running and when he had remonstrated, the quarrel followed. Judge Turano said that it did not give him a right to beat up his wife and sentenced him to one year in Providence county jail and if an appeal was taken bonds were to be furnished in the sum of $1,000.

Harold W. Chapman, 20, pleaded guilty to operating a motorcycle in a fast and reckless manner, June 3rd, on Oak street. Officer Curtin, Solicitor Ferguson told the court, was with Cyril Spargo on his way to investigate an accident on the Bradford road when the defendant passed them and although the horn and police whistle were sounded, the motorcycle was not overtaken until Burden's pond was reached. Chapman informed the court that he did not know there was an officer in the machine following, the main offence according to the solicitor being the fifty to fifty-eight miles an hour rate he was traveling along the Oak street section, where many children are residents. He was fined $5 and costs.

John Hearn, 25, on complaint of Frank H. Brown was charged with the operation of an automobile in Ashaway, April 4th, without having a license from the state board of public roads. He was fined $26 and costs.

The remainder of the session was occupied with the trial of the civil suit, Bertha M. Cooke of 2 Euclid avenue, Providence, vs. E. Alston Blackler, in which damages were laid at $100 on an alleged breach of contract in which defendant was said to have agreed to paint a residence on East avenue for $75. Bertha M. Cooke, the first witness, testified that April 14th, a contract was made to paint the house, for which she was to purchase the paint. There was a misunderstanding relative to color and later, on solicitation of defendant, she had paid him $50. Later the painting was completed by Leo C. Nye, the amount of his contract being $80 when defendant had stated that he could not complete the job.

Leo C. Nye testified to the amount of work done by him and work completed by Blackler. The plaintiff was represented by Attorney John Ferguson, Jr. E. Alston Blackler, the defendant, placed on the stand by his attorney, Samuel H. Davis identified letters received by him from the plaintiff. There was much discussion between the attorneys as to the admission of the letters. A plea in setoff for $47.80 was allowed by plaintiff. Later when it was found that the case could not be finished, Attorney Davis was directed to file his plea in writing and the case was continued to Friday, June 26th.

A particularly unpleasant mishap was that which befell a driver of one of the fleet of Ford cars, which drew up on Railroad avenue, near the Ford station Friday noon. The driver stepped on the cover to a sidewalk cesspool at the corner of the Ford block, which tipped with him, allowing both legs to drop into the full receptacle. He was assisted by his companions from his unpleasant situation. The cesspool in question, where autos are washed, overflows and crossing the sidewalk runs into the street gutter. On other occasions it settles back and the mud collecting above the cover hides the danger. This cesspool is one of the contributing elements to the unsanitary conditions which have been a cause for frequent complaints to the Westerly health officer, Dr. S. C. Webster, and even to Rhode Island state health authorities. A public jitney stand is located just below this point, at the junction of Railroad avenue and Canal street.

Recorded in the office of the Westerly town clerk appear the following real estate transfers:

June 2. Susan A. Vose to Ronald C. and Elva B. Dove a tract of land on the east side of Benefit street. Susan A. Vose to Santo C. and Theresa Negrelli a tract of land on the south side of Granite street, Thorpe and Trainer, Inc., to James Pucci, of Bradford lot No. 80 S. at Pleasant View beach on the south side of Atlantic avenue. Flore Altomare to Natale Gabrielle, two lots, one with buildings and improvements on the west side of Pierce street and a second lot with a cellar foundation on a right of way thereto.

June 3. Genevieve W. Canfield to Maynard Land company a partial release of mortgage. Demenico De Cristofaro, of Bristol, R. I., to Andrea Sommatino three tracts of land or lots Nos. 62, 63 and 64, Liberty Park plat. Maynard Land company to William G. Spargo and C. Irene Spargo lot No. 67, Melrose Heights. Cottrell of 103 Canal street, who was struck Wednesday afternoon by the auto-truck operated by Frank Costanza, knocked to the gutter sustaining serious injuries, is reported as improving at the home of her parents. Her injuries required four stitches to close a cut on her right side, two teeth were knocked out and numerous cuts, bruises and scratches are on the child's face, legs and side together with a bad cut on the right forearm.

The accommodation train due at Westerly station of the New Haven railroad at 5:10 o'clock, westbound, Friday morning, came in on the east-bound track next to the station on account of a long freight on the regular track. This arrangement was timely for a sudden shower at the time would have soaked the passengers, baggage and express matter as there is little protection on the west-bound platform. With the completion of the new driveway into the station yard to the westbound track shelter of some sort will be almost a necessity.

GRANTS DIVORCES IN FIVE UNCONTESTED SUITS

Five uncontested divorces were granted and decision was reserved in one case by Judge Isaac Wolfe in the superior court here Friday morning.

In the suit brought by Joseph C. Platz, of New London, special agent and New London district manager of the Standard Oil Co., of New London, Judge Wolfe took the papers and reserved decision. Among the papers was a stipulation relative to the custody of the two children of the couple, entered into between Mr. Platz and his wife following the institution of the divorce action.

The suit was brought on grounds of desertion, Mr. Platz claiming that his wife's aversion to New London, being responsible for her refusing to live with him there. He testified that he had seen his wife once in four years, that occasion being when she came to visit him. At that time, according to his testimony, he sought an apartment in New London, but none located suited her, and she returned to New York, after telling him that she couldn't live in a country town, and that there was no opportunity for the children here. Since that time, he claimed all requests for her to come to New London had met with emphatic refusal.

Roy W. Benson, of New London, was granted the divorce he asked for from Alice Maynard Benson on the ground of adultery since Nov. 27, 1922. They were married July 29, 1919. The husband testified to his wife living with another man at his home as man and wife, while he was working and plying at his trade of marine engineer. For two years, it is alleged, this kept up, until in 1924, there came a time, he said, when he learned that his wife had given birth to a child, which he claimed was not his. The other man paid all of the hospital bills and other bills for her. Mr. and Mrs. Harry Newbrey, neighbors, living at 181 Howard street, New London, told of Mrs. Benson and the "other man", his identity not revealed, living together as man and wife. Asked how they knew so much about this, Mr. Newbrey admitted that, they were "friendly neighbors," and many times he went into the Benson home and found Mrs. Benson and the other man in there. Mrs. Newbrey told the court that Mrs. Benson had told her of the expected birth of the baby.

Divorce from John J. Richardson, of Norwich, and the custody of a three year old daughter were granted to Sadie Casey Richardson, of Norwich. They were married in January 1920, and the divorce was for intolerable cruelty since their marriage date.

On the ground of intolerable cruelty since July 21, 1919, Mary Matri Archipoli, of Norwich, was given divorce from Charles Archipoli, of Huntington, L. I. They were married Sept. 21, 1918. She was given the custody of three children ranging in age from 7 to 1 year.

Chief George Linton of the Norwich police force and others testified both to witnessing some of the beatings she received from her husband and of seeing the results of the beatings.

Beulah Ennis Jones, of New London, was granted divorce from Robert C. Jones, now of parts unknown, and she is allowed change of name, to Beulah Ennis. They were married April 20, 1920 and the divorce was given for desertion May 14, 1921.

Mrs. Ennis testified that her husband deserted her because he was too lazy to work and support her.

Nellie Wheaton Clark, of Blackhall, was granted divorce from Frederick Clark, of Haddam, and change of name to Nellie Wheaton. They were married Nov. 3, 1909 and desertion was claimed, since Dec. 2, 1914. She said that her husband refused to support her, and for the past ten years she has been working at the Shore Line Hotel, Old Saybrook.

KEEP COOL!

From all sections the death list from the hot wave has been large. It has increased rapidly each successive day and the toll has been particularly heavy in the large centers and among those who were sick and did not have the strength to overcome the sweltering heat.

Up to June we have been having cool weather, in many instances below normal, and this was particularly true of May as a month. To be so quickly subjected to a radical change has made the situation all the worse. Hot weather has its effects, even if it comes gradually, but when it comes suddenly it operates like the fellow who gives quickly, it works doubly.

While there may be days during the summer that the thermometer goes higher than it has during the past three days, it is doubted if it will have as serious effect upon humanity as has been produced this week. It hasn't been necessary to work to swelter. The closing of schools and factories because of the heat is most unusual for the first week in June. Even those who have been longing for hot weather appreciate that they have got an overdose which calls for the prompt application of hot weather rules.

It may be next to the ridiculous to offer the advice to keep cool under such conditions with the thermometer reaching record points for this time of year, but it is certainly a time to keep as cool as possible. It is necessary to make the best of the hot wave, but most unwise to try to fight it.

Relief when it comes will be most acceptable, and yet it is just such conditions which make us realize how difficult it is to suit everybody. It also discloses that we must adjust ourselves to what is provided, and in doing that much care should be exercised to see that the hot wave is not made worse by getting excited over it and aggravating our own welfare. Keep as cool as you can till you get hardened to it, or until the break comes.

TRYING TO SAVE LIVES

Beginning with this month there opened a campaign on the part of the railroads to bring about a reduction in the number of crossing accidents. When it is realized that there were more than 2100 killed at such places last year it quickly becomes evident that the undertaking is a most commendable one.

This is not a new effort for it was carried out in 1924 and given much publicity. Because of the fact that there was a five per cent reduction in the number of grade crossing accidents that year it is regarded as a success and warranting the continuation of the plan this year, in the first few months of which an appreciable reduction in the number of killed and injured has been reported.

The campaign of the railroads has been to direct the attention of the public to the real danger that exists at the crossings and warn the users to do their part in insuring safety. It is an easy matter to get much publicity before the people but it is not so easy to get those who need it to to heed the advice that is given. It is an old and horrible story that is connected with every crossing fatality. Any driver is basking in a false sense of security who figures that he has nothing to fear at such a point and refuses to listen to any warning. Either he is a most careful driver, disposed to "stop, look and listen" and unwilling to take chances, or else he is one of that class which snaps its fingers at danger and continues to contribute to the toll of crossing fatalities.

The railroads are naturally desirous that the needless crossing deaths be stopped, and if the list can be decreased through the publicity campaign which has been started it will be a happy outcome. It is of course useless for the railroads to expect that they will be able to overcome the conduct of the reckless and the heedless but if they can bring about a reduction each year there will be cause for a high degree of satisfaction. It isn't asking a great deal when railroads plead with crossing users to save their own lives, but in too many instances it doesn't seem to be appreciated.

DEBT ADJUSTMENTS

The idea of having the debt funding commission of this country go to Europe for the purpose of endeavoring to bring about an adjustment was not looked upon with favor. This country has avoided the appearance of trying to play one country against another and has previously disclosed its opposition to entertaining any thought of pooling the foreign debts.

The countries which borrowed of this country have been notified that we desire to make arrangements for the payment of the debts. They have received more than one notice and as yet only part of them have taken steps to repay the loans, or to enter into agreement concerning repayments.

Following the summer it is to be expected that negotiations will be entered into by the rest of the nations. Our commission is going to be at home for that purpose and there are indications that European governments have come to the realization that it is time for them to act.

Unfortunately the impression has been entertained that this country could be prevailed upon to cancel the debts, that the borrowers might employ all their revenue for such purposes as they desired, even to making preparations for future wars, without being obliged to think of replacing the funds which were obtained from this side of the water for the last war and to help overcome the effects of it.

Much time has been required to eliminate such a notion. We stand in the position of calling for repayment under the belief that a recognition of such obligations and the meeting of them will have the best possible effect in developing a greater sentiment for international peace. But in addition to that there is no use in giving Europe the impression that we stand ready to finance any war and restore the havoc. There'll be a better understanding of the meaning of war if debts are paid, even though the payment covers a long period of years. There's the moral effect of debt payments which cannot be overlooked.

THE PRESIDENT'S TRIP

When President Coolidge makes his trip to Minneapolis to speak at the Norwegian centennial he will travel by special train. This is no different than it has been customary for presidents to do in going about the country, but it is somewhat different than was done by President Coolidge on his previous trip west when he had accommodations on a regular express for the purpose of keeping down the expense.

There is no minimizing the effects of that action upon the country, and yet the importance of surrounding the president with all possible safety is recognized on such occasions. Not a little criticism of what seemed like a neglect of this feature resulted from his previous trip. There were no untoward incidents on the Chicago trip, but a return to the practice of having a special train on which will be only the members of the president's party will be made today as the president leaves. This is "in compliance with the request of the railroad companies for the purpose of operating convenience and every precaution for safety."

Where the president is involved it is quite evident that there should be no hazard. If the transportation companies prefer the special train in the interest of safety there is reason to believe there is ground for it. The president is not disposed to engage in unwarranted expense or to go in for show. That he has repeatedly made clear, but he recognizes the wisdom of not presuming to take chances and it appears to be a case where the railroads have been able to convince him that the expense under such conditions should get secondary consideration to safety.

BANNING POISON GAS

When Representative Burton told the conference at Geneva that President Coolidge would be glad to call a conference at Washington for the purpose of dealing with the poison gas question if it was impossible to handle it at the present conference at Geneva, it is not to be interpreted as a threat.

There is general recognition of the need of eliminating poison gas in connection with warfare but it has been disclosed that those at Geneva are of the opinion that they are without authority to act upon this matter as a part of the effort to curb the traffic in munitions of war. The desire would be to have this important matter disposed of. That is what Representative Burton, who is representing this country at Geneva, would like but understanding the handicaps encountered and yet knowing the demand that such a goal be reached he makes it plain that even if Geneva does not act it will not mean the end of the ambition to ban poison gas.

Perhaps such a conference would be more effective if it were held in this country. It is certainly not to be forgotten what was accomplished at the Washington conference for disarmament. This country is not alone interested in eliminating poison gas from future strife. There are others which are equally desirous of placing an effective check thereon, including Germany.

If it is possible for those assembled at Geneva to meet this question effectively let it by all means be done. But if there is no chance for such an outcome the assurance that another conference will be called cannot fail to be learned with satisfaction.

THE MAN WHO TALKS

The following bit of wisdom appeared the other day in one of our papers that will admit of a short homily. "Ideals are funny little things. They won't work unless you do." This agrees exactly with the thought expressed in an appeal sometime ago for the near east relief. "Charity is a very beautiful thing to have, but it doesn't amount to anything unless you give it blood and muscle." Our ideals are our mental pictures of the standard of perfection; they are the models of excellence as we see them. Shall we allow that mental picture to remain static in our minds? Or shall it urge us on to definite action? To illustrate, an artist has a mental picture of exquisite loveliness of a human face, or a bit of landscape. Suppose he squanders that mental concept by merely gloating over it until it vanishes. Now that ideal is going to be passive, and consequently passive just as long as he is. On the other hand as soon as that ideal is clear cut and distinct, he uses his brush under the urge of his inspiration, and produces something that will live. Now that idea is workable if he is willing to work it.

We are all familiar with Mark Twain's sage remark that "New England has all the weather she needs and enough to spare." The writer would suggest another fact about New England weather that is equally profound and almost as sensible, and that is nothing is more remarkable about our climate than its extremes of temperature. Take for instance, the difference between May 25, and the following day when the mercury dropped from 90 degrees to 47 degrees in this section, but still more in other places. And this raises the question if we are not, after all, a long way from understanding some of these most observable of natural phenomena.

The other day a man was talking over the radio. I do not know who it was, but I am quite sure that I heard his voice, for when he began to speak I was at once reminded of Revelation, first chapter and the 15th verse, "and his voice was as the sound of many waters." Just how "many waters" it would be hard to tell because each one of them was as sonorous as Niagara. On this occasion he certainly had all the stops out and was working that poor organ known as the vocal chords for all it was worth. But what he said was this: "When big ships meet upon the sea, they salute and pass away." What the fellow with a voice like "many waters" was trying to get at was that we should all of us cultivate and use more than we do our sociality. Big ships that may be total strangers met, possible for once only, still they are courteous, they salute and pass on. We at least ought to do as much as they.

Are we not a little apt to look on many of our laws as coldly and selfishly political? That when a man in congress advances a measure it is something that is going to work to his personal advantage? This certainly is not true of all of them. A good illustration of how the strong help the weak is seen in the moral effect of The Smith-Lever act in granting subsidies from the national treasury to needy states. Now that act works in this way. The state of New York with its centralized capital paid last year $473,000,000 in taxes on personal and corporation income. Under the subsidy law $4,020,445 were paid back, less than one percent of its tax payment. Nevada, in the meantime, paid into the national treasury through taxation. $408,793, but received from the same $885,755—a return of over 216 per cent. In this way the strong helps the weak.

A returned missioner who had seen royal service in a foreign land made the following statement at a revival service in a certain church not long ago: He was speaking on the subject of immortality. "Suppose," he said, "there is no life after physical death, if our living here has been full, large and rich, we are the gainers. The profit side is far ahead of the loss side. But if there is a future existence, what it will mean to us is going to be conditioned by the preparation we have here made to utilize it. It is reasonable to presume that we shall enter the next world with the same equipment of spirit we have on leaving this life." This is logical reasoning that cannot be refuted. Even if there should not be an hereafter for the human spirit—which is hardly conceivable—still we should be justified in making this life full and rich.

There are those who by nature and habit are all the time taking the joy out of life. They minimize pleasure and magnify atoms. To them every beautiful day is a "weather breeder." A good story is told of a man whose weakness was vermin, of some sort or other, that was certainly going to destroy everything eatable. When he spaded up his garden in the spring it was angle worms that took full possession of his imagination. When the seed was pushing the young sprout through the soil it was the cut worm that would surely destroy everything. After this came the army worm that was pointing out the almshouse to all tillers of the soil. When the currant bushes burst forth into glory it was the inch worm that came in for its share of vituperation. One night this pessimist was taken sick and when the mother announced the fact at the breakfast table, one of his sons, the smart Aleck of the family, remarked, "I'll bet that dad's coming down with the tape worm!" Now the inference of all this is, why should we be bored to death by wormology?

It is very easy for one person to say how much another person ought to give to benevolence, and how much another ought not to give. Still there are those who appoint themselves the dictators of other people's giving. The other day in a trolley on one of the streets of San Antonio, Texas, two women were overheard presenting an ultimatum in the matter as follows: "I've been told," said one of them, "that Widow Skylark give $15 to the Salvation Army. That's more than she orter give. Jes' look at the ole hat of hers. She bought it three years ago for 67 cents, an' she has wore it ever sence. I know all about it for Aunt Liz bought one at the same time." "That ain't half so bad as ole Bill Thompson who give only $5," said the other woman. "I guess I know for my Jim was on the drive." Then lowering her voice she added, "They say ole Bill has salted down $30,000!" There you have it, fixing up what Widow Skylark ought not to give! She may be a woman who would rather help somebody with money than to sew gewgaws on her headgear. Some women are built that way. These women were fixing up also what "ole Bill Thompson" ought to give who was far from possessing $30,000, and who has begging letters in every mail. Doubtless the "ole Bill Thompsons" of Texas or Connecticut do not improverish themselves in giving to benevolence. But Mrs. Street God is not the person to say how much "ole Bill" shall give.

The king of Siam is to be presented with a motor car with a trailer, the whole valued at $25,000, by members of the Siamese royal family. The motor train will include a dining room, sitting room, bedroom and a bathroom.

ELLESMERE ISLAND; A "LOST LAND" OF THE ARCTIC.

"Ellesmere Island, the second nearest known land to the north pole, is to get the closest scrutiny it has ever has by white men as one result of the MacMillan Arctic Expedition," says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society. "This land lies at the head of Baffin bay, the broad water highway to the Arctic which is enclosed on the other by Baffin island," continues the bulletin.

"William Baffin, for whom the bay and island are named, was the first white man to catch a glimpse of the unknown land which came later to be called Ellesmere Island. That was in 1616; but it was only a glipse, and other Arctic explorers were so long in duplicating Baffin's farthest north that there came to be serious doubt of the the existence of Ellesmere island.

Existence Doubted More Than Two Centuries

"The land was not sighted again until 1852. The first white man to set foot on it was Dr. Hayes, a member of Kanes' expedition in 1854. After Hayes explored an isolated section of the shore, the land gradually emerged from the traditional into the real; but as in other of the northern discoveries different explorers discovered various headlands and peninsulas independently and dubbed each a 'land.' Hayes' portion, the east coast of the north central section of the big island, became 'Grinnell Land.' The north end, along the Polar Sea, became 'Grant Land.' Other names which have stuck to localities of Ellesmere island are 'North Lincoln,'—paradoxically the southernmost portion—'King Oscar Land,' 'Bear Cape Land,' and 'Jesup Land.'

"Ellesmere Island lacks only about 50 miles of being the northernmost known land in the world, that distinction being held by Ellesmere island's northernmost point, Cape Columbia, is famous as the starting point of Peary on his memorable dash to the North Pole in 1909. From Cape Columbia, Ellesmere Island extends 500 miles to the south, its southernmost point being still nearly 400 miles farther north than Point Barrow, Alaska, and 2,000 miles farther north than the United States-Canada boundary.

Cut by Fiords

"Ellesmere Island is 300 miles wide at the point of greatest widt; but the land is so cut into by deep fiords that in many places the waters of the eastern and western sides lie only 50 to 75 miles apart, distances that can be covered quickly by dog teams. These fiords, reaching toward each other from opposite sides of the island, mark out the two or three routes that have been used so far by expeditions crossing the island. It follows, therefore, that Ellesmere island is known chiefly along three narrow bands: one between Grand Land and Grinnell Land, one near the middle of the island, and a third toward the south end. Explorers have also traversed the entire coast of the island. The southern coast, covered by Sverdrup in 1899, was the last of the coastland to come under close scrutiny.

"Despite the fact that Ellesmere Island is perhaps better known than any of the other Arctic lands north of North America, knowledge of it is confined largely to the coasts and the fiord crossings. Extensive areas of the interior are still unknown or imperfectly mapped and no careful surveys have been made of any of the regions. The planes of the MacMillan Expedition will, repeatedly cross Ellesmere island this summer the advanced base in Axel Halberg Land, and, equipped with map-making cameras, will make detailed records of the terrain. Grand Land in particular, over which the direct air line from Etah to the Axel Heiberg base lies, should be as well known topographically by next autumn as Maine or Newfoundland.

"Greely was the first to discover a pass inland into Ellesmere island in 1882 when his expedition was stationed at Ft. Conger on Lady Franklin Bay. He found a large fresh water lake, and west of it, over a small divide, a broad ice-free valley leading to the west. One of his party, following the trail which Greely had blazed, reached the west coast. In this valley and other similar valleys are good growths of grass in the summer as well as a profusion of wild flowers. Herds of musk oxen graze in the valleys and have furnished a welcome food supply to explorers. In Grant Land are large herds of white caribou, wild cousins of the reindeer.

"It is believed that large areas of Ellesmere island, between the grass covered valleys, are capped by perpetual ice.

"Three hundred miles south of Lady Franklin Bay Greelys party suffered its terrible privations in the winter and spring of 1883-4 at Cape Sabine, when 18 of the 25 men died of starvation. The site of this Arctic tragedy, across Smith Sound for Etah, is now marked by a bronze memorial tablet, placed during the summer of 1924 by Commander MacMillan on behalf of the National Geographic Society."

SUNDAY MORNING TALK

Believe in God.

"I am appalled," said David Hume, "at the forlorn solitude in which I am placed by my philosophy; and I begin to fancy myself in the most deplorable condition imaginable, environed in the deepest darkness."

Any man who, like Hume, regards himself as nothing but a bundle of natural forces and impressions, that is to be unbound and scattered to the winds by death—who denies that there is any evidence of the continuance of the soul after death, or for the existence of God, must abide in solitude which is indeed forlorn.

Some of the atheists are trying to argue that men ought to be happy in the prospect of extinction, and in the belief that there is nothing behind Nature that can love or care for us; but the simple fact is that men are not happy when they bring themselves to believe these doctrines, as the author of "A Candid Examination of Theism," an avowed atheist, has written:

"I am not ashamed to confess that with this virtual negation of God the universe to me has lost its soul of loveliness; moreover," he adds, "when at times I think, as think I must, of the appalling contrast between the hallowed glory of that creed which once was mine, and the lonely mystery of existence as now I find it, at such times I shall ever feel it impossible to avoid the sharpest pang of which my nature is susceptible."

It is quite useless to tell this man he ought to be happy, he knows that he cannot be. If all men believed what he believed they would suffer the agony he suffered, and it is not for us to adopt views which would reduce the whole race to this extremity of despair.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Rev. Dr. Ernest M. Stires, who has been elected Episcopal bishop coadjutor of Long Island, has been a leading figure in the Episcopal church for many years. For nearly a quarter of a century he has filled the pulpit of the fashionable St. Thomas' church in New York city. Dr. Stires was born in Virginia fifty-six years ago and educated at the University of Virginia and the Virginia Theological Seminary. His first assignment was at West Point, Va., from where he went to Augusta, Ga. Dr. Stires left Augusta to become rector of Grace church in Chicago. From Chicago he was called to the pulpit of St. Thomas'. During his twenty-four years at St. Thomas' he has had remarkable success in building up the parish into one of the wealthiest and most important in the country. Several times in recent years he has been prominently mentioned for elevation to the episcopate.

THE REVILLAGIGEDOS

Mexico's unknown islands, the Revillagigo group in the Pacific, are to be the object of scientific study by a joint expedition of Americans and Mexicans.

"The Revillagigedos, like other little known bits of land off the beaten path in the Pacific, suffer from hasty classification as 'desert islands,'" says a bulletin from the Washington, D. C. headquarters of the National Geographic Society.

"Less even is know of the Revillagigedos than of Ecuador's Calapagos or Chile's Juan Fernandez and Easter Islands. On a map they seem reasonably accessible, lying 300 miles almost due south of the tip of Lower California and 375 miles west of the nearest coast of Mexico proper. But the islands are uninhabited and there is no reason for even an annual call by ship, such as those made to Easter Island. Many years go by without Mexicans visiting the islands and they are seldom even sighted by man except when some wandering vessel leaves the usual steamer lanes.

"Socorro, the principal island, is seemingly a single large mountain rising from the sea to a height of 3700 feet. It is approximately 24 miles long and 9 wide. At places sheer cliffs meet the sea and have been worn by the waves into caves and fantastic formations. At other places charming little bays are edged with sandy and pebbly beaches from which gentle slopes rise. The southern side of the island is rather forbidding, with patches of lava, ashes and volcanic scoria in evidence, half hidden by cacti and scrub. The northern side is more inviting. There the vegetation is less of a desert character, being marked particularly by a wild bean and other vines.

"The only effort on record to colonize the Revillagigedos was made in 1869 when John Smith, an Australian, obtained a concession from the Mexican government. He took to Socorro a small group of men and women with 25 cattle and 100 sheep and goats. Smith died soon after reaching the island and his companions abandoned the enterprise. The cattle perished but the sheep and goats throve, and the island is said to be heavily stocked with them today.

"Occasional expeditions have gone from the Mexican mainland to kill sheep and goats for their hides. Near sea level there is only a sparse growth of grass. It is not improbable, however, that the parts of the island high enough to penetrate the lowest cloud regions obtain enough moisture to support a luxuriant growth of grass and herbs.

The only other island of importance in the group is Clarion, to the west of Socorro. The two islands are separated by 214 miles, but between them lies Roca Partida, an isolated pinnacle rock only 100 yards long and half as wide, rising 110 feet from the water. San Benedicto, a rock three miles long, completes the Revillagigedo group. The conditions on Clarion are similar to those on Socorro, and it too supports numerous sheep.

"No study of the flora and fauna of the Revillagigedos has ever been made. It is not improbable that, like the now famous Galapagos, the islands may be the home of interesting species found nowhere else in the world."

Stains Are Passing Out

In America the beer stein is practically out of use except in a few "English chop house," where near beer is still served, and in tap rooms and dens for decorations, due to the American prohibition law, but it is also a fact that the stein is passing out in Germany, due to the fact that the wine glass is coming into such constant use. Even in the student's gambols the stein has passed out of the picture since the war, though in the interior sections the workmen will not admit that stein or beer drinking as a German symbol is passing.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

The Only Freak Who Wasn't Smart

The smartest folk you find are they
Who face new dangers every day.
—Peter Rabbit.

Peter Rabbit found the little white Porcupine. He found him right where Jumper the Hare had seen him the day before. In fact, he was in the very same tree. And he was white. There was no doubt about it, he was white. His sister, who was with him, was dressed just as a young Porcupine should be dressed. But this little fellow was white, and he had pink eyes. Yes, sir, he did so. He had pink eyes. And he didn't seem to care at all about his white coat or his pink eyes. He didn't seem to care about anything but filling his stomach, and that took a lot of filling.

"Humph!" grunted the little white Porky with the pink eyes

Of course, Peter hurried back to the edge of the Green Forest, lippety-lippety lip, as fast as his long legs would take him. He wanted to find the white Robin and the white Red Squirrel to tell them of the little white sort of Prickly Porky the Porcupine. You know Peter dearly loves to be a carrier of news. He thinks it most as much fun to tell things as it is to find out things.

Of course, the white Robin and the white Squirrel made a journey into the Green Forest to see the white Porcupine. Peter showed the way. Of course, both wanted to talk with the white Porcupine. But the little Porky was not at all polite. He wasn't at all interested in anything but that stomach of his. He didn't even know he was a freak. And when they told him that he was a freak he didn't care. He said so.

"You ought to care," declared the white Robin. "You will find that if you want to live you will have to be a lot smarter than your relatives who haven't white coats.

"Humph," grunted the little white Porky with the pink eyes, and went right on eating.

"You see," explained the young white Red Squirrel, "your white coat makes it easy for your enemies to see you, and that is why you have to be smarter than you would have to be without a white coat."

"Humph," grunted the little white Porky with the pink eyes, and this time he rattled the thousand little spears hidden in his white coat, and went right on eating.

The white Robin and the white Red Squirrel at last gave up. "He's stupid," said the white Robin. "He's just plain, everyday stupid. With that white coat and such stupidity he won't last long in the Great World."

Peter Rabbit, who had listened, scratched a long ear with a long hind foot. Then he scratched the other long ear with the other long hind foot. Then he stroked his whiskers thoughtfully. "Do you know," said he, "it has just popped into my head that having a white coat doesn't make any difference to that little Porky. You fellows with white coats have got to be on the watch every minute because those white coats can be so easily seen by enemies. But why should that young Porky care if he is seen? It makes no difference to him. Who is there who will touch him? You heard him rattle the thousand little spears hidden in his coat. I guess those spears are just as sharp as the spears of any of his relatives, and no one wants to find out how sharp they are. He probably won't be any smarter nor any more stupid than any of his relatives. It really doesn't make a bit of difference to him that he is a freak. He is one freak who doesn't have to be smart."

It turned out just as Peter had said. The white Robin and the white Squirrel had to be very smart, indeed, all their lives, but the white Porcupine didn't have to be smart at all. So you see there is such a thing as being too well protected. By the way, when one of these little people who shouldn't be white at all is all white it is said to be an albino.

Stories That Recall Others

The Window Joker.

John has returned from an auto trip through several cities. In one where he stopped he saw the words printed on a window as follows:

HER CAT IS BLUE.

He made inquiry and learned that it was the result of a practical joker's art. The fish dealer had marked on his window:

Herring—Catfish—Blues

and the joker had seen the chance by means of elimination to easily change it to the above.

Idea Right, Practice Wrong.

Little Bobbie was trying to get a drink but could not quite reach the bucket which sat on the cabinet. So he took a newspaper and put it on the floor to stand on. When questioned as to why he stood on the newspaper he said he could not reach the bucket and he thought the paper would make him higher.

MACFARLANE BEATS JONES FOR THE OPEN TITLE

Worcester, Mass., July 5—Willie Macfarlane, "finest of men and a great golfer," in the words of America's greatest amateur, little Bobby Jones of Atlanta, Ga., tonight is the open champion of the United States, a victory by a single stroke today ending the greatest tournament in history. The final score was 73 to 73 at the end of the second 18 holes of playoff to decide the deadlocked open tourney.

Jones' opinion of the victor is of weight, for, it was—national amateur and former open champion—who fell under the other's prowess in a history making play off that required two full rounds of 18 holes before a verdict was rendered.

Four strokes away from the crown at the ninth hole of the deciding round with Bobbie fighting his hardest to obtain the victory, he worked coolly, steadily, along toward the goal he had set. He deigned to smile as he faltered. He smiled as he scored well and step by step as he forced himself to even terms with the remarkable southerner who bought his third title in three years.

Only after a throng of several thousand had boiled in the terrific heat through 36 holes did the end come and then it was at the final green they had come up to the 17th hill even. They had scored birdies on the long down hill hole.

OBITUARY

Mrs. Ferdyce B. Summers

Summers, came to a peaceful close Friday morning at 11 o'clock at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Charles Yerrington of 26 Cliff street, who had tenderly cared for her throughout her lengthy illness. Heat prostration Friday, in her enfeebled condition, was a contributing cause in her death.

Mrs. Summers was born in England, May 25, 1846, the daughter of Alice Caroline Miller and Job Holdroyd and came to this country when five years of age, receiving her early education in Norwich schools. In Norwich, 52 years ago, she was united in marriage to Ferdyce B. Summers whose death occurred in Norwich 32 years ago, June 5th, the same day in the month as her death.

Mrs. Summers attended the Church of the Good Shepherd, Universalist, as long as health permitted. Of a loving and kind disposition she gained many friends during her long residence in Norwich. A home loving woman her interest centered with her family to whom she was a loving wife and mother.

Surviving Mrs. Summers are two daughters, Mrs. Ralph Kinder and Mrs. Charles Yerrington, three grandchildren, Hattie Isobel, Edwin and Lucius Yerrington, and one great grandchild, William Donohue, all of this place. One sister also survives.

An Appreciation
(Contributed)

The long and useful life of Mrs. Mary A. Drohan came peacefully to a close, Saturday evening, May 30th.

CITY [illegible] REAPPOINTED AT MEETING OF COMMON COUNCIL

The new court of common council held its organization meeting Friday evening in the council chamber with Mayor Mile R. Waters presiding. The members of the council were conducted to their desks by City Sheriff Charles H. Raynes and the meeting was called to order about 8:15 o'clock by Mayor Waters. All members of the council with the exception of Councilman Clarence G. Thompson were present, Dr. Thompson being in New York this week to attend a class initiation. Sheriff Raynes presented F. Russell Smith and Alfred G. Lillibridge before the mayor's desk and they were sworn in as the new aldermen, Maurice Looby, Harold C. Dahl and Lee Clegg being sworn in as the new councilmen.

Mayor Waters Speaks

Mayor Waters then addressed the council as follows:

Gentlemen: A year ago I called to the attention of the council the danger of a water famine if steps were not promptly taken to guard against it and the past winter has fully justified my apprehension. The necessity of pumping water from Trading Cove Brook has cost the city about one $106. hundred dollars per day or between $15,000 and $20,000, and our reservoirs are not yet full. I think that everyone realises the need of an increased water shed, and this will probably be our most serious problem during the coming year.

The matter of zoning ordinances which will probably come before you in the near future will be a matter of great importance and will demand much intensive study to avoid injustice to anyone and at the same time protect the interests of our citizens.

Those of you who have served in the council during the past year are deserving of great credit for the painstaking work you have performed and I welcome the new members to a share in the responsibilities of our city government, and feel sure that the same harmonious relations and lack of partisanship will prevail that has been present during the past year.

I request that every member of the council be present at the City meeting on next Tuesday evening and that heads of departments be prepared to furnish any information that may be desired.

The council adopted the same rules of order which governed the body last year. City Clerk Weston C. Pullen read his return of publication of the estimates and receipts of the city for the ensuing year, and also the certificate of publication of the proposed ordinance amending the traffic rules in regard to the parking of public service vehicles. Mayor Waters then declared the hearing open but as no one wished to be heard in regard to the matter the council recessed for five minutes.

Upon their return to the council chamber the council adopted the proposed traffic amendment which reads as follows:

Be it ordained by the Court of Common Council of the City of Norwich:

An ordinance of the City of Norwich relating to traffic, parking and rates to be charged by public conveyances passed and adopted at a meeting of said Court of Common Council held December 1st, 1924, is hereby amended by adding thereto the following as Section 48 thereof:

Sec. 48. No person shall park any motor vehicle used for or registered with the State of Connecticut as a public service vehicle, either as a jitney or as a public service vehicle other than a jitney, for any length of time on Main Street, on Broadway from Main to Willow Streets, on Shetucket street, on Market street, on Franklin street from Main street to Boswell avenue, on Ferry street, on Cliff street, on Rose Place, on Bath street, on Water street or on Union quare except such portion thereof as is or may be designated as a public stand ;provided however that the operator of any such vehicle, having deposited a passenger on any of said streets or portions thereof for such passenger to transact any business, may, provided such passenger has employed or hired said operator to wait for him, park his said vehicle, while and only while so waiting for such passenger, on said street at any place where parking is permitted by this ordinance for vehicles other than public service vehicles, and then only for a period of time not longer than is permitted by this ordinance for the parking of such other vehicles; and also further provided that nothing in this section contained shall be construed to or shall affect in any way the authority given the Board of Police Commissioners of the city by Section 18 of this ordinance to permit the parking of motor vehicles engaged in public service on that portion of the northerly side of Main street in Section 19 described and set apart for such purpose. Whoever violates any of the provisions of this section of this ordinance shall be punished by a fine not exceeding fifty dollars for each offense.

Gadle, was received and accepted as was the annual report of the street commissioner, John C. Donovan. The council adjourned until Friday evening, June 12th, adjournment being taken about 8:40 o'clock.

COMMUNITY PICNIC SCORES GREAT SUCCESS

Although extremely hot weather prevailed, the mercury hovering around 92 in the shade, there was a large assemblage at the fifth annual Community picnic, Friday afternoon, in the beautiful Lowthorpe Meadows, Norwich Town. The general invitation extended by the Norwich Rural association, under whose auspices the picnic was given, was responded to by people from all parts of Norwich and vicinity representing all ages. It was estimated that there was an attendance of about 400, including a very large delegation of children, many having arrived before the appointed hour.

For the two previous evenings, Ozias Dodge and Scout Master Frederic H. Wyant, with his scouts Troop No. 20, of Norwich Town, had been at work in the meadows, making preparations for the event and getting the grounds in condition for the athletic contests, relay races, dancing, etc.

Work accomplished included the removal of the old turnstile gate at the Town street entrance, mowing of grass, removal of 25 posts; also about 200 feet of three-strand wire fencing; building platform for piano which was loaned by the Hanover-Curland Co., and planting trees to form a temporary screen around the piano.

Emmet Fritz, of the Young Men's Christian association, who was on the athletic committee and who had charge of the opening numbers in the contest, kindly loaned the association's net, bats, baseballs, quoits and other equipment used in the races, games, etc.

The winners, who were awarded badges of merit, were: Boys' relay race, Robert Jarvis captain—G. Gorman, Harold Smith, Reginald Avery, Luther Whaley; potato race, Reginald Avery, first; Chapman, second; Luther Whaley, third. Target throwing, Crosby Peck first, Chapman second, Walter Haun third; girls' race, 50 yards, Fanny La Pierre first, Ruth Pieretti second, Catherine Houch third; boys' 75-yard race, finals, Rodney Jarvis first, Reginald Avery second, Luther Whaley third; small boys' 75 yards, William Brosofski first, Robert Agnew second, Merle Merro third; three-legged race, Jarvis-Chapman first, Smith-Johnson second, La Pierre-Sullivan third; girls' egg and spoon race, Claire Sullivan, Fanny La Pierre, Polly Jones, firsts; Dorothy Jarvis, Ruth Pieretti, seconds.

An entertaining feature of the programme was the interpretive dancing by a large company of Mrs. William N. Andrews' pupils in fancy costumes. This was greatly appreciated by those present and brought forth merited applause at the close of each number. Walter T. Camp, president of the Rural association, announced the several numbers through a megaphone. Miss Dorothea Tucker accompanied at the piano. This was followed by the luncheon on the hillside, opposite the pond, which afforded a good observation of the dances which took place on the shore of the pond.

Here D'Atri's Wauregan house orchestra, which liberally gave its services, assembled around the piano and furnished a delightful program which included popular numbers, also played for the community singing of old time songs under the capable leadership of Joseph Worth. The song books as on previous occasions were loaned by the Plaut-Cadden company. Ice cream and soft drinks were for sale on the grounds in charge of the refreshment committee which had a good patronage, people greatly appreciating this thoughtful plan, under such trying weather conditions especially.

Mrs. Francis Gilman was in charge of the sale of post cards, representing many places in historical Norwich Town, also received subscriptions to membership in the association. A banner read, "Come Join the Rural Association."

The 150 or more small children in dainty frocks scattered here and there at play; the gorgeous scenery overlooking Upper Washington street and East Town street, just at the setting of the sun, made a beautiful picture near the Town street entrance of Gilman's hill.

Much of the success of the picnic was due to the efficient management of the general chairman, Mrs. Ozias Dodge, who was ably assisted by the various committees.

At the close of the dance numbers the entire company of girls posed while Francis Gilman took a group picture.

These pleasant gatherings are looked forward to each year by many who are interested in the beauties of nature, and a more ideal spot could not be found. It is quite significant that the efforts of the Rural association in making a success of a Community picnic, are meeting with approval and hearty co-operation, under present and past management.

At the Community singing Friday evening the chorus of voices opened with one verse of America. Other songs given included Juanita, My Old Kentucky Home, Love's Old Sweet Song, Old Black Joe, Star Spangled Banner, etc. The following were the committees in charge:

Athletic contests and games—Frederic Wyant, assisted by Scout Troop No. 20; Emmet Fritz, of the Y. M. C. A.; G. A. Harris, Thomas Baldwin, Ozias Dodge.

MAURICE E. WALLEN WINS AN UNUSUAL HONOR

A Hartford paper says:

Charles H. Beach, of No. 62 Walbridge road, and Maurice E. Wallen, of No. 140 Westland avenue, two of Connecticut's most popular singers, were awarded an unusual honor in New York recently when they won scholarships entitling them to a year's study at the Rochester, N. Y., School of American Opera, which is a part of the famous Eastman School of Music, founded and heavily endowed by George E. Eastman of kodak fame.

The competition took place in Aeolian hall, New York, and more than 100 well known singers participated. Messrs. Beach and Wallen were the only two selected. Voice trials for the remaining six scholarships will be held in Chicago and San Francisco.

Mr. Wallen sang "A Spirit Flower," by Campbell-Titon and "Where'er Ye Walk," by Handel. Eight operas will be given at the Eastman theatre during the year. If Messrs. Beach and Allen accept the scholarships they will be assigned leading roles in these works.

Mr. Wallen, who is one of the original members of the Colonial quartet, is tenor soloist at the Asylum Hill Congregational church, Hartford. He is favorably known as a recitalist and his services have been in great demand for several years as a soloist. He has also met with success in broadcasting from WTIC.

Mr. Wallen married Miss Ruth Lathron Potter, of Norwich Town, niece of Miss Helen W. Lathrop.

Charles H. Beach is also known to many in Norwich, having sung with the Colonial quartet at the Music association concerts.

THE CATHOLIC ACTORS' GUILD REV. DR. J. T. SMITH'S IDEA

A prominent clergyman, author, preacher and authority on theatrical history in New York, the late Rev. Dr. John Talbot Smith, of Dobbs Ferry, is recalled by a dispatch of Friday. Father Smith, a native of Albany, was an occasional visitor with relatives in the Greeneville section of Norwich.

Before being assigned by his Bishop to the pastorate at Dobbs Ferry, his work in New York brought him into contact with actors and actresses of the Catholic faith, who deplored the evil reputation given the American stage by a few unworthy members of their profession. Through the efforts of Rev. Dr. Smith they organized "The Catholic Actors' Guild" and he was their first chaplain. That his efforts are of wide-reaching influence even after his death may be judged from the following:

New York, June 4—The Catholic Actors' Guild pilgrimage to Rome—believed to be the first pilgrimage in history, composed entirely of theatrical people—will sail from New York, July 1 on the President Harding, according to announcement made through Guild headquarters here. Sixty members of the Guild will make the pilgrimage, under the spiritual direction of Rev. Martin E. Fahy, chaplain of the organization.

Mr. Fitch was born in Lisbon and had lived there practically all his life. He had been a widower for 40 years and is survived only by his daughter, Mrs. Harry L. Hull of Lisbon.

NEW PRESIDENT INSTALLED AT WESLEYAN UNIVERSITY

Dr. James Lukens McConaughy was installed Friday as tenth president of Wesleyan university at Middletown. Immediately after the installation exercises which were attended by many of the leading educators of the east as well as hundreds of Wesleyan alumni, Dr. McConaughy announced that gifts totalling more than $1,200,000 would make possible the speedy erection of a new library, a chemistry laboratory and probably a college union.

The library, which will be erected at a cost of $700,000 will be called the Olin Memorial in honor of Wesleyan's second president, Stephen Olin and his son, Stephen H. Olin '66, of New York City, a member of the board of trustees and acting president of the university during the years 1925-22. Although very ill Dr. Olin made the trip from New York in a special railroad car in order to attend the installation.

The Chemistry laboratory will be a memorial to the late William Henry Hall of Willington, Conn., prominent Wesleyan alumnus, class of 1892, his father Gardiner Hall, Jr., and his son, Holman H. Hall '26 who died while a sophomore at Wesleyan. The college union will be the Shanklin Memorial in honor of William Arnold Shanklin, ninth president of Wesleyan, who died last fall.

Announcement of these additions to the physical equipment of the college, so greatly needed, keenly delighted the entire Wesleyan constituency and the hundreds of friends of the college had come to see Dr. McConaughy installed.

The installation was held on the Wesleyan campus in front of North college, one of Wesleyan's fine old row of brownstone buildings. Dr. McConaughy was escorted to the platform by an academic procession in which Governor John H. Trumbull of Connecticut, heads of colleges and other distinguished visitors marched.

The procession included, in order the Wesleyan senior class, commencement exercises for which will be held Monday, the alumni, members of the faculty, the board of trustees, representatives of secondary schools, special guests, representatives of colleges and other institutions, presidents of colleges and institutions, the governor, the installation speakers and the new president.

Dr. McConaughy comes to Wesleyan from the presidency of Knox college, Galesburg, Ill.

The Olin Memorial Library will face Wesleyan's quadrangle and will probably be of Vermont marble or Indiana limestone. The speedy erection of the building is made possible by two anonymous gifts of $50,000 and $25,000 respectively and other amounts from friends of the college and trustees. The late Mrs. Harriet A. Smith of Springfield, Mass., left $125,000 for the new library and the late James A. Devlin '88 of Philadelphia left $25,000 for this purpose. The building, plans for which were drawn by the late Henry Bacon of New York, will have a capacity of 300,000 volumes. It will be 164 feet long and three stories high. Interesting in connection with the linking of Dr. Olin's name with the new building is the fact that while an undergraduate he served as an assistant in Wesleyan's first library.

The inadequacy of the present small library building is indicated by the fact that Wesleyan has the fifth largest book collection among the New England colleges, surpassing both Williams and Amherst sister colleges in the "Little Three."

The fund for the new chemistry laboratory was started in 1912 by a gift from Gardiner Hall Jr., and the total necessary to cover the cost of the building is now reached by an additional gift of $100,000 from members of the Hall family, Mrs. Alice H. Hall, Miss Rose O. Hall and Mrs. Ida Hall Jones. "Hank" Hall '92, was one of Wesleyan's best known alumnus in Connecticut. He served eighteen years as a member of the house of representatives and six years as a state senator, a record for legislative service in the state. He was president of the senate in 1921. He died in 1922. The laboratory will be built of brick with limestone trimming, 123 by 52 feet, with wings on the ends, and will be two stories high. It will face the new library.

The announcement concerning the union carried the information that friends of Wesleyan and of Dr. Shanklin had given $165,000 and it is hoped that the additional $100,000 needed will be raised speedily. During his 14 years as head of the college Dr. Shanklin was very desirous of securing for Wesleyan such a building which would tend to unify the life of the college, providing headquarters for college organizations and a rallying place for activities. This building also will be of brick with limestone trimming.

NEW NAME GIVEN DORMITORY AT YALE

New Haven, June 5—(A. P.)—The New Dormitory being erected on the Yale campus, which has been given the name "Hank Hall" by the students and alumni, has received a new name. It is given this time by a stone mason who yesterday was seen cutting the name "Edwin McClelland Hall" in the marble over one of the entrances. It was then that the official name of the building became known. Officials at the university said the reason for the name would be given out at commencement.

Edwin McClellan was graduated from Yale in the class of 1884, and died about a year and a half ago. The building is the gift of his widow as a memorial to his money.

MANY BASEBALL GAMES SLATED FOR EASTERN CONN. TODAY AND SUNDAY

Some fast teams are scheduled to play in this vicinity today and Sunday, so that the baseball fans of Norwich should be able to get their fill of the national pastime. The torrid weather, however, will no doubt cut down the attendance, as a large number will go to the beaches in search of relief. The Highwood A. C. team, of New Haven plays two games here over the week-end, playing the Riverview club this afternoon at the state hospital and the J. B. Martin team on Sunday.

In high school baseball the leading attractions of eastern Connecticut will be the Academy-Worcester Trade game at the Campus. This is next to the last game that the Academy team will play this season. At Willimantic Windham plays South Manchester.

Highwood vs. Martin Sunday

On Sunday the J. B. Martin nine will cross bats with the fast Highwood club of New Haven. This team having defeated some of the fastest semi-pro clubs in Eastern Connecticut and Massachusetts will make the local boys travel to keep on the top end of the score. Their lineup consist of Chase will be behind the bat with Sheroud, on the mound, Bradford will cover first with Mitchel on the keystone sack, Stapleton on the dizzy corner Shaw will be seen at short. The outfield will be taken care of by Davis, Phillipie, Neale and Ruel. The Velvetmen after being defeated their first game of the season out of five starts have been put through a stiff workout and are going to make quick work of the New Haven boys. They will be seen on the field the same as in previous games, Jimmy Murphy, behind the plate Lemieux or Pepin on the mound, J. Joubert will cover first, C. Krauss or F. Murphy will cover second, F. Gley, at third, DeCellen at short. The garden will be taken care of by W. Gley, E. Murphy, E. Joubert, and Letty Dona.

Riverview vs. Highwood

The Riverview club will cross bats with the fast travelling Highwood A. C. of New Haven this afternoon on the hospital grounds. The game will start at 3.00 p. m. with Morin and Curran officiating. This is the first New Haven organization to appear on the local field in many years, and there are several former Norwich boys appearing in their lineup.

The Riverview Club will step to the plate in the following order: Normandin ss, Meell cf, Mills 1b, Duffy rf, Dugas 3b, Mamel 2b, Belair c, White lf and West p.

The following is what Manager Dan Paujuccy has to say about his lineup: Jimmy Austin, formerly of the Quonos, ss, Stephane at one time third base on the Hudsons; Bradford, native of Norwich and well known star athlete of New Haven, first base; Mitchell, second base of the Collegiate Prep nine; Davis, centerfielder, sensation of the Industrial League; Velardi, star local right fielder and ex-High school star; Philippe, left fielder of the 1924 Collegiate Prep nine; Yuhaus catcher of the widely known Forsyth team; Rhea catcher, also a former resident of Norwich; Conquest, pitcher, Elm City star right hand pitcher. Johnson and Meeker, utility. Our team played the Hudsons for the city title last season and lost out by a close score. We have defeated the Elm City Colored Giants twe games.

Academy to Play Worcester

The Academy baseball team will don its battling togs for the last stretch of the baseball season, when it will engage in a contest with the visiting team, Worcester Trade, this afternoon. The contest is to be played on the campus and is scheduled for 2.30 (D. S. T.)

The reputation of Worcester Trade is an unknown of thing in these parts , but it is certain that a fast team of ball players will oppose the home team. The game is one of the main attractions of the Academy baseball season and the Worcesterites should give the home team a fast go to win.

The Academy boys stimulated by the confidence of their last two wins are out to win the remaining two contests and close a rather successful season in a flashy snappy style.

"Smiling" Johnny Greene, speed ball artist with plenty reserve will probably dish them out to the visitors. Green has been trusted with other important assignments in the past coming through with a fine record of wins. This twirler is rather dependable but should anything go wrong, Lefty Jarvis will be in reserve.

Considering that this is one of the last two games, a large crowd is expected to attend and witness the contest. Manager Gilman is making preparations to receive a record breaking attendance. The fans of Norwich have backed the team fairly well this season, but they are expected to give still a better record today when they turn out in full array. They will surely be treated to seeing a real ball game today and with their backing the locals should emerge the victors.

On Wednesday the locals will be seen in action for the last time. They will play Westerly a return home game. This also is urgent attraction as Westerly has beaten the Red and White before and the locals are out to even up matters.

The locals will probably line up as follows: Hinrichs c, Greene p, Burke 1b, Carlin 2nd, Cimokoski, ss, Carroll 3rd, Brewer rf, Jarvis cf, McGowan rf.

Taftville vs. Westerly Independents.

At the Providence street grounds this afternoon Manager Troland's Taftville A. A. will clash with the Westerly Independents in what is expected to be one of the best games of the week-end. Westerly is a strong aggregation of ball tossers that have been the Waterloo of many clubs this season and Taftville realizes that a busy afternoon is ahead for them.

Manager Troland will use either Lefty Dugas, a promising youngster, or Lemieux, who was a star hurler for the Martin team a couple of years ago. The lineup for Taftville will be: Eccleston c, Lemieux or Lefty Dugas p, A. Dugas 1b, Cardin 2b, Gauthier ss, Yerrington 3b, Lee Jarvis lf, Raille cf, Caudetta or Lucier rf.

Pitchville Comes to Life.

Baseball enthusiasts of Eastern Connecticut should be interested in the announcement that Pitchville has organized a nine for honors in the national pastime. With a team of heavy hitters enrolled under his pennant Manager Patrick Sullivan expects his protegee to sustain the enviable reputation made by Pitchville during past years. Although this expectation may seem rather sanguine local followers of the sport, knowing that the Pitchville pilot has signed up the cream of last year's stalwarts and several stars of repute, are willing to back the new management with the "support that talks."

The Hardig A. C. of Norwich has been honored by being selected for the initial game on Sunday, June 7. Manager Meeber of this team has promised to use his star flingers, Segal or Rankis, in this important contest. Lombardi will hold down the honors behind the plate Manager Sullivan has not announced publicly his battery but promises a great surprise to those who attend.

Yantic vs. Medlese.

At Yantic this afternoon the Yantic team clashes with the Medical department team of the Sub Base and a fast game is expected. Berkman Bros. have offered a box of cigars to the Yantic player who collects the most hits.

Chapman vs. Westerly.

Westerly High School baseball nine plays Chapman Tech of New London Saturday afternoon at the Westerly athletic field. The game is scheduled to start at 2.30. If Westerly High wins the game and also the one which they are scheduled to play with N. F. A. in Norwich on Wednesday, June 10, they will be tied with Academy. Saturday's game is the last home game game for the W. S. S. Larson will probably pitch and Brown will pitch for Chapman Tech.

Sachems vs. Baltic

Sunday afternoon the Sachems of Norwich will have one of their hardest baseball ordeals to go through when they meet the fast Baltic team. The Sachems have played five games this season and lost only two, and these by close scores, and they have met some pretty fast teams. The Sachems expect to use Coutura, who has had two weeks rest, to baffle the Baltic batters while Jab Burns will be on the receiving end. Wm. M. Barney is expected to cover first, while C. Barber will take care of second, with Bush on the dizzy corner, and Hamel knocking them down at short. The outfield will consist of Gribis, J. McSurney, Rogers, G. Desmond or R. McBurney. Coach Wm. Hoffman is fast getting the grounds in shape after all the rain, and says it will be in A No. 1 shape for Sunday's game.

I AM SUPPOSED TO WIN TODAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, June 5—Prospects of a victory over South Manchester High today seem fairly assured by the collective of defensive playing shown by Coach T. A. Callaghan's Windham High school nine in the several games with the Clerks yesterday afternoon. The Silk Town Athletes perform at Recreation park tomorrow afternoon. The game will start promptly at 3:15 o'clock. John P. McQuillan will hold the indicator. The Manchester athletes will be accompanied by a delegation of rooters. The turnout of local fans, from all indications, will be the largest of the season.

Since the first game of the season, the locals' big batting has been in their defensive play. Practically all of the games dropped so far this season with the exception of the Bulkeley conflict, can be chalked up against ragged defensive work. The team as a whole has been hitting good. Windham is even out-hitting her opponents Haggerty and J. Miela have both been exhibiting good pitching. Now that the fielding improved in the game yesterday, the feeling is prevalent among the student body that it will continue and if it does Windham's chances against Manchester are better than even.

"Johnnie" Miela, as has been forecast in these columns, several days ago, will do the twirling tomorrow. Coach Callaghan in the two games so far this week handled his staff with care so that Miela, who pitched Tuesday, should be in excellent condition.

SEVERAL FEATURES IN DODGERS' WIN OVER CUBS

Chicago, June 5—Brooklyn defeated Chicago 7 to 6 in a game featured by home runs and a triple play. Zack Wheat smashed but two consecutive home runs, the first in the third inning with two on bases, and one in the fifth with no one on bases, and one in the fifth with no one on. DeBerry and Brooks also hit four baggers.

With men on first and second in the seventh inning, Zack Wheat lined to Friberg who had replaced Grimm at first base. Friberg stepped on first before Johnson could return to the bag and then threw to Maranville who got Ford for the third out. Completing a triple play, the first one here for the season. Grimm was ordered out of the game by Sweeney for disputing a decision at first base. Score:

JACK HINRICHS AWARDED ATHLETIC CUP AT ACADEMY

Jack Hinrichs, class of '25 at the Norwich Free Academy, was awarded the Charles W. Willey-Robert O. Fletcher Memorial cup for excellence in athletics on Friday at the school. The cup is given by the class of 1913 in honor of two members of the class who gave their lives in the world war. The cup is awarded to the athlete who does the most in athletics during his four years in school.

The cup goes to Jack Hinrichs who without doubt is the one who has done the most in athletics during his four years at school. Jack has proved to be an all around athlete of no mean ability. For three years he has played on the baseball team, playing in the outfield and doing some catching. For two years he has played a backfield position on the football squad and last year was the outstanding star of the team and was the choice of sport writers for an All-Eastern Connecticut team. He was 1925 captain of the track team and was the leading point man of the team, excelling in the pole vault, 100 yard dash and 220 yard events.

Jack will continue his studies next year at Brown University where it is expected he will make a record in athletics at that institution.

T. F. BURNS HEADS LOCAL BAY STATE ORGANIZATION

At a meeting Friday evening of the sponsors of the Bay State Short Ship meeting to be held here June 17, 18 and 19, T. F. Burns, local racing enthusiast was elected vice president, G. V. Pendleton was elected secretary and treasurer and A. J. Bailey was continued in the office of speed secretary.

Speed Secretary Bailey reported that all races had been filled with the exception of one which will be filled during the opening meet at Worcester next week. Mr. Bailey said that there were 7 to 17 horses entered in each race and the slowest class on the card would be the 2:14 while the feature event would be the 2:07. Several well known horses are entered in the racing and Norwich will be assured of the best racing that it has ever seen. In years previous Norwich has been unfortunate in drawing a late season date and a number of the horses has been shipped to Goshen where the purses were larger than here. The total purse this year will be $21,000, a very attractive figure for the light harness owners.

GIANTS BEAT CARDS IN SECOND GAME

TUNNEY KNOCKS OUT GIBBONS IN TWELFTH AFTER LEADING ALL THE WAY

Polo Grounds, New York, June 5.—(A. P.)—Gene Tunney of New York, American light heavyweight champion, knocked out Tom Gibbons of St. Paul, heavyweight pride of the middlewest in the twelfth round of a 15-round bout tonight. A right to the chin in the final round sent Gibbons down for a count of seven. A similar blow floored him again immediately for the full count, the first time in his meteoric career he has ever had the fatal ten counted over his horizontal body. A coatless crowd of 50,000 jammed the ball park for the match.

Tunney, who won the heavyweight championship of the A. E. F., when serving with Pershing's army in France, fought the greatest fight of his career, flooring the man who remained upright for fifteen rounds against Dempsey and lifting himself to a high peak in heavyweight pugilistic circles.

Before the knockout, Tunney peppered Gibbons with a cutting left jab, almost closing his left eye and bringing the blood from his nose and mouth.

Tunney fought an aggressive fight from the start, Tossing off the mantle of defensiveness which has so prominently dotted his exhibitions in the past, Tunney fought openly, taking in order to give and giving in generous quantities when he was able to master Gibbons' characteristic crouching defense.

Only once did Gibbons crawl from the defensive to the aggressive and then he poured a furious attack into Tunney that threatened to sweep him from his sturdy legs. But it was short lived. The St. Paul veteran was tiring. He put his all into one final charge in the eighth round but when it had spent itself the youthful Tunney was still vertical and driving in for more. This seemed to discourage Gibbons and the end loomed in sight for him.

Right from the start it was all Tunney. The New Yorker assumed the lead at the start and for seven rounds forced the fighting and kept on top of Gibbons throughout. Then Gibbons made his one lone stand of the fight, but his tiring limbs and the welcome bell ended the storm and Gibbons crawled back into his retiring crouch again never to merge until Tunney toppled him to the resined deck of the ring, a battered, beaten veteran of many a ring contest.

Tunney used good judgment in fighting Gibbons. He boxed cautiously at first, endeavoring to solve Gibbon's plan of battle. Once he had deciphered this he threw his usual caution to the wind and appeared eager to mix it with the St. Paul veteran. But Gibbons had too much respect for Tunney's tantalizing jabs and his right hooks and forced the New Yorker to chase him from rope to rope to get in his damaging blows.

The end was telegraphed in the eighth round when Gibbons shot his bolt and found it empty. From that point on he weakened slowly, until, exhausted by the consistent punishment Tunney was handing out he collapsed from a weak right and took seven before he could rise himself to his tottering legs.

Then Tunney tore in again and a similar blow knocked out the veteran and virtually ended a colorful and an honorable career as ever leaned on the ropes of a prize ring.

Gibbons was only a shell of the Tom Gibbons who once kept his balance for 15 rounds with

[illegible]-EIGHTY YEARS AGO

Favorable reports for the annexation of Scalpingtown and Laurel Hill, to the City of Norwich were made in the State House 80 years ago this week and seemed likely to go through without trouble.

News of the week as taken from the files of the Bulletin of 1875 was in part as follows:

Monday, May 31, 1875—Memorial day falling on Sunday this year, the day before was generally observed, though in similar cases hereafter the day following the holiday will be observed. The graves in the various cemeteries were decorated during the morning by members of Fedwick Post, except those in Yantic cemetery which as usual were to be decorated publicly by the entire post. The address of the day was delivered by Rev. Mr. Kellogg of the East Main street Methodist Episcopal church.

Sedgwick Post turned out nearly 70 men under Capt. Knapp, post commander and made a fine appearance. Company C paraded 45 muskets under Capt. McCord and made a very pleasing appearance, every man showing the effect of careful training.

The resignation of Rev. Mr. Merriman, for seven years pastor of the Broadway church, was read at the close of the service yesterday morning. He asks that it take effect June 30th and gives ill health as the reason for offering it.

There are so many coal vessels at Allyn's Point that man are working day and night to discharge them. One day last week 200 tons of coal were unloaded from one schooner and shipped in nine hours.

The $50,000 Preston six per cent bonds, to run 25 years, were purchased by the Norwich Savings society at their par value and a premium of 35-100th of one per cent.

Tuesday, June 1, 1875—At the special meeting of the court of common council, held last evening, Mayor Greene gave his farewell address in which he said that never before in the history of the city have the several departments finished a year in such wonderful condition. Police, fire and street departments are in better condition than ever before, he said, and many lasting improvements to the city have been made during the four years of the administration about to close.

E. S. Bottom of this city is among those of the class of '76 at Yale elected to the Skull and Bones society.

The directors of the Norwich & Worcester road have declared a dividend of five per cent payable at Boston, July 10th.

First flounders of the season were placed on display on local wharves yesterday.

Wednesday, June 2, 1875—New London and Groton are having a hot and heavy over the old question of the ferry between the two places. M. M. Comstock had a lease for 10 years on the ferry business providing income warranted but the Groton people went to the legislature and had the price cut so he dropped the ferry business. New London then took it up but the fare was not enough to pay running expenses so the city has gone to the legislature asking for the return of the old rate. Groton persists in demanding the $1.00 a month rate allowing a resident to use the ferry at any time.

New London claims that the dividing line is in the river and both towns should stand their share. The ancient ferry franchise was reserved for New London in 1705 when Groton was set off for free schools, and has produced a revenue for that purpose until last year. Now Groton people say that New London should shoulder all the load and tax.

Dr. Samuel Bulkeley of this city has three patients in Buenos Ayres and sends mail regularly to them in prescribing for their illness. This is the longest distance doctor case Norwich has seen in many a day.

The steamer Ida, which will run between Norwich and New London is expected on the river in a few days. The Ida will make the trip in slightly over one hour.

A large Herring safe weighing nearly six tons was brought to this city from New York yesterday. It is the property of the Chelsea Savings bank.

Thursday, June 3, 1875—The Committee on Cities and Boroughs heard the case of extension of the city limits of Norwich yesterday. Mayor Greene exhibited a map showing the present city limits and the territory of Laurel Hill and Scalpingtown and explained the new limits asked for. The number of voters in the neighborhood of Boswellville is 126, and Mayor Greene estimated that from 800 to 1,000 people lived there. The grand list of Boswellville is $3,000,000 averaging about $2,000 to each male living there. Many other people spoke concerning Scalpingtown, especially concerning the character of the people living there and most of them were in favor of annexation.

On the Laurel Hill question it was decided that if the line stopped at Sunnyside there would be no objection to annexation.

Mayor Greene has published a notice that he does not wish the nomination for mayor this year. He feels that his service of eight years is long enough for one man.

Friday, June 4, 1875—The usual petition of the downtrodden females was presented to the House yesterday and immediately referred to the committee on insurance after a sarcastic motion to refer it to the committee on education to correct the grammar had been declared out of order. Recommendation was also made that the petition be referred to a committee of aged persons whom the petitioners would be powerless to beguile.

The Committee on Cities and Boroughs have decided to report favorably on the bill to annex Scalpingtown and Laurel Hill to the City of Norwich. It is expected that the bill will pass without any further trouble.

The fight between James M. Thayer and James B. Coit for the City Judgeship of Norwich is expected to be carried into the senate. The Coit forces were routed in the house after a long battle by a vote of 110 to 98.

A party of Thamesville people who went on a picnic yesterday are nearly suffering with chills because of the cold weather. The day was almost like one stolen from December and everyone was uncomfortable.

General Brisbin states in his report that the value of fences in this country is over a billion dollars. He fails to mention what the front gates are worth but we know of one gate in Norwich he could not buy for two billions.

Saturday, June 5, 1875—At the meeting of the Republicans last night 108 votes were cast for the nominee for mayor and H. H. Osgood received 104 on the first vote. Aldermen nominated were A. W. Gibbs and L. W. Carpenter.

CONFERENCE IS WORKING FOR UNIFORM MOTOR LAWS

People who are unable to understand highway warning or direction signs in the English language would be denied the right to operate motor vehicles in any part of the United States if a proposal for a uniform vehicle act now pending before the national conference of commissioners on uniform state laws, should materialize. The conference, of which Commissioner Stoeckel of the state motor vehicle department is a member, has been in session at Washington the past two days under the auspices of the United States department of commerce.

This proposal and many others are incorporated in a voluminous draft of a uniform act which was forwarded to the Connecticut department prior to this week's meeting, as a basis for discussion. The uniform minimum age for licensed operators would be fixed at 16 years, which is two years under the minimum fixed by the Connecticut law. Efforts have been made in several recent sessions of the Connecticut legislature to lower the minimum age requirement, but without success.

The headlight requirements in the proposed uniform act are similar in many respects to those of the Connecticut law, which has been adopted by several other states. Most of the other features of the Connecticut law, also, are embodied in the draft. The uniform act does not arbitrarily decide for or against deaf operators, which is a question now pending before the Eastern Conference of the Motor Vehicle Administrators, which includes Connecticut. The uniform act would handle that matter much as it is covered in the law of this state, leaving it in the discretion of the motor vehicle commissioner of each state to determine whether an applicant is "afflicted with or suffering from such physical or mental disability or disease as will serve to prevent such person from exercising reasonable and ordinary control over a motor vehicle while operating the same upon the highways."

MARRIAGE LICENSE COST MAY INCREASE 50 P. C.

Under the terms of an act approved at the last day's session of the general assembly it will be necessary for each party to an application for a marriage license in Connecticut to sign the application when it is filed at the bureau of vital statistics, and an extra charge may result.

At present the signature of only one is required. Ordinarily the application is signed by the prospective bridegroom, but in some cases the prospective bride does the deed preparatory to the issuance of a license. In either case the presence of both parties to the contract has not been required. The new bill, however, sets forth that the application must be signed by both the prospective bridegroom and bride, and that the latter must appear before the town clerk and sign the application in person.

Incidentally, the fee of the towns of that population who probably be increased to one half more than now. At present the fee is $1.00 of which 75 cents represents the charge for filling out the license blank, 50 cents for the affidavit. With two affidavits required, one by the man and one by the woman, it is possible that the fee for affidavits will be increased from 50 cents to $1, increasing the total fee for a marriage license to $1.50.

It will be necessary, with approval of this bill, for a revision of the marriage license application blank, as the blank now in use provides for only one affidavit.

TAG DAY TO BOOST SALVATION ARMY DRIVE

Today (Saturday) is tag day for the Salvation Army and Commander Wilbur hopes that before the day is over the $1,500 still needed to complete the Salvation Army Quota for $5,000 Home Service Fund for 1925 will be raised.

Owing to the short time in which the drive was put on it was impossible to see all of the people especially those of the residential sections who contributed last year and every other year, to the Salvation Army Maintenance Fund. Today will enable these kind people to make their donation, no matter how small. Every one of these little coins given to the taggers will go a long way to help along the charitable work of the Salvation Army.

The Commandant feels very thankful to those who make an effort to contribute one dollar, as such contributions come from a deep seated charitable inclination and are the noblest kind of charity.

An appeal was also sent out by mail to several hundred citizens who last year contributed from one to five dollars and who were not seen this year by the drive workers.

Undergraduates at Princeton university have solved the heat problem. With examinations but a few days off and the heat making study within doors almost impossible, students have met the situation by moving desks and chairs to the roofs of buildings and to the campus.

HELPED THROUGH CHANGE OF LIFE

Took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound during this Critical Time

Baltimore, Md.—"I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to help me through the Change of Life and for a broken-down system. I had been complaining a long time and dragging along, had tried other medicines which did not help me much. I read in the newspapers of the Vegetable Compound and after taking a bottle I felt better. I did not stop with one bottle, but took it through the whole critical time and am now practically a well woman. I have two daughters whose health was very bad before they married and I was worried about them. I got the Vegetable Compound for them and it helped them, and after they married it also helped them in bearing their babies. This is a great and good medicine for all complaints of women, and I recommend it to all."—Mrs. L. GRECNICH, 1276 N. Gilmor St., Baltimore, Maryland.

The Vegetable Compound is a dependable medicine for women of middle age. Let it relieve you of nervousness, that feeling of strain and those sinking bad feelings so common at this time.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Watch Your Words

Keep a weigh on your words my darlings,
For words are wonderful things:
They are sweet like the bee's fresh honey;
Like the bees, they have terrible stings.
They can bless, like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life:
They can cut, in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind;
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind,
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them be unsaid:
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back if they are cold and cruel,
Under bar, and lock, and seal:
The wounds they make, my darlings,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your lives, and ever,
From this time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the beautiful words of truth.

To Day

To be alive in such an age
With every year a lightning page
Turned in the world's great wonder-book,
When every breath of common air
Throbs a tremendous prophecy
Of things that are to be,
When steel and stones and soil and God
Becomes the avenues of God.
A trump to sound His wonder through
And crown the work that man may do.

Oh age of strife! Oh age of life!
When progress rides her chariot high,
And 'neath the borders of the sky
The signal of the centuries
Proclaim the things that are to be.
The rise of woman to her place
The coming of a noble race.

To be alive in such an age
To live in it, to give to it.
Rise soul, from they despairing knees,
Give thanks with all thy flaming heart,
Crave but to have in it a part.
Give thanks and claim thy heritage
To be alive in such an age.

Two Raindrops
(A Fable)

In "It Can Be Done— Poems of Inspiration." Published by George Sully & Co., New York.

Two little raindrops were born in a shower,
And one was so pompously proud of his power,
He got in his head an extravagant notion
He'd hustle right off and swallow the ocean.
A blade of grass that grew by the brook
Called for a drink, but no notice he took
Of such trifling things. He must hurry to be
Not a mere raindrop, but the whole sea.
A stranded ship needs water to float,
But he could not bother to help a boat.
He leaped in the sea with a puff and a blare—
And nobody even knew he was there!

But the other drop as along it went
Found the work to do for which it was sent:
It refreshed the lily that drooped its head,
And bathed the grass that was almost dead,
It got under the ships and helped them along,
And all the while sang a cheerful song.
It worked every step of the way it went,
Bringing joy to others, to itself content.
And welcomed the sea as an old-time friend.
"An ocean," it said, "there could not be Except for the millions of drops like me."

Gone into Camp

This are the veteran ranks today,
once half a million strong,
And slow and feeble are the feet that
once marched far and long;
One more together they will mark with
slow, uncertain tramp,
To see their comrades who have gone
before them into camp.
The tents are spread—the low, green tents, whose curtains tightly
close;
No reveille will waken those who
sweetly here repose;
No more their weary feet will toil o'er
highways rough and damp—
For them the long, hard march is done
—for they've gone into camp.
Their comrades come with songs and flowers, the banner of their love
Floats proudly out upon the air, their
low, green tents above;
Ah, many a mile they followed it with
strong and steady tramp,
Before they heard the order given—
"Break ranks—go into camp."
Soon all the weary feet will halt, the
last march will be made,
For them the low, green tents be spread on hillside or in glade;
No more together they will march with
slow and broken tramp—
To all the order will be given—"Break
ranks—go into camp."

MANY USES FOR STRAWBERRIES

Dear Social Corner Members: There are three good reasons why strawberries should be used frequently on our spring menus. They are good to look at, delicious taste and, excepting a few people for whom, because of some idiosyncrasy these berries are forbidden, they are most wholesome.

Strawberries contain both citric and malic acid and also some salts of lime. They are especially good for people of a bilious temperament and physicians sometimes prescribe a generous use of them in cases of malaria fever and the gout. In the countries where wild strawberries grow abundantly they are highly recommended for pulmonary troubles. These little wild berries are much sweeter than the cultivated ones and are easily digested, even by some who cannot eat the berries brought from market. Strawberries can be served in an endless number of ways for breakfast, luncheon or dinner and their fragrance as well as their beauty, add much to the enjoyment of any meal, whether formal or informal.

I am sending a few tempting recipes for desserts which have the appetising flavor of strawberries, pineapple and orange. They call for a small amount of the fruit and form pleasing variations if not made from the usual way of using berries but using different fruits. These are original and are especially for a menu for hot weather. In August th se recipes will come in handy using raspberries, cherries or any kind of delicious fruit such as peaches. I make a great many of these recipes with canned goods for winter. Have been working on them for hot weather but can use them any time in the year. With banana they are delicious. I have never seen anything like the recipe in print that I am sending in.

Baked Bananas: Take as many bananas as you wish for breakfast, wash do not peel) split them and squeeze into each, some of the juice from a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven about 10 to 15 minutes. When done serve with whipped cream.

Custard for Fruit Sponge: Beat the yolks of three eggs until light and beat in gradually three fourths cup of sugar, flavoring to taste. Scald 2 cups of milk, and stir into this, then put back over the gas into a double boiler and cook as boiled custard. This may be flavored with the grated rind of orange or lemon. Crushed strawberries can be added.

Marshmallow Mound: Remove the inside of a loaf of sponge cake so that only the shell is left. Fill with a mixture made with a pound of marshmallows, 1 cup of nut meats, a cup of maraschino cherries and a half cup of cream, flavored with cherry and tinted with the maraschino juice. Heap with a half pint sweetened cream.

Strawberry or Orange Whip: Put the white of one egg into a mixing bowl, set in a pan of crushed ice or ice water and beat until the egg begins to froth. Then add about a tablespoon of crushed strawberries, or if you use orange the orange pulp, and beat vigorously. Continue beating and adding berries or orange pulp until one cup of either has been put in and the whole is light and well filled with air bubbles. Beat in one cup of sugar a little at a time, add two teaspoons of lemon juice and serve in glasses with a little whipped cream on the top. This must be ice cold and served soon.

Frozen Summer Custard: The yolks of 3 eggs, 1 cup of sugar, 1 quart sweet milk. Beat the yolks of the eggs very light, adding one cup of sugar, a little at a time. Scald 1 quart of sweet milk but do not boil, pour into the eggs, beating vigorously all the time. Put on the fire in a double boiler and cook until it will coat the spoon. Add a speck of salt, set in a cold place until ready to freeze. Then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and one half cup of some kind of fruit, sweetened to taste. When frozen pack in salt and ice until ready to serve.

Banana Cream: One lemon, 2 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon water, 1 cup of sugar, 3 cups of boiling water, 3 eggs, 1 cup whipped cream.

Take the juice and rind of the lemon, add 2 tablespoons of cornstarch dissolved in the 2 tablespoons of water and one cup sugar. On this pour three cups boiling water, add three egg yolks. Boil until it becomes thick. Then take from the fire, stir in the whites of the eggs beaten and set away to cool. When ready to serve add 2 tablespoons of whipped cream flavored with vanilla, with banana whipped into the cream.

A Delicious Strawberry Jelly: Mash 2 cups of strawberries well and add one pint of cold water. Let this stand for one hours then add four tablespoons of lemon juice, 2-3 cups of sugar and white and shell of an egg. Place over the fire and beat until boiling, let boil briskly for five minutes (only). Soften two tablespoons of granulated gelatine in four tablespoons of cold water and stir into the fruit juice. Remove from the fire and when cool strain through a jelly bag. If this is not as red as desired, a little fruit coloring may be added. Set on ice until needed. Serve with whipped cream.

I think this makes the best strawberry jelly I ever used.

KITTY LOU.

SOME GOOD IDEAS

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: How many things catch our eye when we call at other homes. For instance, a well learned man had his pants folded on a table leaf and two other leaves on top and it did the pressing trick O. K.—a novel device. A woman always gets out with her potting beef, cuts fine and tries it out to scraps, puts in beef, sears or browns each side with very little water, tight cover, cooks slowly and steadily. Cheap meat of any kind is made delectable this way.

The hard ends of asparagus make a nourishing broth if cooked in a little cold water till juice is extracted. Use say one pint of water, add 1-4 cup much sweet milk, salt pepper, butter size of walnut. Saltines or butter crisps go good with this.

Oh, how I enjoy the new vegetables as they come along. Every one must be suited with weather of all kinds for all kinds of folks. No complaint.

Hello N. O. T., you old tease.

TURKEYS AND CHICKENS

Dear Social Corner, Editor and Sisters: I have been ill nearly all the time since last fall. I did not go outdoors for four months, but am going out a little now. It has been a cold, dry spring, but is better now.

My daughter has just taken about 100 turkey chicks and 100 white leghorns from the incubator, and will set it again for later chicks. She has about 100 hens from last year, laying daily. And the last year's turkeys and hens are laying well.

The sisters have been very kind in writing, and I will try to write to the Corner again soon.

With good wishes for all,

NORTH DAKOTA.

SOUR MILK RECIPES

Dear sisters of the Social Corner: I am a new member to the Corner, who said soup is said to bear the same relation to a dinner that a doorway bears to a house. Be that as it may there is certainly no better way of beginning a dinner, than with an appetising soup. The French who excel as cooks never serve a dinner without a soup pot to be kept constantly in use in their kitchens and this it goes every scrap of meat and vegetable left from preparing a meal. The resulting stock is used as a thanks for innumerable kinds of soups, each given an individual flavor, by different seasonings and ingredients.

Now with me I think all good cooks, or American cooks, have what they call a "sour milk" pot. I always keep a large pitcher of sour milk and every morning the milk that is left from the day before is poured into this pitcher and about one cup of cold water to every quart of sour milk and with this you can make different dishes for your family and they are really nicer than made with sweet milk. Puddings and short cakes are so much nicer and lighter made of sour milk. I think as far back as the time of Good King Arthur, who in the nursery rhyme stole "three packs of barley meal to make a bag pudding" it must have been made of sour milk. There are so many different puddings you can make. I think most everyone also likes cake. These recipes made of sour milk are very nice. I am selecting and sending a few recipes. Some will probably be old friends of yours but I am sure you will meet some new ones you will be glad to make their acquaintance.

One Egg Sour Milk Cake: 1 1-4 cup flour, 1 cup sugar, 2 rounding teaspoons baking powder, 1-3 teaspoon soda, 1 egg, 1-2 tablespoon's melted butter, 1 scant cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Sift flour sieve place flour, sugar, baking powder and soda. Sift into mixing bowl. Into measuring cup (which was used for flour and sugar) break egg and beat with a fork. Add butter, then fill the remainder of the cup with sour milk, mix with dry ingredients in the mixing bowl, add flavoring. Judgment must be used about the flours, as different flours have different "thickening" qualities. Find for a loaf cake it takes 1 1-2 cups of flour. Layer and cup cakes I sometimes have used only one and one quarter cups of flour.

The above recipe is not only inexpensive but promises the additional good point of requiring few utensils for mixing. Use this same recipe for loaf cake, layer cake and cup cakes. You can add spices and raisins if desired melted chocolate if chocolate cake is needed.

Sour Milk Goode Cake: 3 eggs, 1-2 cup butter, 2 cups brown sugar, 2 cups brown sugar, 1-2 cup cocoa, 1-2 cup each coffee and sour cream, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda.

Add coffee to cocoa and let stand until cool. Cream butter and sugar and beaten egg yolk. Add cocoa mixture, then cream and flour sifted with soda and baking powder. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in two layers.

Sour Cream Pie Crust: Allow 1 cup pastry flour to each pie, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 cup sour cream.

Sift the flour, baking powder and soda three times, add cream and roll out.

In preparing this crust one can make it up and set it in the ice box. You can also make the filling and set that away. It only takes a few minutes to put them together.

Sour Milk Biscuit: 4 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, 3 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, sour milk to make a soft dough. Pat down with hands, cut out with small cutter. Melt butter and sweet milk and brush the top of the biscuit. This makes them a golden brown. The secret of good biscuit is to have a very hot oven.

Any one can make good biscuit, but it takes a good baker to bake them.

I think Sister Paula with her ham recipes and me with my sour milk will furnish material for the sisters to cook with, don't you Paula?

ETHELYN.

WORKING UP LEFT OVER HAM

Dear Corner Sisters: For the benefit of those who are looking for something new I am sending these recipes:

Baked Ham with Noodles and Macaroni: One cup cooked ham, 3 cups noodles or macaroni, one cup milk, half cup crumbs, one tablespoon, butter half teaspoon, salt and pepper mixed. Grease baking dish and place in alternate layers, cooked ham and macaroni or noodles cooked, season, add milk, cover with bread crumbs, dot with butter and brown in the oven 30 minutes.

Escalloped Diced Ham and Peanut Butter: 2 cup diced ham, left over roast or boiled, 2 tablespoon peanut butter, one third cup crumbs, 2 cups diced potatoes, half cup celery, one cup thin white sauce, seasoning. Arrange in layers in a greased baking dish, pour white sauce over top sprinkle with crumbs and baked 30 minutes in a moderate oven.

Ham and Cheese Rarebit: 3-4 pound American cheese, one can tomato soup, slices of bread toasted one green pepper, diced, one cup diced ham, (left over) quarts teaspoon salt, one quarter teaspoon salt, one cup water 1-4 cup evaporated milk, 2 tablespoons flour. Put the evaporated milk, water, tomato soup salt and pepper in the top part of a double boiler, add the pepper diced, cut the cheese into small pieces and add to this mixture thicken with a paste made of the flour and water. Serve on toasted rbunds of bread. A garnish of strips of pimento to add to the attractiveness of the dish.

PAULA.

POUND CAKE RECIPES

Dear Corner Sisters: A sister wished a pound cake recipe. These recipes are all true and tried.

Cold Water Pound Cake: Half a cup of butter, 2 cups sugar, 2 eggs, 1 cup cold water, three cups flour, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, 1-2 teaspoon soda.

Cream butter until like sponge, then add sugar, beating it in slowly. Beat eggs to a froth, put cream tartar in 1-2 glass of water and the soda in the other half, pour together and then beat into cake. Now add flour well beaten in.

Pound Cake with ten eggs: 1 pound butter worked back slowly to a cream, then add one pound powdered sugar, beating in all the while. Add ten eggs beaten to a froth, add one half glass of brandy, one glass of wine, and one pound of flour, after which beat well for 20 minutes, bake in moderate oven with an even heat.

Pound Cake: Beat six eggs to a froth then add a pound of sugar, 1-2 pound of butter, beat all well together. Dissolve one half teaspoon soda in one half cup of milk, take a pound of sifted flour and rub a teaspoon of cream tartar through it with your hands, add the sugar and butter, stir all thoroughly together, flavor it to your taste and bake in quick oven.

Oat Meal Cookies: Put rolled oats through the meat grinder until you have four cups. To this add 2 cups of flour, 1 cup of white sugar, one cup shortening, either pork drippings or butter (not lard) 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in one cup sour milk. Mix soft. Have some dates seeded and spread open. Roll out like cookies, inserting the other half over the dates. Press firmly together and bake. Delicious. Any desired shape and bake in a quick oven. They are delicious.

Gingerbread, Paused Cake: 1 quart molasses, 1 pint of water, stir and a half pints of lard, one ounce of soda, one half pound of alum. One heaping cup butter, 5 eggs, one ounce cinnamon, one pound of raisins. Boil the alum in part of the pint of water and let cool before mixing with the other ingredients. Instead of alum one ounce of cream tartar may be used. Bake on medium oven.

UNCLE SAM'S DAUGHTER

A UNIQUE PARTY

Dear Social Corner Friends: Perhaps some of you have wished to give a party, but cost and work were the "bug-bears" that deterred you. Here is one I attended that minimized cost and labor, but was very novel and highly amusing.

The invitations aroused no end of curiosity. They were written with a heavy black pencil on ragged wrapping paper and read.

"A Hoboes' Convention there's going to be,
And we want you there as sure as can be.
So won't you come as a Hobo drest,
And join the fun with all the rest?"

Date, time and place were put in the lower left-hand corner.

The hostess told me these had evoked several novel replies. One was written on a scrap of paper and said, "Chairman of Hoboes' Convention: Ismall be pleased to change my route, and I'll be there without a doubt."

"Always a Hobo."

As the guests met, shrieks of laughter burst forth, All had faithfully observed the "As a hobo drest."

Some women looked like suspicious gypsies, others like dissipated, unkempt, berragged beggar-women. Several men had grease painted their nose and cheekbones a gin-blossom hue, and smudged their faces with burnt cork to stimulate a much needed shave.

It was hard to believe that these vagabonds were really some of our best citizens. While en route, some had encountered a policeman who eyed them most suspiciously.

Roars of laughter filled the air as the preacher arrived attired in a dirty, tattered coat badly frayed and clumsily patched trousers, a mad red necktie sans collar, dilapidated yellow shoes held together with twine, and a wreck of a hat with the top knocked out.

Ordinarily, he is a most dignified personage, but even he had entered whole heartedly into the spirit of the occasion.

Our hostess' home adjoined a bit of woodland. Over the front she'd put a huge sign, Hotel De Gink. Another under it was, To The Back Door For Handouts.

The handouts were four frankfurters two potatoes, and a small apple pie tied up in a bandanna handkerchief and slung on the end of a stick. One was given to each guest together with a tin can filled with coffee. The partly detached lid served as a handle. Then they were told to follow the arrows which would bring them to "Ozone Hall" where the convention would take place.

With sticks flung over shoulders, the tramps started a zigzag march around bushes and trees until they reached a picturesque spot in the woods. This was Ozone Hall.

The men felled a dead chestnut tree and a wood-sawing contest began to the tune of a harmonica that the host played. As the music grew faster and faster, one after another, the laughing and breathless victims were forced to quit. A prize given to the last to succumb: A corn-cob pipe for the man, and an inexpensive basket for the woman.

A fire was built and all gathered around it to roast their spuds and hotdogs, and heat their coffee. The dusk, the glow of the fire, the fantastic shadows, and the queer looking individuals toasting their victuals presented the weirdest and most picturesque scene imaginable. Everyone remarked about it.

A vote was taken to ascertain who should be king of the hoboes. The crown—a tin can—went to the trampiest looking man. The hostess led him to his throne—a rock under the largest tree—and gave him some papers—jokes, funny stories, etc., that had been torn out of old newspapers and the like to distribute among his hobo subjects.

The remainder of the evening was spent around the fire reading these aloud, singing old familiar songs and chatting.

The hostess also gave the king an official looking scroll that was made out of paper that comes on wide ribbon bolts. He unrolled it and in a most dignified tone read,

"I've read many thrills that were printed;
I've been moved by none of these things:
Now I've had my own great adventure.
That lifted me up with the kings.
I've never been fired with ambition,
Still here I'm a great famous man.
For tonight I'm King of the Hoboes;
You pikers beat that if you can?"

Everyone went home voting it the best time ever.

IRVA LYNN.

GRATEFUL FOR ASSISTANCE

Dear Cornerites: Well, just time enough to say we are all on the improvement line, here, and mismated shoes no longer in vogue? Presume some of my capable committee, thought, I might have become a cripple.

To each one who assisted me for our May dinner, also to those who served on the program, not forgetting all those who joined in the kitchen act with pans and dishwipers, I wish to express my sincere thanks. Have been busy every minute since, hence the delay. Was substituting again a few days.

Jill: Was sorry I did not see you on Lebanon South Corner day when I went.

Hope Friday will come and see us when vacation comes.

Dont Worry: Often think how you helped us, and we always wish we were there again.

Twice Twenty and All: How I wish I could have been with you June 5.

NEIGHBOR EVEREADY.

APPRECIATES CORNER MEMBERSHIP

Dear Social Cornerites: I was tickled to death when I heard I was accepted into the Corner and also like my pen name. I thought I might pick someone elses pen name so I left that to the editor's good judgment.

Im afraid that I don't know a single person who belongs to the Corner. I wonder if I shall ever know any of them? A good many of them live out of town. I can't get to any of the meetings unless I have a car either. Well, anyhow I can write, can't I?

I see a great many people are afraid of thunder and lightning. I'm rather uneasy when they are on, myself, but there is no use in hiding under the bed or in the clothes closet. If you are meant to go that way you'll go no matter where you are.

Perhaps I'd better stop and let someone else who has a better letter take up the editor's time and space.

ANDY.

FASTENING HEAVY BLANKETS ON LINE

Dear Social Corner Friends: As a sister has asked what I am doing will say that today I have been putting away blankets and winter coats until another fall, as I don't believe we'll need them for a while.

I did think we might use them all summer but judging by Monday's and Tuesday's weather, I think not.

Certainly we are having summer heat now, and aren't the thunder storms dreadful. And I never saw hail stones even in a winter storm, like those that fell in Saturday's storm.

Many thanks to Cliff for the poem and I believe your version is correct.

I first had the poem on a valentine sent to me, by a great aunt when I was only a young girl.

She and I both knew that I had a hasty tongue and it made quite an impression on me. For many years I kept the valentine and then, as it will happen, sometimes, it was mislaid and lost. I am glad to get it again, and I can profit from it even yet.

When hanging heavy blankets or quilts on the line, instead of putting the clothes pins over the line, try putting two or three pins up and down the sides of the quilts, pushing the pins over the quilts just as far as they will go.

They never blow off, if pinned this way.

Hope all the sick ones will soon be better.

O. D.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

Dear Corner Sisters: Am sending in a few hints to housekeepers.

Put a few slices of raw potatoes into soup that is too salty. They will absorb the surplus salt.

Try putting a tablespoon of vinegar in your hot lard to keep your doughnuts from absorbing fat.

Put a cloth on a burn then keep it saturated with sweet spirits of nitre and it will not blister.

Rub your fingers with a piece of soap also under your nails before you polish the stove or any other rough work. This will remove any dirt or stains under the nails quickly when you wash your nails.

To cut new bread dip your knife in hot water. When the bowl or bath tub pipes become clogged, mix a handful of soda and another of salt and force down the pipe. Leave for a half hour then pour boiling water down the pipe.

Use cold water on cocoa and blood stains.

Try a piece of flannel dampened with spirits of camphor on stains on mirrors and window glasses.

Your new broom will last longer if you scald it in hot soda before using.

To take out rust spots, wet, rub on cream of tartar and place in the sun.

When laundering your handkerchiefs break up a quarter of an ounce of arris root and tie it in a piece of muslin. Boil this in with the handkerchiefs for a short while. You will find that after they are ironed they will have a delicate and very refreshing odor.

THE PRINCE'S GREEN FROG

Dear Sisters: Did you ever hear about Prince Edward's pet frog? I will tell it as it was told to me. You see I am short of material and will fill in with this. It all happened some years ago when a troublesome cold had kept young royalty confined for days in a sick room.

He had grown impatient under various disagreeable doses and was not at all amenable to the good counsels of his tutor until the latter chanced to mention a little girl of his acquaintance who was also suffering from "Influenza, but who bore the affliction like an angel. This interested the prince immensely.

"I'd like to know that girl," said he with serious enthusiasm, adding: "And at any rate I'm going to send her a present."

He thought for a moment or two, and then went on musingly, "What shall it be. Grandmother says princes always give presents of things they are most fond of. I think I like best Lord Roberts and my beautiful green frog that jumps so well."

Then came another period of deep thought, and then with a decisive nod of his head; "I like Bobs very much, but I like my frog best, that sensible little girl shall have my frog."

And the frog was send with the compliments of the then heir presumptive to the throne of the British empire.

Explains The Pin

Dear Editor and Sisters of Corner: Many thank sfor pin. Those who have noticed me wearing it have made inquiries as to what it was for. I have been very glad to give them information fo our Social Corner.

Ready: I am wondering what you are doing. It's a long time since I've heard from you.

Balsam Fir: I enjoy your writings. You will hear from me when I go back to the city. I am spending my two weeks vacation with Beecy. It came early this year, first in time fro me to help Beecy's daughter finish up odd jobs. I love this time of year to be out weeding and to dig in the flower gardens. She has two pansy beds, with over 40 varieties and the variegation, is wonderful. I never saw anything like them for size. Some are as large as pinks.

May has been rather cold, and backward but every thing is doing fine. It has been a very warm day for June 3, nice south breeze coming up tonight. I believe this is the day appointetd for the Corner picnic. I am with you all in spirit, it would seem good to be with you, for I presume I might run on to some old friends I haven't seen in 16 years, as I did ten years back in visiting Willimantic friends.

Best wishes,

FROZEN.

Maine.

APPROVES PIN AND IDEA

Dear Social Corner Friends: Perhaps it is my turn to add a few lines to help keep the Corner page full. First I wish to thank the editor for sending me a Social Corner pin which I shall wear to all Corner gatherings which I shall attend. The pin is a very fashionable plain pin with yellow back ground with the words Social Corner in plain letters of black. There could not be two better colors for a pin, which is much better then the little yellow bow.

It is pleasing to see how nicely the writers are keeping the page full from week to week. As housecleaning is over there will be much time for the Corner people to meet quite often and know who is who.

Papas Boy and Crimson Rambler: I know you will excuse my delay in answering letters when I write you which I hope to do in the near future. I will not forget you. From one of the old Corner friends.

RURAL DELIVERY.

SUGGESTIONS DO HELP

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have been trying to get time to write for some time. First I want to thank the editor for my pin, also the sisters that sent my birthday cards—Crimson Rambler, Mavis, Aries, E. M. R. C. P., Mrs. K. and Annie E.

Aunt Tjerusha: You have my guessing. Yes, I have people that work in Taylor Atkins. I also worked there a few years ago. Can't you give me more of clues?

Bud: Have been looking for a letter for a long time from you to see if I could make out who you are.

I want to thank the Willimantic sisters for the nice time Mavis and I had at their meeting.

Thoda: I was going to ask you if you wanted to ride home with me that day but when we were ready to go you had gone.

Rosy Post: I got your number to W. Can't say I know you, especially by Mrs. Give me a clue and then see.

Betty T.: How are your eyes now? Hope they are all well. The milk was O. K. Didn't get the that kind here. We got in a very hard showers that day and to make matters worse had a flat tire so had to sit until it was over. It hailed so hard the grand was white.

Amy: How are you? All well I hope.

Olive: Did you go to any of the lectures? I looked every night for you but didn't see you. Many thanks for I got much help from them and would have gone every night if I had known it in time. I joined the class and it was well worth it.

Janice: I was interested in your suggestions in dealing with children, and think it a much better way than a great many have. I have a neighbor that keeps telling her daughter she is a dumbell and that she won't get through grammar school until she is 16, so she has failed in everything this year. I think it is an injustice to the child and it has made her loose all confidence in herself. I said, "Well you keep telling her that and you can make up your mind that she won't." Suggestions with a little kindness along with them go a long way I have found. Hope all are enjoying this nice weather, and best wishes to all.

ANNA Z.

RIGHT IDEAS

Dear Social Corner Friends: It is time that every teacher and mother should protest against the publishing of old fake ideas about the care of children.

In one of the latest magazines an article written by a man, who doubtless is a skilled physician, but one who knows very little about the proper development of the child mentally and morally, dwells on that idea that has made so much trouble—"to let the child lie there and cry. Let him lie and cry until he gives up, even if he cries from pain or from skin irritation or some other discomfort. Taking him up will not cure his trouble, but will form the habit of crying for everything he wants." How absurb. An infant is just a person. If an adult suffers would we try to plan something to interest him and to take his mind off of his suffering as much as possible.

A man fatally ill of a painful disease was comforted by music, and his daughter spend many weeks singing or playing the piano much of the time to help father bear the pain. An infant should be comfortable and happy and until he is able to sit up add move around some, he can get very little change of position unless some one will hold him occasionally a little while. At this age he sleeps most of the time anyway. Another error "punishment should never be omitted, it should not be severe, but should be sure." Any good horse or dog trainer will tell you that punishment has no place at all in training the young. Any helper who would strike or kick or be unkind to the horse or dog would be discharged. If the horse kicks or runs the trainer appearently takes no notice of it. It is just the animal life and activity of the young and if untioed probably will not happen again. Unkindness would make him vicious and ugly and treacherous. The young horse or dog soon shows strong attachment to the owner or caretaker and soon learns how to do what is expected of him and is safe and useful in all the ways he has been taught. Is a child less capable of learning? He writes "It is hard to believe that the presence of a grandmother living in the home can be a source of danger to the child, but anyone with medical experience knows that children are better off when brought up under single authority." As, punishment and bossing are not the way to develop a child, so authority is not in it at all.

The finest thing that could have happened to my oldest child was that we lived in the house with his two grandmothers until he was seven years old. Then school and other children took their place in his life and interests.

The two old ladies enjoyed teaching the child and he spent much of his time with them.

His first reading and spelling and history lessons and many good ideas he recieved from them.

A young child and especially the only child in the family requires more time and attention than the mother can give and maids or hired teachers seldom understand young children or are willing to bother to teach them the simple ideas they now need.

We were started with wrong ideas is the reason we make so many mistakes with children and get so poor results from our training. We had to learn better way from our own experience, and then it was too late to make much use of our knowledge.

No one can know which are the right ideas so long as so many wrong ideas are printed and passed on. Why not be as exact in human affairs as in mechanical. Years ago writers ridiculed every new idea in machinery and called the inventor crazy.

No one would think of writing against an invention or discovery now. Why publish the fake in human affairs there are plenty of people who know the right.

Every child should be developed in the physical, mental and moral from his first day. It can only be done by te way we take with his food, his care, his habits each day. Not a matter of your words, but of his actions. He learns to be honest, to be unselfish, to be an agreeable companion if we teach him this is baby's, this is father's or mother's of brother's or the lady's as soon as he can creep must always be things that he can get to, but which he must not touch, not because you would slap him if he took it, not because he must obey commands, but because he recognizes that if is not his. You are giving him moral training in the only way it can be given.

The young respond quickly to right ideas patiently taught and do better than adults, although not every time. Don't expect too much from the young, politely ignore to notice the occasional lapse or if you do notice, just pleasantly remind him of the reasons he has been taught. I saw many reviews and criticisms on a recent novel which is the best text book on child culture I have ever read, but not one of them showed any understanding of child training—just criticised the literary style.

In child culture we need just true facts plainly told, that everyone may have the right ideas to begin with and not have to learn them entirely by their own experience.

TO PREPARE A ROSE JAR

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Now, when the roses are so plentiful, is the best time to collect leaves for a rose jar. When made from the sweet smelling garden roses it is much more fragrant than when made from any hot house roses, except American Beauties.

Collect the petals from roses on a fine day. Put a tablespoonful of common salt in a China bowl. On this lay several handfuls of rose petals, and repeat until all are used. Sprinkle salt on top, press the leaves down with a plate, stir the petals about frequently, and after five days or more, when they have become moist, add three ounces of allspice, and have it again for three or four days. Now add one ounce of bruised cloves, one ounce of broken cinnamon, one ounce of nutmeg, some broken allspice, six grains of musk, add a little lavender or orange flower water. You may add clove pinks (without leaves or stems) violets, orange blossoms or lavender, if you have them. Stir and shake the mixture occasionally and keep it well covered.

Irva Lynn and Gotham: I enjoyed your letters about New York City, as I lived in and near there when a child.

Starlight: I have a copy of the song you mention. I love a starlight night.

Ethelyn: That cake recipe sounded good. But where, pray, shall we obtain the unattainable ingredients?

Sassy: I used to be a baseball fan when I was young. Used to attend every game at Plainfield, New Jersey. Speaking of old volumes, we have a book published 1776 on The Art of Sympmenting. Two others published in 1797. Studies of Nature are dedicated to George Washington.

To the sister who asked for a cure for corns use Sterizo salve and powder. Zono for warts, also lemon juice.

Aunt Tusha: Have only one goosie left and 6 youlets.

Don't forget to write to the Social Corner occasionally during the summer months. Tell us about your travels, vacations, etc. Best wishes to all.

BACK IN CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I am at home again in dear sunny California. I arrived just a week ago today (May 29) and I never loved California as I do now. It is eight long years since I have been here and I see many changes in California. It is growing very fast. I can't tell you of the thrill that went through me as I was coming into the land of Sunshine and flowers. Such loads of flowers and beautiful ones. Oh! how I wish Golden Rod, White Clover, Old Top, Whoa Jan, Sea Bird, Red Cedar, Courage, Busy Bee, Willowyck, Amy, Harieth, Fluffy, Debbit, Theoda, Clio, Violet No. 2 and Honey Suckle, could see them all.

My sister only had eight bouquets in her home the night I arrived.

Sunday I picked the largest bunch of sweet peas. I was invited to spend Wednesday with an old time friend and there I picked oranges and orange blossoms from the same tree.

I do so enjoy the California fruits. I have so longed for the loquats, apricots, figs, oranges, guavas, persimmons, saucer peaches, and satsuma plums. The latter are a large dark red solid meet plum.

I thought of you the last Wednesday I was at home and did so wish I could run in to see you all, but I was so busy getting ready to start I wouldn't.

Neighbor Everady was hostess and I knew she made a good one.

I saw the Pacific ocean when my brother took me for a long ride along the beach. I heard the singing sand and saw the many oil wells working. They work day and night, drawing oil and gas to run our automobiles and other machinery.

Flying machines are very common here.

I hope to hear from anyone who cares to write to me. My address will be, Mrs. C. O. Barrows, 1226 West 4th street, Santa Ana, California.

I will close with love from

CALIFORNIA GIRL.

INTEREST AROUSED IN MEETINGS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Am hearing so much about the picnic June 5th that it makes me wish I could meet with you. I never have attended any of the gatherings but always read the letters and enjoy them also have tried a number of recipes and find them O. K.

In case I do have the good luck to be at the picnic I wish the editor would send me one of the dainty pins. Many thanks for it. I remain,

JUST PETE.

SENDS IN DESIRED POEM

Social Corner Editor: I am enclosing the poem Watch Your Words, which was requested recently. I found it in an old book, a few years ago.

I once wrote to the Social Corner under the names of Wild West and Black Beauty. But as "there's no name like your own name," I'll sign my childhood nick-name which sometimes still hear.

A. NEVADA.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Editor of Social Corner: I have been reading the Social Corner letters. The lady where I am staying belongs to the Corner and I think I would like to join. She has just received a pin and I would like one.

Will take for my penname.

CHEERFUL.

William S. Clegg was at work in his apple orchard at New Bloomfield, Pa. when he beheld a tin can moving toward him through the grass. He found that a groundhog had poked its head into the can, but discovered it quite another matter to get it out. Clegg pulled off the tightly clasped can and the groundhog scampered away.

SOCIAL CORNER POETRY
Watch Your Words

Keep a watch on your words my darlings,
For words are wonderful things:
They are sweet like the bee's fresh honey;
Like the bees, they have terrible stings.
They can bless, like the warm, glad sunshine,
And brighten a lonely life:
They can cut in the strife of anger,
Like an open, two-edged knife.

Let them pass through your lips unchallenged,
If their errand is true and kind;
If they come to support the weary,
To comfort and help the blind,
If a bitter, revengeful spirit
Prompt the words, let them be unsaid:
They may flash through a brain like lightning,
Or fall on the heart like lead.

Keep them back if they are cold and cruel,
Under bar, and lock, and seal:
The wounds they make, my darlings,
Are always slow to heal.
May peace guard your lives, and ever,
From this time of your early youth,
May the words that you daily utter
Be the beautiful words of truth.

To Day

To be alive in such an age
With every year a lightning page
Turned in the world's great wonder-book,
When every breath of common air
Throbs a tremendous prophecy
Of things that are to be,
When steel and stones and soil and God
Becomes the avenues of God.
A trump to sound His wonder through
And crown the work that man may do.

Oh age of strife! Oh age of life!
When progress rides her chariot high,
And 'neath the borders of the sky,
The signal of the centuries
Proclaim the things that are to be,
The rise of woman to her place
The coming of a noble race.

To be alive in such an age
To live in it, to give to it.
Rise soul, from they despairing knees,
Give thanks with all thy flaming heart,
Crave but to have in it a part.
Give thanks and claim thy heritage
To be alive in such an age.

Two Raindrops
(A Fable)

In "It Can Be Done— Poems of Inspiration." Published by George Sully & Co., New York.

Two little raindrops were born in a shower,
And one was so pompously proud of his power,
He got in his head an extravagant notion
He'd hustle right off and swallow the ocean.
A blade of grass that grew by the brook,
Called for a drink, but no notice he took
Of such trifling things. He must hurry to be
Not a mere raindrop, but the whole sea.
A stranded ship needs water to float,
But he could not bother to help a boat.
He leaped in the sea with a puff and a blare—
And nobody even knew he was there!

But the other drop as along it went
Found the work to do for which it was sent:
It refreshed the lily that drooped its head,
And bathed the grass that was almost dead,
It got under the ships and helped them along,
And all the while sang a cheerful song.
It worked every step of the way it went,
Bringing joy to others, to itself content.
And welcomed the sea as an old-time friend.
"An ocean," it said, "there could not be
Except for the millions of drops like me."

Gone Into Camp

This are the veteran ranks today,
once half a million strong,
And slow and feeble are the feet that
once marched far and long;
One more together they will mark with
slow, uncertain tramp,
To see their comrades who have gone
before them into camp.
The tents are spread—the low, green tents, whose curtains tightly
close;
No reveille will waken those who
sweetly here repose;
No more their weary feet will toil o'er
highways rough and damp—
For them the long, hard march is done
—for they've gone into camp.
Their comrades come with songs and
flowers, the banner of their love
Floats proudly out upon the air, their
low, green tents above;
Ah, many a mile they followed it with
strong and steady tramp,
Before they heard the order given—
"Break ranks—go into camp."
Soon all the weary feet will halt, the
last march will be made,
For them the low, green tents be
spread on hillside or in glade;
No more together they will march with
slow and broken tramp—
To all the order will be given—"Break
ranks—go into camp."

MANY USES FOR STRAWBERRIES

Dear Social Corner Members: There are three good reasons why strawberries should be used frequently on our spring menus. They are good to look at, delicious taste and, excepting a few people for whom, because of some idiosyncrasy these berries are forbidden, they are most wholesome.

Strawberries contain both citric and malic acid and also some salts of lime. They are especially good for people of a bilious temperament and physicians sometimes prescribe a generous use of them in cases of malaria fever, and the gout. In the countries where wild strawberries grow abundantly they are highly recommended for pulmonary troubles. These little wild berries are much sweeter than the cultivated ones and are easily digested, even by some who cannot eat the berried brought from market. Strawberries can be served in an endless number of ways for breakfast, luncheon or dinner and their fragrance as well as their beauty, add much to the enjoyment of any meal, whether formal or informal.

I am sending a few tempting recipes for desserts which have the appetizing flavor of strawberries, pineapple and orange. They call for a small amount of the fruit and form pleasing variations if not made from the usual way of using berries but using different fruits. These are original and are especially for a menu for hot weather. In August th se recipes will come in handy using raspberries, cherries or any kind of delicious fruit such as peaches. I make a great many of these recipes with canned goods for winter. Have been working on them for hot weather but can use them any time in the year. With banana they are delicious. I have never seen anything like the recipe in print that I am sending in.

Baked Bananas: Take as many bananas as you wish for breakfast, wash (do not peel) split them and squeeze into each some of the juice from a lemon. Bake in a moderate oven about 10 to 15 minutes. When done serve with whipped cream.

Custard for Fruit Sponge: Beat the yolks of three eggs until light and beat in gradually three fourths cup of sugar, flavoring to taste. Scald 2 cups of milk, and stir into this, then put back over the gas into a double boiler and cook as boiled custard. This may be flavored with the grated rind of orange or lemon. Crushed strawberries can be added.

Marshmallow Mound: Remove the inside of a loaf of sponge cake so that only the shell is left. Fill with a mixture made with a pound of marshmallows, 1 cup of nut meats, a cup of marachino cherries and a half cup of cream, flavored with cherry and tinted with the marachino juice. Heap with a half pint sweetened cream.

Strawberry or Orange Whip: Put the white of one egg into a mixing bowl, set in a pan of crushed ice or ice water and beat until the egg begins to froth. Then add about a tablespoon of crushed strawberries, or if you use orange the orange pulp, and beat vigorously. Continue beating and adding berries or orange pulp until one cup of either has been put in and the whole is light and well filled with air bubbles. Beat in one cup of sugar, a little at a time, add two teaspoons of lemon juice and serve in glasses with a little whipped cream on the top. This must be ice cold and served soon.

Frozen Summer Custard: The yolks of 3 eggs, 1 cup of sugar, 1 quart sweet milk. Beat the yolks of the eggs very light, adding one cup of sugar, a little at a time. Scald 1 quart of sweet milk but do not boil, pour into the eggs, beating vigorously all the time. Put on the fire in a double boiler and cook until it will coat the spoon. Add a speck of salt, set in a cold place until ready to freeze. Then add the stiffly beaten whites of the eggs and one half cup of some kind of fruit, sweetened to taste. When frozen pack in salt and ice, until ready to serve.

Banana Cream: One lemon, 3 tablespoons cornstarch, 1 teaspoon water, 1 cup of sugar, 3 cups of boiling water, 2 eggs, 1 cup whipped cream.

Take the juice and rind of the lemon add 2 tablespoons of cornstarch dissolved in the 2 tablespoons of water and one cup sugar. On this pour three cups boiling water, add three egg yolks. Boil until it becomes thick. Then take from the fire, stir in the whites of the eggs beaten and set away to cool. When ready to serve add 2 tablespoons of whipped cream flavored with vanilla, with banana whipped into the cream.

A Delicious Strawberry Jelly: Mash 2 cups of strawberries well and add one pint of cold water. Let this stand for one hours then add four tablespoons of lemon juice, 2-3 cups of sugar and white and shell of an egg. Place over the fire and beat until boiling, let boil briskly for five minutes (only). Soften two tablespoons of granulated gelatine in four tablespoons of cold water and stir into the fruit juice. Remove from the fire and when cool strain through a jelly bag. If this is not as red as desired, a little fruit coloring may be added. Set on ice until needed. Serve with whipped cream.

I think this makes the best strawberry jelly I ever used.

KITTY LOU.

SOME GOOD IDEAS

Dear Editor and Social Cornerites: How many things catch our eye when we call at other homes. For instance, a well learned man had his pants folded on a table leaf and two other leaves on top and it did the pressing trick O. K.—a novel device. A woman always gets out with her potting beef, cuts fine and tries it out to scraps, puts in beef, sears or browns each side with very little water, tight cover, cooks slowly and steadily. Cheap meat of any kind is made delectable this way.

The hard ends of asparagus make a nourishing broth if cooked in a little cold water till juice is extracted. Use say one pint of water, add 1-2 as much sweet milk, salt, pepper, butter size of walnut. Saltines or butter crispa go good with this.

Oh, how I enjoy the new vegetables as they come along. Every one must be suited with weather of all kinds for all kinds of folks. No complaint.

Hello N. O. T., you old tease.

TURKEYS AND CHICKENS

Dear Social Corner, Editor and Sisters: I have been ill nearly all the time since last fall. I did not go outdoors for four months, but am going out a little now. It has been a cold, dry spring, but is better now.

My daughter has just taken about 100 turkey chicks and 100 white leghorns from the incubator, and will set it again for later chicks. She has about 100 hens from last year, laying daily. And the last year's turkeys and hens are laying well.

The sisters have been very kind in writing, and I will try to write to the Corner again soon.

With good wishes for all.

SOUR MILK RECIPES.

Dear Sisters of the Social Corner: A sour milk recipe is said to bear the same relation to a dinner that a doorway bears to a house. Be that as it may there is certainly no better way of beginning a dinner than with an appetizing soup. The French who excel as cooks never serve a dinner without a soup pot is kept constantly in use in their kitchens and into it goes every scrap of meat and vegetable left from preparing a meal. The resulting stock is used as a basis for innumerable kinds of soups, each given an individual flavor by different seasonings and ingredients.

Now with me I think all good cooks, or American cooks, have what they call a "sour milk" pot. I always keep a large pitcher of sour milk and every morning the milk that is left from the day before is poured into this pitcher and about one cup of cold wate, to every quart of sour milk and with this you can make different dishes for your family and they are really nicer than made with sweet milk. Puddings and short cakes are so much nicer and lighter made of sour milk. I think as far back as the time of Good King Arthur, who in the nursery rhyme stole "three packs of barley meal to make a bag pudding," it must have been made of sour milk. There are so many different puddings you can make. I think most everyone also likes cake. These recipes made of sour milk are very nice. I am selecting and sending a few recipes. Some will probably be old friends of yours But I am sure you will meet some new ones you will be glad to make their acquaintance.

One Egg Sour Milk Cake: 1 1-4 cup flour, 1 cup sugar, 2 rounding teaspoons baking powder, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1 egg, 1 1-2 tablespoon's melted butter, 1 scant cup sour milk, 1 teaspoon vanilla. Into flour sieve place flour, sugar, baking powder and soda. Sift into mixing bowl into measuring cup (which was used for flour and sugar) break egg and beat with a fork. Add butter, then all the remainder of the cup with sour milk, mix with dry ingredients in the mixing bowl, add flavoring. Judgment must be used about the flour, as different flours have different thickening qualities. I find for a loaf cake it takes 1 1-2 cups of flour. Layer and cup cakes I sometimes have used only one and one quarter cups of flour.

The above recipe is not only inexpensive but promises the additional good point of requiring few utensils for mixing. I use this same recipe for loaf cake, layer cake and cup cakes. You can add spices and raisins if desired melted chocolate if chocolate cake is needed.

Sour Milk Choco Cake: 2 eggs, 1-2 cup butter, 2 cups brown sugar, 2 cups brown sugar, 1-3 cup cocoa, 1-2 cup each coffee and sour cream, 2 cups flour, 1 teaspoon soda.

Add coffee to cocoa and let stand until cool. Cream butter and sugar and beaten egg yolk. Add cocoa mixture, then cream and flour sifted with soda and baking powder. Fold in stiffly beaten egg whites and bake in two layers.

Sour Cream Pie Crust: Allow 1 cup pastry flour to each pie, 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1-2 teaspoon soda, 1-2 teaspoon baking powder, 1-2 cup sour cream.

Sift theflour, baking powder and soda three times, add cream and roll out.

In preparing this crust one can make it up and set it in the ice box. You can also make the filling and set that away. It only takes a few minutes to put them together.

Sour Milk Biscuit: 2 cups flour, 4 teaspoons baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, 2 tablespoons butter, 1 teaspoon salt, sour milk to make a soft dough. Pat down with hands, cut out with small cutter. Melt butter and sweet milk and brush the top of the biscuit. This makes them a golden brown. The secret of good biscuit is to have a very hot oven.

Any one can make good biscuit, but it takes a good baker to bake them.

I think Sister Paula with her ham recipes and me with my sour milk will furnish material for the sisters to cook with, don't you Paula?

ETHELYN.

WORKING UP LEFT OVER HAM

Dear Corner Sisters: For the benefit of those who are looking for something new I am sending these recipes:

Baked Ham with Noodles and Macaroni. One cup cooked ham, 2 cups noodles or macaroni, one cup milk, half cup crumbs, one tablespoon, butter half teaspoon, salt and pepper mixed. Grease baking dish and place in alternate layers, cooked ham and macaroni or noodles cooked, season, add milk, cover with bread crumbs, dot with butter and brown in the oven 30 minutes.

POUND CAKE RECIPES

Dear Corner Sisters: A sister wished a pound cake recipe. These recipes are all true and tried.

Cold Water Pound Cake: Half a cup of butter, 2 cups sugar, 3 eggs, 1 cup cold water, three cups flour, 1 teaspoon cream tartar, 1-2 teaspoon soda.

Cream butter until like sponge, then add sugar, beating it in slowly. Beat eggs to a froth, put cream tartar in 1-2 glass of water and the soda in the other half, pour together and then beat into cake. Now add flour well beaten in.

Pound Cake with ten eggs: 1 pound butter worked back slowly to a cream, then add one pound powdered sugar, beating in all the while. Add ten eggs beaten to a froth, add one half glass of brandy, one glass of wine, and one pound of flour, after which beat well for 20 minutes, bake in moderate oven with an even heat.

Pound Cake: Heat six eggs to a froth then add a pound of sugar, 1-2 pound of butter, beat all well together. Dissolve one half teaspoon soda in one half cup of milk, take a pound of sifted flour and rub a teaspoon of cream tartar through it with your hands, add the sugar and butter, stir all thoroughly together, flavor it to your taste and bake in quick oven.

Oat Meal Cookies: Put rolled oats through the meat grinder until you have four cups. To this add 3 cups of flour, 1 cup of white sugar, one cup shortening, either pork drippings or butter (not lard); 1-2 teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon soda dissolved in one cup sour milk. Mix soft. Have some dates pooled and spread open. Roll out the dough, breaking the other half over the dates. Press firmly together with the rolling pin. Cut cookies in any desired shape and bake in a quick oven. They are delicious.

Molasses Pound Cake: 1 quart molasses, 1 pint of water, six and a half pints of flour, one ounce of soda, one half ounce of alum. One heaping cup butter, 6 eggs, one ounce cinnamon, one pound of raisins. Boil the alum in part of the pint of water and let cool before mixing with the other ingredients. Instead of alum one ounce of cream tartar may be used. Bake on medium oven.

A UNIQUE PARTY

Dear Social Corner Friends: Perhaps some of you have wished to give a party, but cost and work were the "bug-bears" that deterred you. Here is one I attended that minimized cost and labor, but was very novel and highly amusing.

The invitations aroused no end of curiosity. They were written with a heavy black pencil on ragged wrapping paper and read:

"A Hoboes' Convention there's going to be,
And we want you there as sure as can be.
So won't you come as a Hobo dress.
And join the fun with all the rest?"

Date, time and place were put in the lower left-hand corner.

The hostess told me these had evoked several novel replies. One was written on a scrap of paper and said, "Chairman of Hoboes' Convention: Ishall be pleased to change my route, and I'll be there without a doubt."

"Always a Hobo."

As the guests met, shrieks of laughter burst forth. All had faithfully observed the "As a hobo dress."

Some women looked like suspicious gypsies, others like dissipated, unkempt, beragged beggar-women. Several men had grease painted their nose and cheekbones a gin-blossom hue, and smudged their faces with burnt cork to stimulate a much needed shave.

It was hard to believe that these vagabonds were really some of our best citizens. While en route, some had encountered a policeman who eyed them most suspiciously.

Roars of laughter filled the air as the preacher arrived attired in a ragty, tattered coat badly frayed and clumsily patched trousers, a mad red necktie sans collar, dilapidated yellow shoes held together with twine, and a wreck of a hat with the top knocked out.

Ordinarily, he is a most dignified personage, but even he had entered whole heartedly into the spirit of the occasion.

Our hostess' home adjoined a bit of woodland. Over the front she'd put a huge sign, Hotel De Gink. Another under it was, To The Back Door For Handouts.

The handouts were four frankfurters two potatoes, and a small apple pie tied up in a bandanna handkerchief and slung on the end of a stick. One was given to each guest together with a tin can filled with coffee. The partly detached lid served as a handle. Then they were told to follow the arrows which would bring them to "Ozone Hall" where the convention would take place.

With sticks flung over shoulders, the tramps started a zigzag march around bushes and trees until they reached a picturesque spot in the woods. This was Ozone Hall.

The men felled a dead chestnut tree and a wood-sawing contest began to the tune of a harmonica that the host played. As the music grew faster and faster, one after another, the laughing and breathless victims were forced to quit. A prize given to the last to succumb: A corn-cob pipe for the man, and an inexpensive basket for the woman.

A fire was built and all gathered around it to roast their spuds and hot-dogs, and heat their coffee. The dusk, the glow of the fire, the fantastic shadows, and the queer looking individuals toasting their victuals presented the wierdest and most picturesque scene imaginable. Everyone remarked about it.

A vote was taken to ascertain who should be king of the hoboes. The crown—a tin can—went to the tramplest looking man. The hostess led him to his throne—a rock under the largest tree—and gave him some papers—jokes, funny stories, etc., that had been torn out of old newspapers and the like to distribute among his hobo subjects.

The remainder of the evening was spent around the fire reading these aloud, singing old familiar songs and chatting.

The hostess also gave the king an official looking scroll that was made out of paper that comes on wide ribbon bolts. He unrolled it and in a most dignified tone read,

"I've read many thrills that were printed;
I've been moved by some of these things;
Now I've had my own great adventure,
That lifted me up with the kings.
I've never been fired with ambition,
Still here I'm a great famous man,
For tonight I'm King of the Hoboes;
Your pikers beat that if you can?"

Everyone went home voting it the best time ever.

IRVA LYNN.

GRATEFUL FOR ASSISTANCE

Dear Cornerites: Well, just time enough to say we are all on the improvement line here, and mismated shoes no longer in vogue? Presume some of my capable committee, thought, I might have become a cripple.

To each one who assisted me for our May dinner, also to those who served on the program, not forgetting all those who joined in the kitchen act with pans and dishwipers, I wish to express my sincere thanks. Have been busy every minute since, hence the delay. Was substituting again a few days.

Jill: Was sorry I did not see you on Lebanon South Corner day when I went.

Hope Friday will come and see us when vacation comes.

Dont Worry: Often think how you helped us, and we always wish we were there again.

Twice Twenty and All: How I wish I could have been with you June 5.

NEIGHBOR EVEREADY.

APPRECIATES CORNER MEMBERSHIP

Dear Social Cornerites: I was tickled to death when I heard I was accepted into the Corner and also like my pen name. I thought I might pick someone elses' pen name so I left that to the editor's good judgment.

Im afraid that I don't know a single person who belongs to the Corner. I wonder if I shall ever know any of them? A good many of them live out of town. I can't get to any of the meetings unless I have a car either. Well, anyhow I can write, can't I?

I see a great many people are afraid of thunder and lightning. I'm rather uneasy when they are on, myself, but there is no use in hiding under the bed or in the clothes closet. If you are meant to go that way you'll go no matter where you are.

Perhaps I'd better stop and let someone else who has a better letter take up the editor's time and space.

ANDY.

FASTENING HEAVY BLANKETS ON LINE

Dear Social Corner Friends: As a sister has asked what I am doing will say that today I have been putting away blankets and winter coats until another fall, as I don't believe we'll need them for a while.

I did think we might use them all summer but judging by Monday's and Tuesday's weather, I think not.

Certainly we are having summer heat now, and aren't the thunder storms dreadful. And I never saw hail stones even in a winter storm, like those that fell in Saturday's storm.

Many thanks to Cliff for the poem and I believe your version is correct.

I first had the poem on a valentine sent to me, by a great aunt when I was only a young girl.

She and I both knew that I had a hasty tongue and it made quite an impression on me. For many years I kept the valentine and then, as it will happen, sometimes, it was mislaid and lost. I am glad to get it again, and I can profit from it even yet.

When hanging heavy blankets or quilts on the line, instead of putting the clothes pins over the line, try putting two or three pins up and down the sides of the quilts, pushing the pins over the quilts just as far as they will go.

They never blow off, if pinned this way.

Hope all the sick ones will soon be better.

O. D.

HINTS TO HOUSEKEEPERS

Dear Corner Sisters: Am sending in a few hints to housekeepers.

Put a few slices of raw potatoes into soup that is too salty. They will absorb the surplus salt.

Try putting a tablespoon of vinegar in your hot lard to keep your doughnuts from absorbing fat.

Put a cloth on a burn then keep it saturated with sweet spirits of nitre and it will not blister.

Rub your fingers with a piece of soap also under your nails before you polish the stove or any other rough work. This will remove any dirt or stains under the nails quickly when you wash your nails.

To cut new bread dip your knife in hot water. When the bowl or bath tub pipes become clogged, mix a handful of soda and another of salt and force down the pipe. Leave for a half hour then pour boiling water down the pipe.

Use cold water on cocoa and blood-stains.

Try a piece of flannel dampened with spirits of camphor on stains on mirrors and window glasses.

Your new broom will last longer if you scald it in hot soda before using.

To take out rust spots, wet, rub on cream of tartar and place in the sun.

When laundering your handkerchiefs break up a quarter of an ounce of arris root and tie it in a piece of muslin. Boil this in with the handkerchiefs for a short while. You will find that after they are ironed they will have a delicate and very refreshing odor.

CREPTON RAMBLER.

THE PRINCE'S GREEN FROG

Dear Sisters: Did you ever hear about Prince Edward's pet frog? I will tell it as it was told to me. You see I am short of material and will fill in with this. It all happened some years ago when a troublesome cold had kept young royalty confined for days in a sick room.

He had grown impatient under various disagreeable doses and was not at all amenable to the good counsels of his tutor until the latter chanced to mention a little girl of his acquaintance who was also suffering from influenza, but who bore the affliction like an angel. This interested the prince immensely.

"I'd like to know that girl," said he with serious enthusiasm, adding: "And at any rate I'm going to send her a present."

He thought for a moment or two, andh then went on musingly, "What shall it be. Grandmother says princes always give presents of things they are most fond of. I think I like best Lord Roberts and my beautiful green frog that jumps so well."

Then came another period of deep thought, and then with a decisive nod of his head; "I like Bobs very much, but I like my frog best, that sensible little girl shall have my frog."

And the frog was send with the compliments of the then heir presumptive to the throne of the British empire.

Plain Jane: Have you heard anything concerning the Banana Contest? Have you tried in the Did Jever Contest? The one who wrote Didjever see a Rag Doll up in the attic?" Won $100.

Explains The Pin

Dear Editor and Sisters of Corner: Many thank sfor pin. Those who have noticed me wearing it have made inquiries as to what it was for. I have been very glad to give them information fo our Social Corner.

Ready: I am wondering what you are doing. It's a long time since I've heard from you.

Balsam Fir: I enjoy your writings. You will hear from me when I go back to the city. I am spending my two weeks vacation with Beecy. It came early this year, first in time fro me to help Beccy's daughter finish up odd jobs. I love this time of year to be out weeding and to dig in the flower gardens. She has two pansy beds, with over 40 varieties and the variegation, is wonderful. I never saw anything like them for size. Some are as large as pinks.

May has been rather cold, and backward but every thing is doing fine. It has been a very warm day for June 3, nice south breeze coming up tonight. I believe this is the day appointed for the Corner picnic. I am with you all in spirit, it would seem good to be with you, for I presume I might run on to some old friends I haven't seen in 16 years, as I did ten years back in visiting Willimantic friends.

Best wishes,

FROZEN.

Maine.

APPROVES PIN AND IDEA

Dear Social Corner Friends: Perhaps it is my turn to add a few lines to help keep the Corner page full. First I wish to thank the editor for sending me a Social Corner pin which I shall wear to all Corner gatherings which I shall attend. The pin is a very fashionable plain pin with yellow back ground with the words Social Corner in plain letters of black. There could not be two better colors for a pin, which is much better then the little yellow bow.

It is pleasing to see how nicely the writers are keeping the page full from week to week. As housecleaning is over there will be much time for the Corner people to meet quite often and know who is who.

Papas Boy and Crimson Rambler: I know you will excuse my delay in answering letters when I write you which I have to do in the near future. I will not forget you. From one of the old Corner friends.

RURAL DELIVERY.

SUGGESTIONS DO HELP

Dear Social Corner Sisters: I have been trying to get time to write for some time. First I want to thank the editor for my pin, also the sisters that sent my birthday cards—Crimson Rambler, Mavis, Aries, E. M. R. C. P., Mrs. K. and Annie H.

Oh, Mavis, how have we guessing. Yes, I have people that work in Taylor Atkins. I also worked there a few years ago. Can't you give me more of clue?

Bud: Have been looking for a letter for a long time from you to see if I could make out who you are.

I want to thank the Willimantic sisters for the nice time Mavis and I had at their meeting.

Theoda: I was going to ask you if you wanted to ride home with me that day I met when we were ready to go you and gone.

Rosy Posy: I got your number to W. Can't say I knew you especially by Mrs. Give me a clue and then see.

Betty T.: How are your eyes now? Hope they are all well. The milk was O. K. Don't get the that kind here. We got in a very hard showers that day and to make matters worse had a flat tire so had to sit until it was over. It hailed so hard the ground was white.

Amy: How are you? All well I hope. Olive: Did you go to any of the pictures? I looked every night for you but didn't see you. Many thanks for I got much help from them and would have gone every night if I had known it in time. I joined the class and it was well worth it.

Janice: I was interested in your suggestions in dealing with children, and think it a much better way than a great many have. I have a neighbor that keeps telling her daughter she is a dumbell and that she won't get through grammar school until she is 16, so she has failed in everything this year. I think it is an injustice to the child and it has made her loose all confidence in herself. I said, "Well you keep telling her that and you can make up your mind that she won't." Suggestions with a little kindness along with them go a long way I have found. Hope all are enjoying this nice weather, and best wishes to all.

ANNA Z.

RIGHT IDEAS

Dear Social Corner Friends: It is time that every teacher and mother should protest against the publishing of old fake ideas about the care of children.

In one of the latest magazines an article written by a man, who doubtless is a skilled physician, but one who knows very little about the proper development of the child mentally and morally, dwells on that idea that has made so much "trouble—"to let the child lie there and cry. Let him lie and cry until he gives up, even if he cries from pain or from skin irritation or some other discomfort. Taking him up will not cure his trouble, but will form the habit of crying for everything he wants." How absurb. An infant is just a person. If an adult suffers pain we try to plan something to interest him and to take his mine off of his suffering as much as possible.

A man fatally ill of a painful disease was comforted by music, and his daughter spend many weeks singing or playing the piano much of the time to help her father bear the pain. An infant should be comfortable and happy and until he is able to sit up and move around some he can get very little change of position unless some one will hold him occasionaly a little while. At this age he sleeps most of the time anyway. Another error "punishment should never be omitted, it should not be severe, but should be sure." Any good horse or dog trainer will tell you that punishment has no place at all in training the young. Any helper who would strike or kick or be unkind to the horse or dog would be discharged. If the horse kicks or runs the trainer apparently takes no notice of it, it is just the animal life and activity of the young and if unnoticed probably will not happen again. Unkindness would make him vicious and ugly and treacherous. The young horse or dog soon shows strong attachment to the owner or caretaker and soon learns how to do what is expected of him and is safe and useful in all the ways he has been taught. Is a child less capable of learning? He writes "It is hard to believe that the presence of a grandmother living in the home can be a source of danger to the child, but anyone with medical experience knows that children are better off when brought up under single authority." As, punishment and bossing are not the way to develop a child, so authority is not in it at all.

The finest thing that could have happened to my oldest child was that we lived in the house with his two grandmothers until he was seven years old. Then school and other children took their place in his life and interests.

The two old ladies enjoyed teaching the child and he spent much of his time with them.

His first reading and spelling and history lessons and many good ideas he recieved from them.

A young child and especially the only child in the family requires more time and attention than the mother can give and maids or hired teachers seldom understand young children or are willing to bother to teach them the simple ideas they now need.

We were started with wrong ideas is the reason we make so many mistakes with children and get so poor results from our training. We had to learn better way from our own experience, and then it was too late to make much use of our knowledge.

No one can know which are the right ideas so long as so many wrong ideas are printed and passed on. Why not be as exact in human affairs as in mechanical. Years age writers ridiculed every new idea in machinery and called the inventor crazy.

No one would think of writing against an invention or discovery now. Why publish the fake in human affairs there are plenty of people who know the right.

Every child should be developed in the physical, mental and moral from his first day. It can only be done by te way we take with his food, his care, his habits each day. Not a matter of your words, but of his actions. He learns to be honest, to be unselfish, to be an agreeable companion if we teach him this is baby's, this is father's or mother's of brother's or the lady's as soon as he can creep must always be things that he can get to, but which he must not touch, not because you would slap him if he took it, not because he must obey commands, but because he recognizes that it is not his. You are giving him moral training in the only way it can be given.

The young respond quickly to right ideas patiently taught and do better than adults, although not every time. Don't expect too much from the young, politely ignore to notice the occasional lapse or if you do notice, just pleasantly remind him of the reasons he has been taught. I saw many reviews and criticisms on a recent novel which is the best text book on child culture I have ever read, but not one of them showed any understanding of child training—just criticised the literary style.

In child culture we need just true facts plainly told, that everyone may have the right ideas to begin with and not have to learn them entirely by their own experience.

TO PREPARE A ROSE JAR

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: Now when roses are so plentiful is the best time to prepare a rose jar, or rose jars. When made from the sweet smelling garden roses it is much more fragrant than when made from any hot house roses, except American Beauties.

Collect 1-2 peck rose petals on a fine day. Put a tablespoonful of common salt in a China bowl. On this lay several handfuls of rose petals, and repeat until all are used. Sprinkle salt on top, press the leaves down with a plate, stir the petals about frequently, and after five days or more, when they have become moist, add three ounces of allspice, and have it again for three or four days. Now add one ounce of bruised cloves, one ounce of broken cinnamon, one ounce of nutmeg, some broken allspice, six grains of musk, add a little lavender or orange flower water. You may add clove pinks (without leaves or stems) violets, orange blossoms or lavender, if you have them. Stir and shake the mixture occasionally and keep it well covered.

Irva Lynn and Gotham: I enjoyed your letters about New York City, as I lived in and near there when a child.

Starlight: I have a copy of the song you mention. I love a starlight night.

Ethelyn: That cake recipe sounded good. But where, pray, shall we obtain the unattainable ingredients?

Sassy: I used to be a baseball fan when I was young. Used to attend every game at Plainfield, New Jersey. Speaking of old volumes, we have a book published 1776 on The Art of Fly-menting. Two others published in 1797, Studies of Nature are dedicated to George Washington.

To the sister who asked for a cure for corns use Sterizo salve and powder. Zono for warts, also lemon juice.

Aune Jerusha: Have only one goosie left and 8 youlets.

Don't forget to write to the Social Corner occasionally during the summer months. Tell us about your travels, vacations, etc. Best wishes to all.

BACK IN CALIFORNIA

Dear Editor and Social Corner Members: I am at home again in dear sunny California. I arrived just a week ago today (May 29) and I never loved California as I do now. It is eight long years since I have been here and I see many changes in California. It is growing very fast. I can't tell you of the thrill that went through me as I was coming into the land of Sunshine and flowers. Such loads of flowers and beautiful ones. Oh! how I wish Golden Rod. White Clover, Old Top, Whoa Jan, Sea Bird, Red Cedar, Courage, Busy Bee, Willywck, Amy, Harleth, Fluffy, Debbit, Theoda, Clio, Violet No. 2 and Honey Buckle, could see them all.

My sister only had eight bouquets in her home the night I arrived.

Sunday I picked the largest bunch of sweet peas. I was invited to spend Wednesday with an old time friend and there I picked oranges and orange blossoms from the same tree.

I do so enjoy the California fruits. I have so longed for the lequats, apricots, figs, oranges, guavas, persimmons, saucer peaches, and satruma plums. The latter are a large dark red solid meet plum.

I thought of you the last Wednesday I was at home and did so wish I could run in to see you all, but I was so busy getting ready to start I wouldn't.

Neighbor Eveready was hostess and I knew she made a good one.

I saw the Pacific ocean when my brother took me for a long ride along the beach. I heard the singing sand and saw the many oil wells working. They work day and night, drawing oil and gas to run our automobiles and other machinery.

Flying machines are very common here.

I hope to hear from anyone who cares to write to me. My address will be, Mrs. C. O. Barrows, 1226 West 4th street, Santa Ana, California.

I will close with love from

CALIFORNIA GIRL.

INTEREST AROUSED IN MEETINGS

Dear Social Corner Sisters: Am hearing so much about the picnic June 5th that it makes me wish I could meet with you. I never have attended any of the gatherings but always read the letters and enjoy them also have tried a number of recipes and find them O. K.

In case I do have the good luck to be at the picnic I wish the editor would send me one of the dainty pins. Many thanks for it. I remain,

JUST PETE.

SENDS IN DESIRED POEM

Social Corner Editor: I am enclosing the poem Watch Your Words, which was requested recently. I found it in an old book, a few years ago.

I once wrote to the Social Corner under the names of Wild West and Black Beauty. But as "there's no name like your own name," I'll sign my childhood nick-name, which I sometimes still hear.

A. NEVADA.

ANOTHER CORNER MEMBER

Editor of Social Corner: I have been reading the Social Corner letters. The lady where I am staying belongs to the Corner and I think I would like to join. She has just received a pin and I would like one.

Will take for my penname.

CHEERFUL.

William S. Clegg was at work in his apple orchard at New Bloomfield, Pa., when he beheld a tin can moving toward him through the grass. He found that a groundhog had poked its head into the can, but discovered it quite another matter to get it out. Clegg pulled off the tightly clasped can and the groundhog scampered away.

POETRY

Wild Roses.

You cannot tame wild roses
Cherish them as you will,
Gather them on meadow,
On roadside or hill—
They will droop as dryads would,
Earth-creatures still!

They are spirit-flowers,
To bonds unreconciled,
Like a captive hermit thrush,
Like a frightened child,
They will not be caressed,
Hidden or beguiled.

They are gypsy-hearted,
Born to sun and air,
They are not to cage in rooms—
They are not to wear.
Set them in a golden bowl—
They would shatter there!

You cannot tame wild roses!
Vainly have I tried;
Now I leave them blooming
Where they abide.
Leave them to the wild bees
By the roadside.

At the Church Gate

Although I enter not,
Yet round about the spot
Oftimes I hover;
And near the sacred gate,
With longing eyes I wait,
Expectant of her.

The Minister bell tolls out
And noise and humming;
They've hushed the Minister bell;
The organ 'gins to swell;
She's coming, she's coming!

My lady comes at last,
Timid, and stepping fast
And hastening hither,
With modest eyes downcast;
She comes—she's here—she's past;
May heaven go with her!

Kneel undisturbed, fair Saint!
Pour out your praise or plaint
Meekly and duly;
I will not enter there,
To sully your pure prayer
With thoughts unruly.

But suffer me to pace
Round the forbidden place,
Lingering a minute,
Like outcast spirits, who wait,
And see, through heaven's gate,
Angels within it.

—William Makepeace Thackeray.

DENIES YELLOW CAB INJUNCTION APPLICATION

Judge Isaac C. Wolfe in the superior court here Friday morning denied without prejudice the application of the Yellow Taxi Co. of New London for an injunction which would restrain the New London Taxi Cab Co. from infringing upon alleged rights of the plaintiff company. The judge inspected cabs operated by both companies and decided that sufficient grounds for an injunction did not exist.

The court held, however, that the Yellow Cab Co., can bring suit for damages or again, petition for injunction should its color scheme or other rights be infringed upon by the New London company. The Yellow Cab Co. has brought suit for damages of $1,000 against the New London Co., again claiming that the latter concern was encroaching upon rights exclusively controlled by the Yellow Cab Co.

Judgment in the sum of $5,540.62 was entered by Judge Wolfe in the foreclosure suit brought by James C. O'Connor of New London against the Turpo Chemical Co. of Groton and this city. The first Monday in June was named as the redemption time limit.

In the case of O'Connor and others against the Frank J. Ball & Co. of New London an order allowing and disallowing claims filed with the receiver was entered.

Foreclosure judgment by sale was granted in favor of the Bankers Trust Co., of this city against Edna Schatler and others. The property is at 171 Broadway, this city.

Matters that went off the list were the following: Tanner vs. Dawley, admr., judgment on demurrer sustained; Ford vs. Harwood, et al motion for judgment; Ford vs. Rohan, et al, motion for judgment; Frank W. Browning, receiver, vs. John A. De Wito Co.; and Myrtice E. Fielding Germaine vs. James O. Germaine, that case be placed on the uncontested list for failure to plead.

Matters that were postponed were as follows: Artimio Angeloni vs. The Connecticut Co., and Zoradi Angeloni vs. the same defendant, hearing on demurrer; Mary Beertzel Barry vs. Fred Barry alias ——, that case be placed upon uncontested list for failure to plead; and H. G. Craig and Co. Ltd. et al vs. Uncas Paper Board Co., argument of demurrer to petition of the Downingtown Manufacturing Co.

Reply to cross-complaint is to be filed in two weeks in Essie Hardy Parker vs. Frederick H. Parker.

AMERICAN LEGION

Each day that carries the World-war farther away in time and memory the fatal consequences of its ferocity mount higher and higher.

A war fought with hitherto unknown engines of destruction racked bodies in untried places, subjected the mind and tissue of humans to strains they were entitled for. In consequence the war toll grows greater. Men apparently well collapse and die. Too, too many of them!

Fifteen of these war torn men die every day. When tonight comes and more men are at the supper table with their wives and children, fifteen of the men who fought the fight six and half years ago will have crossed the Great Divide. And tomorrow—and the next day—fifteen more!

To rescue these disabled and give them temporary care and permanent cure is the objective of The American Legion and the reason why it now seeks a $5,000,000 Endowment Fund to guarantee for all time the adequate financing of its rehabilitation work. The American Legion seeks them out through its 11,000 Posts and brings them aid before aid becomes wasted effort.

There is still another side of the picture. As these fifteen veterans succumb to visible and invisible wounds contracted years ago, the families remain. The babies who were unborn when the last American barrage swept through the Argonne—what of them? —these children whose fathers paid with their lives the stakes of war? Today 5,000 of them are penalized by loss of childhood privileges and opportunities because their fathers made up the growing casualty list. Hundreds of them are emergency critical cases needing immediate care.

The American Legion promises these children a proper home, a real opportunity to get ahead in life and plans to finance these pledges by its endowment fund. Upon itself the Legion has taken the burden of inadequately for these disabled and orphans. But it feels that the obligation is equally the public's for whose sake the wounds and sickness were sustained, and for the protection of whom the lives of the fathers were given.

Hence, the Legion seeks the aid of all Americans by contributions to this Endowment fund. It is a worthy endeavor of the Legion's and appeals to the hearts of all generous Americans.

JUNIOR AMERICAN MECHANICS

On June 17 this Council's degree team will work the degrees in Waterbury. A large delegation is also going with the team.

Plans are under way for a picnic, which will be held on July 4th. Councils from Noank and New London, also the Daughters of America will be present. The features of the picnic will be the ball games between the three councils. Captain Wallace is building up a strong team, which will no doubt bring home the silver cup which is offered as a prize.

GRANGE.

Rose night in charge of Mona will be carried out at the meeting of Norwich grange, No. 712, next Wednesday evening in Steiner hall. The members are anticipating a programme full of interest, making one of the pleasant social occasions which mark the grange meetings. The last meeting in May was a Maybasket night.

WIFE WEEPS AS HER HUSBAND GOES TO JAIL

A sentence of $200 fine and 30 days in jail on each of two counts was given by Judge C. B. Waller in the criminal common pleas court here Thursday afternoon to Wazel Szewczuk of the Lake's Pond district, Waterford when the jury through its foreman, John F. Richardson, reported that it had found the man guilty on the count of reputation and of keeping liquor with intent to sell.

Szewczuk was allowed a few minutes to say goodbye to his wife and small daughter who were in court, but when Sheriff Sydney A. Brown led the man out to take him by automobile to the New London jail, the woman followed along weeping violently and grabbing hold of her husband, so that she had to be held back before the

Judge Crandall, in the police court this morning put Mrs. Sara Barca Cardello out of the liquor business. That is he put an end to her business as a booze seller, if the judgment he pronounced is respected and the police see that such watch is kept on the Cordella place that no booze shall be sold there. The woman sold liquor to John Wilson and he became so intoxicated that he was arrested and penalized in the police court yesterday. Then officers took John in hand and he blew out such information as he possessed with the result that he disclosed that he bought liquor at the Cordella place. Officer Clarence Martin conceived a plan to get more liquor at the Cordella place and to secure evidence that would convict the seller of violation of the prohibition law. The policeman donned overalls and with Wilson visited the Cordella place where the pair were welcomed and where Mrs. Cordella handed out a pint of gin and in payment thereof took two nice dollar bills that had been carefully marked, so that they could be distinguished from other currency of the government. The price was high, but the gin was worth to the city and to the policeman all it cost, as Judge Crandall ordered Mrs. Cordella to pay into the court the sum of $300 for her indiscretion. He also ordered her to be confined in jail for ten days, but relented when it was announced that the woman had seven children, dependent upon her and her husband for support. The husband is a collector of waste papers, from the stores along State street and he is said to have a business that pays a comfortable sum each year. Mrs. Cordella was told by the judge that he was in possession of information that she had been selling liquor the past eight years, but she denied that she had catered to the thirsty for so long a time, saying that she had been selling only two months. "You go out of the business," was the admonition of Judge Crandall, "for if it becomes known that men are going into and coming away from your home and that they obtain liquor there you will be prosecuted on the reputation your appearance and conviction today has established."

Octave Picard, employed in the kitchen at Connecticut college, became intoxicated yesterday and spent last night in the police station. Today he was allowed to go back to his employment, provided he will still be hired there, on a suspended judgment.

James Cassidy, an old-timer, was taken from a New Haven railroad train he had ridden here from Boston on the couplings between cars. James represented that he was a railroad worker and being out of funds sought to get to New Haven without paying for his ride. That story did not sound good to Judge Crandall so he fined the man $5 and he went to jail to stay until after the boat races on the Thames. The judge reasoned that if James was a bona fide railroad worker, his associates would arrange for him to get to work.

The funeral of Mary J., widow of Felix M. Stebbins, was held this afternoon at 2:30 o'clock at her residence 47 Williams street, and was attended by a large assemblage of mourners. Rev. Chester H. Howe, pastor of the First Baptist church, conducted the services. The bearers were John Holland, Winder E. Reed, James C. Nelson and George Hobron. Burial was in Cedar Grove cemetery.

Lucy A. Neff today said to her father, C. Tyler Landphere, of Groton, a parcel of land on Raymond street, this city. Mrs. Neff yesterday disposed to her father her title in a house and lot on the same street.

John B. and Mary A. McCormick have sold a tract of land on Ashcrat road extension to James L. Wilkinson, of Fort Terry.

The automobile owned by Judge Charles B. Waller, of the court of common pleas, which was stolen from in front of Judge Waller's office, Plant building, State street, late yesterday afternoon, has been recovered in Providence, the stolen machine having been abandoned there last night. The Providence police this afternoon took charge of the car and notified the New London authorities of the recovery of the machine.

Commissioner of Motor Vehicles Robbins B. Stoeckel today caused the operator's license of Walter Beaney, 29 Linden street, to be suspended. Beaney was recently convicted in the police court of violation of the automobile laws.

Ruby Conklin Schaeffer, was one of two girls arrested yesterday, charged with lascivious carriage, and who are believed to know something of the alleged robbery of two uniformed men at the Hotel Winthrop several nights ago. She was released upon furnishing a surety on her bond of $250 for trial next Monday, but was taken into custody again this forenoon when state police apprehended the girl at a Thames street, Groton, residence, following George H. Beck, the girl's bondsman, delivering her to the authorities because he had been informed that the girl intended to leave the city for Philadelphia. As a result of Beck refusing to longer become surety on the girl's bond, she is now at the county jail. The Schaeffer girl being arrested, her companion, Florence Joyce Edwards, the later being at liberty on bail, was given a five hour examination at the police station by Sergeants John Cavanaugh and Nelson Smith, in an endeavor to obtain information against places that are making a practice of selling liquor or are maintaining places resorted to for purposes of immorality.

The weather today was terrific for the addicts to alcoholic beverages. The alcohol heated the blood and created a heart action that human beings could barely stand.

The order of Eastern Star entertained the grand officers at Brainard lodge temple this afternoon. The attendance was large and the interest manifested such as gave assurance to the members that the local council was in a prosperous condition. This evening the visitors were entertained socially.

The hot weather had been to the liking of all concession holders at Ocean beach, for it has driven people to the shore to keep cool and it has brought a larger number of bathers than are usually seen at the beach a month later. The vaudeville entertainers from the Capitol theatre disported in the water at the beach after midnight Thursday, and declared that they never experienced more pleasure in bathing.

CARS DERAILED AT MYSTIC— TRAINS ROUTED VIA PLAINFIELD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 5.—Traffic on the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad was interrupted and about three hours late this afternoon and evening, when six cars of Train P. N. 1, en route from Providence to New Haven was derailed at Mystic. All through trains between New London and Providence were operated by way of Plainfield and Putnam until the derailed cars were gotten back on the iron. The wrecker from Midway was dispatched to the wreck and about 8 o'clock one main line tracks were cleared so that late trains could be operated on the main line. No one was injured.

The train which left Providence about 4 o'clock, was passing through Mystic shortly after 5 o'clock, when the draw-bar of one of the cars became dislodged, causing the six cars following to leave the rails, the derailed cars straddling both main line tracks and causing a complete blockade of through traffic.

MARKET WAS ACTIVE

New York, June 5—A sudden revival of activity and strength in the oil shares after midday checked a decidedly reactionary tendency and turned the course of prices upward in today's market. The heavy buying of the oil shares received its stimulus from the publication of government statistics showing record-breaking gasoline consumption.

Exo-American B assumed the leadership of the oil group, climbing nearly three points to 79 1-4 and then easing slightly on profit-taking. Midcontinents Petroleum moved up over a point to within a small fraction of the year's high in anticipation of early resumption of dividends. Net gains of a point or more also were recorded by Barnsdall A, General Petroleum, Atlantic Refining, Middle States common and preferred, Phillips, Sinclair, Standard Oil of New Jersey, Tidewater and White Eagle.

Standard industrials were under pressure from the start, breaking below their previous resistance points, but they received strong buying support when the turn came in the oils and closed generally higher. U. S. Steel common rallied from 113 5-8 to 114 1-8 off 1-8; Baldwin closed 1-2 higher at 117 3-4 after selling as low as 111 3-4, and American Can closed nearly a point higher at 138 3-4 after touching 135 1-2.

Bullish operations were successfully conducted in a number of specialties. Further accumulation of Cushman's Bakery sent that stock up three points to a new high record at 85 on reports of an early merger with the Purity Bakeries Companies. Hot weather continued to provide the stimulus in the demand for American Ice and Coca Cola, which attained new peak prices at 114 3-8 and 120 3-4 respectively. Remington Typewriter, Moon Motors, American Type Founders, Tobacco Products and Mack Trucks first preferred also advanced into new high ground. Bethlehem Steel and Pressed Steel Car sank to new lows.

Except for the establishment of a new peak price by Lehigh Valley at 53 7-8, there was little interest in the rail shares which moved within narrow and irregular limits.

Call money renewed at 3 3-4 per cent, but advanced to 4 and thence to 4 1-2 in the afternoon on the withdrawal of about $20,000,000 by local and interior banks for the purpose of evening up their federal reserve balances. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Weakness of French francs, which broke below 4.70 cents to the lowest rate since a year ago March, was the feature of the irregular foreign exchange market. Selling of the French currency was inspired by reports of another financial crisis as a result of the heavy increase in note circulation and advances to the state. Demand sterling ruled fairly steady around $4.85 3-8. Most of the continental rates reacted in sympathy with French francs.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 5—Bond trading was restricted in volume today by the absence of many investment bankers and bond dealers on their annual outing. The market as a result assumed a sluggish appearance and prices turned mildly reactionary.

Foreign developments were decidedly unsettling and prices of European bonds were depressed an average of a point or so. The sharp break in the French francs to the lowest level in more than a year, below 4.70 cents, which accompanied reports of a threatened financial crisis in Paris, contributed to a decline in the French obligations. The allied claims that Germany has failed to disarm cast a pall over the foreign situation.

Oil company liens gave the only outstanding exhibition of group strength in the day's dull market. In company with the petroleum shares, the leading oil bonds, including Pan-American, Skelly and Sinclair issues, responded readily to reports of record breaking gasoline consumption. Little buying support developed for the railroad issues and as a result prices throughout this list eased off. St. Paul, Frisco, Delaware and Hudson and Chicago & Eastern Illinois bonds were among the heavy spots. A sudden demand for Norfolk & Southern 5s lifted the price of this issue three points to a new high for the year.

An offering of $10,000,000 six per cent notes of the Schulte Real Estate Company, Inc., recently formed by the Schulte Tobacco interests, will be made next week.

JUDGE WOLFE ORDERS LONDONS TO GIVE DEED TO COLCHESTER PROPERTY

On or before June 23 this year, Joseph London and his wife Lena of Colchester are directed to give to Annis London of Colchester a deed for a piece of real estate on the Lebanon road, according to a decision handed down here Friday in the superior court by Judge Isaac Wolfe before whom Annie London's suit against Hyman and Joseph London was recently tried.

The claim of the plaintiff was that she entered into an agreement with Hyman and Joseph London, to buy this property for $650, paying $200 down at the time of making the agreement, April 8, 1924, and agreeing to pay the balance by Oct. 1, when the deed was to be delivered. But the sellers refused to carry out the agreement about delivering the deed, and the plaintiff found out that on October 11, 1924 a conveyance of the property was made to Lena London, who is the wife of Joseph and the daughter-in-law of Hyman.

In his memorandum of decision Judge Wolfe says:

I find that the plaintiff on Oct. 1, 1924 was ready, willing and able to fulfill her part of the contract of April 8, 1924, by the payment of the $450 balance due of the contract price and ever since such time has been ready, willing and able to make such payment, but that she has been prevented from so doing by the wilful conduct of the defendants and their refusal to perform the agreement upon their part to be performed.

I further find that the conveyance made by Hyman London to his daughter-in-law Lena London and the attempted conveyance by the defendant Joseph London to the defendant Hyman London were made with the intent and purpose to defraud the plaintiff and to prevent her securing a conveyance of the land in question.

I further find that the defendant Lena London had both constructive and actual notice of the existence of the agreement in question; that the conveyance to her was without consideration, and that she took such conveyance with knowledge of the intent and purpose of the defendants, Hyman London and Joseph London.

I find the issues in favor of the plaintiff and an order may be entered directing the defendant Joseph London and the defendant Lena London to convey to the plaintiff, on or before June 22, 1925, by proper deeds of conveyance, the land in question, upon the tender by her to the defendants Hyman London and Joseph London, or to either of them, of the sum of $450 the balance of said contract price. In the event that said Joseph London and Lena London shall fail to make conveyance as herein set forth, then title to the land in question shall thereafter absolutely vest in the plaintiff.

Costs are to be taxed in favor of the plaintiff.

CARBRAY BACK IN JAIL WITHOUT APPENDICITIS

John (Jack) Carbray, charged with a double shooting in which he wounded his divorced wife and Herman Greiner a week ago Friday night, was discharged from the W. W. Backus Hospital about noon Friday, having been taken there from the county jail as it was thought he was suffering from appendicitis. The patrol wagon was sent to the hospital for Carbray and he was taken back to jail by Officers Clifford Crary, William Sharvan and Daniel O'Neil.

Carbray developed what was thought to be an attack of appendicitis at the jail Sunday and during the afternoon was taken to the hospital on the advice of Dr. Louis T. Cassidy. Examinations and X-ray pictures failed to reveal any sign of appendicitis, according to the hospital authorities.

Greiner, who has a bullet in his face under the right temple, has so far recovered that he has been able to leave the hospital. Anna Weitin Carbray, Carbray's former wife, is still a patient at the hospital.

Since Carbray was taken to the Backus hospital he has been under constant surveillance by Officers William Sharvan and Clifford Crary.

Carbray's case is slated to come up in the city court this Saturday morning, having been continued from last Saturday morning. It is probable that the case will be again continued. In the meanwhile, Carbray, charged with assault with intent to kill, is under bonds of $25,000 which he has been unable to raise.

The popular reaction to the news last Monday morning that Carbray was in the hospital instead of the jail seems to have been to look upon it as a good deal of a joke or a fake. It was believed that the Jamaica ginger that gave Carbray the courage to shoot his wife as she lay in bed, sending two bullets ploughing through the bedspread that was over her, would also account for the cramps and pains and his plea of appendicitis. It was the same kind of courage with which he was filled when he punched his wife in the face and knocked her down on Preston bridge some time ago, besides beating her on several other occasions when his wife called for the police.

CAMPFIRE GIRLS HAVE JOLLY CHILDREN'S PARTY

Denies Motion to Erase

Judge Isaac Wolfe of the superior court has denied a motion to erase, for want of jurisdiction in the suit of Louis Lubchansky of New London vs. Sullivan Granite Co., of Westerly. The denial is without prejudice to a renewal of the motion when certain issues of fact, the determination of which is essential to enable the court to properly pass upon the question of law involved, are determined by the trier or admitted by the plaintiff.

STREET COMMISSIONER MAKES HIS ANNUAL REPORT

Some idea of the magnitude of the work accomplished by the street department during the past fiscal year of the city, may be gleaned from the following summary of the annual report of Street Commissioner John C. Donovan, presented to and accepted by the meeting of the court of common council Friday evening:

The following streets were re-surfaced with gravel or cinders: South, Cahoon, Stetson, Brown, Carpenter, High, Spring, Ward, Summit, Elizabeth, Peck, Cornell, Ann, Fairmount, Colt, Pearl, Forest, North High, Cove, Asylum Star, Talmer, Palmer, Parks, Cliff, Hamlin, Carter, Oak Mt. Pleasant, N. Thames, Hickory, Oakridge, Shipping, Brook, Orchard, Rockwell, Sherman, and Spring Garden, Geer, Woodmansee, Billing, Mulberry, Hamilton, Stanton, Hedge, Boswell, Roosevelt, Newcomb, Kinney, Champlin and Benjamin avenues. These were also covered with either oil, tarvia, or chloride. Every street in the city was oiled or laid with chloride sometime during the season. Boswell avenue was re-surfaced three times, oiled three times and tarvied.

Tarvia was laid on Grove, Spalding, Woodmansee, Broad, Rockwell, Beech, Orchard, Brown, Stetson, Spring Garden, Sherman, Lafayette, Washington, Oneco, Warren and Ward streets.

Thames street was patched with K. P., as was McKinley avenue and Williams and then tarvied.

Crosswalks on all cross streets leading into West Thames were lowered and rebuilt.

Gutters on Union Square were raised and rebuilt.

Shoulders on Shipping street rebuilt.

New gutters installed on Sherman street.

There was 500 feet rail fence erected on Geer avenue and a stone wall built. There was 150 feet iron fence erected on West Thames street. On Mt. Pleasant street there was 125 feet of iron fence erected. On Maple street there was 125 feet of stone wall erected. There was 125 feet stone wall erected on Watrous avenue. Fences were repaired and painted in all districts of the city.

There were 74 trees removed from the city streets in all districts of the city during the past year, and 541 trees were sprayed. Trees were planted on Rockwell street. During July and August there was two very severe wind and rain storms, causing a great deal of damage to trees, up-rooting them and tearing great limbs, which necessitated a great deal of extra work and money in the department of the work.

As there has been much activity along building lines in this city during the past year, about 238 new houses which has necessarily brought a larger collection of garbage and ashes, which was not planned for in the year's appropriation for this purpose, making it necessary to rebuild the Brockway truck to take care of the extra collection, thus making the regular working equipment a truck short. The Quad truck was used for oiling, due to the shortage of city water, none was used for sprinkling purposes, this truck, with the one taken for ashes makes the department two trucks short on regular work. About 9,086 loads of garbage and ashes were collected, averaging about 60 or 70 more loads a week than last year.

The triangle an Centennial Square was made into a small park—Centennial Park. A curb was built around it, grassed and a maple tree planted in the center.

Under the head of unforseen expenditures was Meyer's avenue sewer. This street comes to a dead ending with the grade of the street pitching to the dead ending, with gutters running into private property doing considerable damage to property and causing large washouts and carrying dirt and all sorts of rubbish onto private property. This had to be taken care of at once and the city received permission to cross property and lay over 300 feet of cobble gutters and 160 feet of 18 inch acron pipe.

On account of the entending of the dock at the Richmond Radiator company, this sewer had to be extended into the river for quite a long distance and required much work to be done under water. By the cooperation of the local manager of the Radiator company this work was done by the concern that was employed to build their dock as they were equipped to do work under water, the Radiator Co., and the city paying equally the cost of this work.

Also under the head of unforseen expenditures, was Hedge avenue sewer. This sewer was laid years ago of cement pipe and shortly after the city had accepted this street this sewer cement pipe having worn out, gave way and caused sewer to block and back out into the street. This sewer was underground at the river at a depth of 16 feet and continued at that depth for 30 or 90 feet finishing at a depth of 5 feet for about 275 feet. This had to be rebuilt and laid with acron pipe.

TRUCK HIT BY TRAIN AT G. AND E. CROSSING

Richard McCarthy, driver of one of the trucks owned by the Norwich gas and electric department had a narrow escape from serious injury, if not death, when the truck he was driving was hit by the engine of a New Haven road passenger train Friday afternoon about 5 o'clock at the crossing at the plant entrance off North Main street. One truck had just passed over the railroad tracks and the truck driven by Mr. McCarthy, following close behind, was just going onto the tracks when the forward part of the machine was hit by the engine.

The truck was carried a distance of about 20 feet alongside the engine. Fortunately the driver escaped injury. One wheel and the tool box on the running board were demolished. The train, said to be one of the New York-Boston express trains routed through Norwich on account of the freight wreck on the main line, stopped, but proceeded after several minutes' delay.

H., this week, at their rooms, No. 99 Main street, one candidate was initiated and Mrs. Annie Bellows, chairman of the whist held recently, rendered a fine report. The auxiliary voted to give the hall to Division No. 26 of Taftville for a whist to be held next week, to which the four auxiliaries of New London county have been invited. Remarks on good of the order were made by Mrs. Patrick O'Neil and Mrs. John Moore, after which adjournment was taken and a social time enjoyed.

Starchless bread has been perfected for diabetic patients in a New York hospital.

FLETCHER POST STARTING LEGION ENDOWMENT DRIVE

The American Legion Endowment Drive for $5,000 was opened in Norwich Friday evening at a meeting of Robert O. Fletcher Post No. 4, held at the post rooms on Main street. This drive which is for $5,000 is in conjunction with the national drive for $5,000,000 the income of which is to be used to provide proper homes for orphans of World War veterans and care for disabled veterans not otherwise taken care of by other funds. The drive has the sanction and backing of such men as President Coolidge and Vice President Dawes and has been going over the top in every city in the country.

Robert O. Fitcher Post is canvassing its own members previous to opening the drive for public support to raise the quota assigned for Norwich and pledges received at the opening of the drive totalled over $300 with only a score of members approached. National plans call for a citizen committee and chairman to handle the public drive and this committee is to be secured by the post in expectation that the fund will be raised as quickly in Norwich as it has been in other cities of the state where the drive is already in progress.

During the meeting Comrade Joseph Bellefleur reported that all graves of World War veterans known to the Legion had been marked with Legion grave markers and American flags and votes of thanks were extended to Mrs. William L. Fletcher and Fletcher Post Auxiliary for their donations of poppies for the markers. His report also showed that disabled veterans had been cared for in Legion cars for the Memorial Day parade and that Legion members drove or secured drivers for automobiles to convey the members of Sedgwick Post, No. 1, G. A. R., in the parade. The report was accepted.

Commander Webster D. Copp appointed Comrades Charles Olsen, L. P. Raymond, Warren Wilcox, Rev. E. C. Dunbar, Clifford C. Oat, Joseph Bellefleur and Edwin Yerrington as a committee to secure pledges from Legion members for the American Legion Endowment Fund with a view to raising over $1,000 from post members in the drive before going before the public. At a subsequent meeting of the committee Warren G. Wilcox was elected chairman of the committee and members were notified that they must secure their own team members. The post now numbers over 160 members and the drive is to close, for the past by the end of the coming week.

After matters of post interest were discussed adjournment was taken until the post drive is completed, at which time a special meeting is to be called by Post Commander Copp, for the purpose of opening the drive for public support.

The sacrament of confirmation is to be administered by the bishops Sunday at All Hallows' church, Moosup, and St. Joseph's, Willimantic, after the last mass, and at St. Mary's, Jewett City, and the Sacred Heart, Taftville at 4 p. m.

for the generous patronage they have accorded the Waterman Piano School during the past nine months. Since last September more than eighty students, ranging in age from twelve to sixty years, have enrolled in the Popular and Combination Courses.

Some were beginners, but the majority were discouraged classical students who, after several years tutoring found they could not play the way they wanted to. Our enrollment includes students with from a few months to eleven years previous classical training representing the instruction of practically every piano teacher in Norwich.

We are accepting applications for enrollment next Fall. A small advance payment will reserve a lesson hour for you. Nearly a score of students now studying with other teachers have taken advantage of this plan.

In September we shall open with studios in Putnam, Willimantic, Danielson, Westerly, New London and other towns in Eastern Connecticut. Any teacher or professional pianist desiring to teach this Method where we are not already represented should apply at once to the Director. A fine proposition and many advantages are assured you.

PROFESSOR OF LOUISIANA UNIVERSITY WAS MURDERED

Oscar B. Turner Was Found at Foot of Flight of Stairs—Face Was Hacked Open From the Forehead to the Chin—Blood Stained Handprint on the Handle of an Axe the Only Clue—Police Believe the Assailant Was a Student Who Bore a Grudge Against the Professor.

Baton Rouge, La., June 7—Oscar B. Turner, professor in agronomy at Louisiana State university, today was found lying at the foot of a flight of stairs in the university agronomy build with his throat and face crushed into unrecognizability, evidently with a small fire axe, which was found nearby. A blood stained handprint on the handle was the only clue.

Professor Turner died shortly afterwards without regaining consciousness.

The professor's face was hacked open from the forehead to the chin, with numerous gashes about the throat and chest. He was found by R. C. Markham, a senior agricultural student who had been serving as an assistant instructor to Professor Turner.

Mr. Markham said that paper which was to be used in coming examinations had been missed from the agronomy building, and that he and Professor Turner were to have instituted an inquiry on the missing paper this morning.

The victim's purse and contents were found intact on the body, and police believe the assailant was a student who bore a grudge against the professor.

Officers tonight announced that finger and palm prints will be taken of students in Professor Turner's department of the university, which will be compared with the print found on the axe.

Missing examination papers believed to play an important part in the killing here today of Oscar B. Turner, professor of Agronomy, at Louisiana state university which could not be found before and immediate after the tragedy, have been mysteriously returned to Prof. Turner's desk in the Agronomy building, police announced tonight.

TO REPORT ON ECONOMY OF MOTOR TRANSPORTATION

Washington, June 7.—(A. P.)—The economic importance of motor transportation is emphasized in a report prepared by the American committee on highway transport for submission to their third biennial conference of the International Chamber of Commerce at Brussels this month, as made public today by the Chamber of Commerce of the United States. The report says Americans now spend $8,000,000,000 annually in the purchase and maintenance of automobiles, with latest figures showing 17,500,000 passenger cars and trucks in use in the United States, or one to every seven inhabitants.

The report states, however, that mistakes have been made in the development of motor transportation in the United States.

"The functions which it could best serve and its relations to other transportation factors," it explains, "were not fully understood at the outset and it had taken much time and money to rectify some of the errors. Inferior highways have been made to serve where the cost of maintenance was uneconomically high and traffic justified their replacement with higher types. Motor vehicles have been sold by over enthusiastic manufacturers or dealers where their use was not economically justified or where a different type was warranted. There has been destructive and in some cases disastrous competition between the motor vehicle and the older established form of transportation.

"But as the development has proceeded it has become evident that motor transportation has performed a significant function in eliminating sectional differences and that the manifold uses of modern highway transportation are welding the nation into a homogeneous whole. The development of motor transportation which has taken place in the United States will inevitably come into other countries."

GALE COVERED AN AREA OF 25 MILES IN COLORADO

Wray, Colo., June 7—A gale of tornado-like proportions late yesterday swept through an area of about 25 miles in this section, demolishing more than a hundred buildings and injuring a score of persons, reports here indicated. The authorities here received unconfirmed reports of three fatalities in outlying farming communities.

Telephone and telegraph communication facilities were put out of commission.

The twister started 14 miles southeast of here and passed over an area of about 25 miles long and two miles wide. The center of the gale passed a half mile east of Wray. Although the wind storm passed by here, the town was plunged into pitch black darkness.

Reports here today indicated that the destructive effects of the gale had been wreaked mainly on outlying farming communities and ranches, razing buildings and killing cattle and sheep. Authorities estimated the damage in the section at $150,000.

112 DEATHS WERE CAUSED BY THE RECENT HEAT WAVE

New York, June 7.—(A. P.)—With slightly lower temperatures reported from a major portion of the east, 112 deaths were recorded today as the toll of the eighth day of the heat wave. A sharp drop in temperature was felt in New York city at 11 o'clock tonight with cool weather forecast for tomorrow. Philadelphia, experiencing a 3 degree decrease from yesterday's record of 100, reported 55 deaths resulting from heat. New York city had 26 fatalities, but the medical examiner's office believed that many of the remaining 212 deaths here today were to some extent attributable to the hot spell.

Boston was relieved by a soothing wind, but before this arrived two more deaths were recorded, Lynn and Fall River, Mass., each had one death. Hoboken, N. J., sweltering under a record temperature of 102, had 1 fatalities, Hackensack, with 2 deaths by drowning; Elizabeth, 5, and Bayonne 2.

TUG SUNK IN COLLISION WITH A GERMAN STEAMER

INTENSITY OF HEAT WAVE BROKEN IN NEW YORK

New York, June 7—Unrelenting in its intensity, the heat wave which has held a large portion of the country in its grip entered upon its second week today with a mounting toll of deaths and prostrations.

Although New York City and its environs were fanned by faint breezes which gave promise of relief, the torrid temperatures and boiling sun had claimed before night-fall eleven deaths and fifteen prostrations. Thousands of suffering New Yorkers thronged the nearby beaches where the chill waters of the Atlantic provided relief.

In the city, the ranks of other thousands who had passed the night on the grassy slopes of Central Park and Riverside Drive dwindled as the scorching sun rose into a cloudless sky. Police estimated that more than 30,000 persons spent the night in Central Park alone. Many remained there today, putting a premium on the scattered oases of shade.

Countless other New Yorkers sought relief by keeping quiet in their homes and apartments. Manhattan's streets were almost deserted throughout the day, but country roads and turnpikes were chocked by an endless stream of motor cars on their way to seaside and recreational resorts.

FIVE DEATHS FROM HEAT AND FOUR DROWNINGS

New Haven, June 7.—(A. P.)—The heat wave was broken throughout Connecticut tonight with a fall of temperature of from 20 to 30 degrees but not until after it had taken a toll of nine more deaths in the past 24 hours, five directly from the heat and four indirectly from drowning.

Two bathers, Frank Galler, 18, of Hartford, and Katherine Menser, 13, of Windsor, were drowned in the Connecticut river today when the girl went beyond her depth and the young man tried to rescue her. A man's body was found in the Connecticut river at Middletown and a Southington man was drowned at that place. Deaths directly from the heat were reported in Willimantic, Waterbury, New Britain and West Haven.

A storm broke off the Connecticut coast near New Haven tonight and came up so suddenly that many boatmen were caught off shore and had considerable trouble getting in. One boat was capsized at Mamaguin and four boatmen were rescued after they had been in the water for some time.

The temperature dropped from 100 to 60 throughout the state tonight.

POPULAR DEMONSTRATION FOR KING OF ITALY

Rome, June 7—Victor Emmanuel III, at the expiration of the first quarter of a century of his reign, received today a popular demonstration which could leave no doubt that, whatever party differences may divide his subjects, they are still united in their satisfaction with the present form of government and with having that monarchy personified in the house of savoy.

It was a day of patriotic festivities, with a veritable riot of colors so dear to the Italian sense of gaiety and joyousness.

The participants in this manifestation were drawn from every nook and corner of the empire. Eight thousand mayors came from as many cities, towns and hamlets as spokesmen for the millions of subjects who were unable to come personally, there were also a dozen or more representatives from the various Italian African colonies, who lent an imperial and oriental note to the demonstration.

PRESIDENT AND MRS. COOLIDGE IN MINNESOTA

St. Paul, Minn., June 7—President and Mrs. Coolidge arrived here tonight to attend the Norse-American centennial celebration.

The special train which brought the presidential party from Washington in thirty hours steamed into the Union station at 8:15 p. m., on time to the minute.

As they left their private car, President and Mrs. Coolidge were greeted by Governor Christenson, the mayors of St. Paul and Minneapolis, a committee of 100 prominent residents of the twin cities and a throng which broke into applause and cheers.

They immediately went to the home of Secretary and Mrs. Kellogg to be guests until their departure for Washington tomorrow night. The secretary of state made the trip from the capitol with them, while Mrs. Kellogg awaited their arrival in St. Paul.

Flight of German Airplanes

Berlin, June 6—Thirty-one out of thirty-four airplanes have returned to Berlin from the third lap in the long distance flight competition which began last Sunday. Two "baby" planes also completed the ... but none of the small machines which have joined in from other places than Berlin has thus far completed the trip.

Industry In General Described As Fair

Notable Improvement Has Been Shown in the Textile Branch.

New York, June 7—Emerging from period of rather restricted spring activity, business has entered upon its summer cycle with conditions in most lines of industry generally described as fair. Conflicts of opinion have lines of trade, notably the textile industry, have seen promise of improvement; other, including motor manufacturers, feel that the peak of their trade trade has passed.

Possibilities of a drastic summer recession in business, which have been more or less common in recent years, are considered remote. The extremely moderate expansion in trade activity this year and the absence on specucal this year and the absence on speculative excesses are held to be adequate safeguards against sudden reaction. The impression prevails in the financial centers that business will continue its process of readjustment but maintain an even keel, with a fairly high average of operations.

The latest surveys of the steel situation offered encouragement of this view. The fact that for three weeks the country's steel production had close to seventy per cent. of capacity, the Weekly Reviews explained, might be taken as the measurte of a nearly stabilized market in contrast to the abrupt decline in operations a year ago. Another decrease in the U. S. Steel corporation's unfilled tonnage is admittedly in prospect when the May report is published this week, but the anticipated decline so far has occasioned little concern.

Hopes that foreign developments would speed up Europe's recovery were not fully realized. With the establishment of a $50,000,000 exchange stabilization credit for the lira, it was felt that Italy had taken a long step toward a return to a gold basis and ultimate revaluation of the currency and had strengthened her position for forthcoming debt funding negotiations. France, however, was threatened with another financial crisis as the franc dropped to the lowest level in more than a year, and Gefrmany was warned by the allies that she had failed to live up to all the provisions of the peace treaty.

Railroad conditions offered few opportunities for fait finding. Car loadings continued to break all weekly records for the year. Earnings of all the class one carriers for April despite disappointing results by some of the leading railroads, were nearly $4,000,000 higher than in April 1924. The speed in drafting a reorganization plan for the St. Paul railway, which was outlined last week, indicated that the declaration that confiscatory rates in the northwest were responsible for the road's difficulties and that a readjustment of the St. Paul finances should await a settlement of the rate question.

Record breaking gasoline consumption and additional price advances of crude and refined products created more cheerful sentiment in the oil industry. Stock market activity in this connction indicated that many of the smaller companies were sharing in the increased business.

Abnormally hot weather throughout the country played a part in the business activities of the past week, quickening the retail distribution of seasonal wearing apparel but retarding manufacturing operations in other lines.

OFFICERS ELECTED BY THE ENGLISH SPEAKING UNION

New York, June 7, 1925.—John W. Davis, formerly American ambassador at London, and George W. Wickersham, formerly attorney general of the United States, were re-elected president and chairman of the board of directors, respectively, of the English Speaking Union of the United States, at a meeting of the board held in New York last Friday, this was announced today by John Daniels, national secretary of the organization.

The Chinese in the streets are beginning to fraternize with the volunteers, probably owing to expected arrival of foreign diplomatic representatives from Peking which will lead to discussions, by which the Chinese expect to settle their troubles. # HOSTILITIES WERE BEGUN IN CANTON SATURDAY P. M.

Warfare is Waging Between Troops of the Generals Yang Hsi-Min and Lau Chun-Wan and the Cantonese Forces—The Yannanese Have Erected Barricades Along the Front on the Honan River.

Canton, China, June 7.—(A. P.)—Fighting commenced at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon between troops of the Yunnanese Generals Yang Hsi-Min and Lau Chun-Wan and the Cantonese troops.

A gunboat steamed up the river past Shameen for Honan, firing on the bund there. There was machine-gun and rifle firing on both sides of the river, but it ceased at 5.3 p. m. All the Hong Kong steamers left during the fighting.

While protesting loyalty to the principles of the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen and the Kuomintang party, the Yunnanese generals presented a demand to the authorities to order a cessation of troop movements in the east and north river districts, saying that otherwise they would take the necessary measures to resist.

The authorities replied denouncing their insubordination and dismissing them and appointing General Chu Pei-Teh acting commander of the Yunnanese forces, this was a virtual declaration of war.

General Yang Hsi-Min seized the governor's yamen and the telephone and telegraph line to Hong Kong was cut near Skelung.

The Yunnanese erected barricades along the entire length of the Bund, facing the Cantonese barricades at Honan across the river. Gunboats under the Canton authorities command the river, and the Yunnanese control the whole of the Canton side.

General Hsu Chung-Chi's Cantonese army is approaching from Skelung, with General Yang's troops advancing to meet them. General Chu Pei-Teh, with the Yunnanese and Humanese troops still loyal to Canton, is approaching from the north, and General Lau is advancing to resist him.

The authorities are placing chief dependence on the cadets who have been trained by soviet officers. If Honan is taken the authorities expect to move to Whampoa, the Baptist mission schools at Tunggwelan have closed and the foreign women and children are leaving. It is feared that the Kuomintang party will call a general strike. The cargo loading coolies already have gone on strike.

The present situation has been brought about largely by the exasperation of the Cantonese over the alleged arrogant behavior of hired Hunanese and Yunnanese troops brought into Canton by the late Dr. Sun Yat Sen, president of the southern republic, to enable him to oust General Chen Chiung-Min, former military governor of Canton.

The Yunnanese troops under General Yang Hsi-Min and General Lau Chung-Wan proved to be more domineering than the Hunanese, most of the revenues which should have come into the hands of the Canton administration are said to have been seized by various mercenary commanders, whose troops also cimmitted many crimes. Various efforts made to oust them from the city peacefully failed. It appears that they completely control Canton and the Cantonese troops are endeavoring to return to the city from the outside.

18 BALLOONS START IN THE GORDON BENNETT CUP RACE

Brussels, June 7—Balloon's representing seven countries, took the air this afternoon and this evening in the first renewal of the Gordon Bennett cup race for lighter-than-air craft.

The start was made in perfect weather, although the heat was excessive, a light breeze was blowing from the northeast, and if it continues the course of the gas bags will be over northern France and southward or westward toward the Atlantic Ocean. The balloonist who succeeds in keeping away from the English Channel or Atlantic Ocean for the longest period will win the race.

Ernest De Muyter, the Belgian champion, who won the original Gordon Bennett trophy; Wade T. Van Orman, United States, and Maurice Bienaime, France, are the favorits to win the race. Van Orman carried with him a wireless outfit and will attempt to reach American stations while in the air.

Approximately 150,000 spectators watched the inflation of the balloons and the start from Solbrosch plain. The great bags were late in getting away owing to the gas flowing rather slowly into them. It was nearly 8 o'clock this evening when the last of the competitors cast loose.

The starters were De Muyter in the Belgica, Lieut. Labrousse in the Ville Bruxelles, and Veenstras in the Prince Leopold, representing Belgium; Lieut. Col. Dunville in the Banshee, Captain C. W. Spencer in the Moramar, and Johnson in the Elsie, representing Great Britain; Magdalena in the Duro, De La Rocha in the Hespero Susanas and Captain Peneranda, Spaniards; Van Orman, with William as an aide, and Lieuts. Flood and McCormick, in the two American balloons; Bienaime in the Picardie, Blanchet in the Maroc and Latusgrand in the Charles, representing France; Grassis in the Trionfale, and Ilaris in the Ciampino, competing for Italy, and Doctor Bachman in the Helvetia, who is Switzerland's lone entry.

Both the American bags made beautiful starts. Bienaime, the Frenchman was the first to take the air. Then De Muyter, in the weather-beaten Belgica, which brought the original Gordon Bennett cup to Belgium, went up.

The American competitors received a warm sendoff fro mthe crowd. Ambassador Phillips was one of the last of the spectators to shake hands with his countrymen.

Just before, darkness settled over Brussells most of the balloons still were in sight, drifting lazily in a southwesterly direction. Should the present weather conditions continue the balloons will reach the Atlantic at various points between Dunkirk and Bordeaux, according to the air currents they meet at different altitudes.

WILLIMANTIC

The matter of a tented city for the strikers warned out of the houses of the American Thread Company plant which they have been occupying for varying lengths of time without payment of rent took definite form Friday morning when application constituting a permit for building purposes was secured from City Clerk J. Schley Donohue, Jr., by James Curran, The force, which was subsequently filled out and presented to Acting Fire Marshal Henry J. Kelley, states that canvas tents are necessary as places of abode for the strikers, specifying the location as the Bacon lot on Natchaug street. Napoleon Bacon, the owner stated that permission had been given by him for the use of the lot, upon request of the strikers' committee. It is understood that the strikers intend to have one large tent erected from which meals are to be served the dispossessed tenants, and a number of tents to furnish living accommodations for them, and that later wooden houses will be erected by volunteer union carpenters. Thomas F. McMahon, of Providence, R. I., president of the International Textile Workers of Connecticut, speaking Friday morning at the mass meeting at the Gem Theater, told the strikers that the Union Building Trades of the state would support them with money, labor and material. The plans of the committee are for the erection of some thirty tents by the middle of the week. Four of these are the contribution of President McMahon. As many as are found necessary during the warm weather will be furnished by various labor unions on Connecticut and Rhode Island, it is said.

In a plan outlined by Mr. McMahon at the meeting, about one hundred cottages of five rooms each equipped with modern conveniences, are called for. # WESTERLY

Westerly people have been fortunate during the past few days of torrid weather, when the thermometer has harbored between 90 and 100 degrees in that they can visit the neighboring beaches of Watch Hill, Pleasant View and Misquamicut, where cooling winds from the ocean have caused a temperature from ten to fifteen degrees cooler than in town. Not only are Westerly people aware of this state of affairs, or rather of temperature, but residents of land towns and cities in Rhode Island, Connecticut and even Massachusetts have learned—and profitably thereby, especially on Saturday and Sunday. Automobiles have come into Westerly for a visit to the beaches and at Pleasant View the proprietor of one store, having opened early in the season, reported that he was unable to leave the store until nearly 3 o'clock Saturday morning and that too was to see that the late comers did not go away hungry. An almost milk famine existed in Westerly on Sunday for the visitors, coming so unexpectedly, caused a shortage in this most popular summer food.

Announcement has been made by the school committee that Charles E. Mason, who has been vice principal of the Westerly High school, has been elected principal and Miss Laura E. McIntire, who has been principal for the last six years, is to be vice principal.

Miss Laura E. McIntire was graduated from the Main Wesleyan seminary and Temple college in the class of 1885. For two years after graduating she taught in Tryburg academy, a special fitting school for Bowdoin college. She then went to Auburn, Main, where she served ten years in the Edward Little institute. In 1900 she became a teacher in the Westerly High school in mathematics, language and history, following Miss Hannah Tefft, of Westerly. Miss McIntire became principal of the Westerly High school following the resignation of Principal Israel R. Sheldon, who resigned at the time of the World War, to enter the service of the United States in the aviation corps.

The P. S. Barber Hose company of Pawcatuck responded to a thrill alarm Saturday afternoon about 4:30 o'clock for a chimney fire in the Celia block, corner of West Broad and Mechanics streets, occupied by the automobile salesroom of Clifton D. Hall. Smoke was seen coming from the chimney when an occupant of the tenement on the second floor was essid to have set fire to some papers in the stove from which it is thought that the chimney became ignited. Firemen raised a ladder and emptied the contents of a chemical extinguisher into the chimney putting out the fire.

Workmen in the employ of the Westerly waterworks department early Sunday morning completed the connection of the fire hydrant at the head of Main street, which had been relocated on the sidewalk, narrowed by the highway department when the new curbing was set in front of the Broad street gate and the one near foot of School street, cutting out all water services between these points. In the installation a new shutoff gate was set in the pipe line from the street main to the fire hydrant. On Friday workmen in the employ of the highway department completed the work of oiling George street, Grove avenue and a portion of Spring street, with possibly Chestnut street to follow. A Spruce street woman resident attempting to cross the newly oiled highway before she could be warned by near workmen, lost her balance on the slippery surface and sat down precipitously to her intense indignation, causing a hasty return to her home. Sand has been distributed along the Beach street end of Elm street and this section will be treated with oil this week. Friday noon bids were closed for the construction of cement curb and sidewalks on the west side of Elm street from Cross street to Beach street.

Work was begun on the construction of a cement base for the Armstrong disappearing rifle on the front lawns of the state armory on Dixon street. The shield, weighing several ton has been removed to the rear of the drill shed near West street. The rifle was blocked up and moved ahead a short distance to permit the laying of a permanent cement base upon which to mount the big gun, which heretofore has merely rested on the ground for the past two years. The gun was originally brought from Fort Adams, Newport, R. I. and placed in front of the state armory, following a drive by Sargeant George Dowding of the local coast guard company.

Sanda Giudice, aged 5 years, 8 months, daughter of Gennaro Giudice of 6 Marion avenue, sustained a broken right leg Saturday night about 8:45 o'clock, when she ran across the street opposite 66 Oak street, striking the rear left mud guard of the touring car driven by George W. Binns of Bradford. The automobile was driven to Bradford and was stopped within a distance of three feet after the child was hit. Dr. M. Scanlon was called to treat the girl who also sustained bruises on her body. Westerly Police Patrolmon George Madison was called to the scene, where a crowd collected, and investigated the accident.

DANIELSON

It is a fair assemption that the average person buying The Bulletin each morning wants to read some real live news from this and every other town. Even in 24 hours, writing about the weather becomes old-time stuff—ordinarily. This is an exception. If you doubt it, go out and hunt some news in a small town on your own account. Seven days, all in succession, of weather that runs the mercury over 100 degrees in the sun seems to provide an exception to the rule about making things new and attractive every morning.

In these days of torridity, it simply can't be done. One cannot imagine a person sitting at home and using the telephone getting into an automobile accident or having a leg broken in the crush for an anti-Volstead drink at 202 places within two miles of Danielson—or is it six miles? In the stress of the heat wave, the tape measure has been lost—and measurement is by the eye or hearsay.

At this point in the story—and as an excuse for it—it may be recorded that a thermometer set out in the sun Sunday morning, in Danielson, promptran up to 120 degrees, and the red fluid was still insisting that it was hotter than that and was seeking a way to express itself up in the crook of the glass tube above the figures that are supposed to represent the ultimate in temperatures.

It was so hot that there were those who scanned the southern horizon in the expectation of seeing William Jennings Bryan and his real estate maps and memories of profits as a realtor in Florida looming over the landscape for a clean-up in Danielson. But this vision was squelched by a man who called attention to the fact that Bryan has a chance right now of making money as counsel for the state of Alabama in the trial against the state's anti-evolution teaching law wherein a Mr. Scope is concerned, and that he would not miss the publicity attached thereto, anyway, no matter how much money he might make in eastern Connecticut. All of which does not reduce the temperature here or hereabouts.

Several days of temperatures averaging a maximum of 100 in Danielson and vicinity have played havoc with the ambition of the average person to do anything or care about anything. If this Monday morning brings again a temperature of 80 degrees or better at 7 a. m., hundreds of people will not be at work. One cannot bring the tropics into Danielson without having ideas blossom of doing things as they are done in the tropics—and it appears that work is of more or less secondary interest there. It happens to be in about eighth place in this territory right now, getting cool outranking it for one thing, getting something to eat in last place anh other ordinarily prime considerations strung out along the line of contenders for the pennant in the Comfort league.

After all, heat cases have been few and far between in Danielson. The people hereabouts must be of tough fibre. As these lines are written a thermometer four feet away, and exposed to the sun, is registering 103 degrees. And it is hotter than that elsewhere hereabouts.

Attendance at the churches Sunday were reduced by the long-drawn-out heat wave. But church-goers were loyal and the great majority of regulars were on hand. Motor traffic shrunk to mid-winter proportions during the day. There was no comfort riding in the hot sun, no matter how good the car or the desire to make a showing. And, incidentally, there was little comfort anywhere. It was 50-50 for the man who walked or the man who rode. And the fellow who sat at home had them all trimmed for good judgment and more or less ease.

Shortly after the noon hour Saturday Mrs. Helen Leavens Berry, wife of George A. Berry, died at their home on Winter street. Mrs. Berry had been an invalid for eight years, the greater part of that time practically helpless, but ever given the never-failing care of her husband and attendants. For the past three weeks Mrs. Berry has been at the point of death. The extreme heat of the past seven days is believed to have been a factor in sapping her vitality to a point beyond her powers of resistance and she passed away almost unexpectedly.

Mrs. Berry was of a family long connected in an important way with the affairs of Danielson. She was a daughter of George and Fanny Stone Leavens and was born in the home where she died—69 years ago on April 27 of this year.

In early life Mrs. Berry showed an aptitude for music and was given a long course of very special training in that line. For fifteen years she was supervisor of musical instruction in various towns, including the schools of Killingly, Putnam and Woodstock. She had many pupils for courses of music during the years that she gave instruction, and was rated one of the best and most proficient teachers in this section of eastern Connecticut.

Excepting her husband, Mrs. Berry leaves no near relatives.

Mrs. Berry's father, George Leavens, was for years engaged in the dry goods business in Danielson successfully conducting a store, known far and wide, that was located in the Leavens building, now occupied as a business location by the Woolworth store, M. H. Berthiaume, the druggist, and other tenants.

Years ago there was a popular or at least a generally used query as to "How would you like to be the iceman?" That question is particularly pertinent just now. In the past seven days producing maximum temperatures of at least 100 degrees the iceman and his service has been a boon. He has been asked to do unusual things in the way of service. Many of those who have urged him for an immediate delivery do not even think of him nine months in the year. But he has not faltered and has worked on—at real work—while the average person was telling some other person how tough it was to have weather like this in eastern Connecticut. The icemen have been getting up about 4 a. m. and working until as late as 11 p. m. Every day the past week they have been driven to the limit of their endurance. And with Saturday night, when they quit at 11 p. m., at hand all they had to do was to get up about sunrise Sunday morning and go to work for the day again, delivering and hauling ice against the demands that are certain to pour in upon them today. It is wonderful to be icemen when the weather is scorching hot. Try it and see. And bless the day that is yours that you do not have to work as they do when the whole earth is a broiler, no matter how hard you work.

An alarm from Box 23 at about 9 o'clock Saturday evening provided a real scare for those who appreciate what a ring from that box may mean. It developed that there was an incipient blaze in the kitchen of the Attawaugan hotel, four-story frame structure that would present a real problem for the fire department should a blaze therein ever get out of control. On this particular occasion the fire was extinguished so promptly that a recall was sounded within a few minutes. There was no damage to the property. Coming at the hour it did, the alarm brought a jam of traffic in the center of Danielson that required the services of officers to untangle it was a case for many of nothing to do and the alarm furnishing somewhere to go.

Next Sunday the annual observance of the feast of Corpus Christi will be held at St. James' church grounds. It was announced at the masses on Sunday. The usual procession of the Blessed Sacrament in which members of church societies and organizations as well as individuals will participate, will leave the church following the high mass and proceed through the grounds. There will be benediction out of doors and in the church at the conclusion of the procession.

The Eastern Connecticut Mills association promoting a Textile Products exhibit at the state armory here on Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, will have booths for nearly 40 exhibitors ready for the concerns to which they have been assigned by Tuesday. This will allow of perfecting the necessary decorations, installing the machinery and exhibits that are to be included within 48 hours from tomorrow. This exhibit will be so splendid as to amaze eastern Connecticut. It is expected to attract thousands of people.

The Killingly High School Alumni association will give a reception for the class of 1925, Killingly High school, at the state armory here on the evening of June 19. This reception will be the closing event of commencement week. The class day exercises will be held on Thursday afternoon, June 18, the graduation exercises on the evening of that day. The Alumni association organization officers are: Miss Marjorie I. Gaffney, president; Arthur F. Hughes, vice-president; J. Leo Bodo, secretary; Norman A. Reeves, C. Clinton Cleveland, Florence P. Hargraves, executive committee.

PUTNAM

After enduring five days and five nights of torrid weather, each twenty-four hours a little hotter than the preceding period, citizens of Putnam found respite and relief this afternoon in a cooling breeze from the north that caused a drop in temperature of 32 degrees in three hours. After a stifling night, day dawned sultry and close, and at 10 o'clock the thermometer stood at 100, the highest point it has reached during the week. It began to grow cooler about 2 o'clock. There have been no prostrations from the heat reported, and so far as known the deaths that occurred during the week were not hastened by it.

The athletic field day that was to have been held here Saturday afternoon by Headquarters Company, 43rd Division, National Guard, was called off at the last minute because of the heat. The committee in charge decided that anyone not in training who attempted to run from North Grosvenordale, a distance of five miles, which was one of the events scheduled, would endanger his life, and that anyone who wanted to try it, would be a fit candidate for the psycopathic ward. The affair will be held later at a date not yet determined.

Another benefit for the Ely R. Hall Memorial Gymnasium Fund of the Woodstock Academy will take the form of a tea at which two American poets will read from their poems. The affair will be held at the Bracken Memorial Library of Woodstock Hill on Wednesday afternoon, June 10th.

Harold Vinal is well known to the public through his three books of verse: "White April," "Voyage," and "Nor Youth Nor Age." He is, moreover, the editor of "Voices," a poetic monthly, and distinguished both for the quality of its lyrics and its pleasing format. Recently Mr. Vinal has become a publisher and is issuing little books bound in gay Japanese paper. In a few weeks he will sail for Paris where he will enlarge his publishing through a French office. During the past winter Mr. Vinal has been reading much in New York, Boston and other cities, and his new book "Nor Youth Nor Age," from which he will read, has received much favorable comment.

Leighton Rollins is also an editor as well as a poet. While a student in college he was one of the founders of "Casements" and at present he conducts a very successful work for young people in a magazine. His work appeared in the anthology "Eleven Poets" and he is publishing in a number of the curren magazines.

The afternoon of the tenth will be the second occasion when the new library, given as a memorial to Woodstock by Mrs. Pratt of Richmond, Va., will be open to the public for a social gathering. Tea and light refreshments will be served.

The committee of the Putnam Rotary club are making plans for a big inter-city meeting to be held in Odd Fellows Hall, next Thursday evening, June 11. Members of clubs from Norwich, New London, Willimantic and Mansfield, Mass., will be the guests of the Putnam Rotarians. The Mansfield club was organized by the Rev. Simeon Cozad, former pastor of the Putnam Congregational church and the Putnam Rotary club was invited to the installation and are now having the Mansfield club come to Putnam. It is expected that about 150 visiting Rotarians will be present at this meeting. The supper will be in charge of the Rotary-Anns.

The annual meeting of the Elizabeth Porter Putnam Chapter, D. A. R. will be held Monday afternoon. There will be reports read and new officers elected. A board meeting will precede the chapter meeting. Miss Alice Stevens will give several vocal numbers.

Attorneys P. H. Johnson and Ernest C. Morse were in Worcester last week attending the golf matches.

Attorney Howard C. Bradford has been chosen a delegate from the Putnam Rotary club to the convention of International Rotary Clubs to be held in Cleveland, Ohio, June 15 to June 19. Mr. Bradford accompanied by Mrs. Bradford will leave Putnam on the 13th and expects to be gone ten days and visit Detroit as well as Cleveland.

Superintendent of Streets Frank Dumas and his men have finished spreading 16,000 gallons of oil on hte city streets. The oil arrived in two lots of 8,000 gallons each and was immediately on hte streets which the common council voted to have oiled. The streets were sanded as soon as the oil was sprinkled.

Mrs. Charlotte May of Woodstock is visiting Mrs. Marshall Kenyon on Grove street.

Miss Melina Rondeau of Danielson is at the Day Kimball hospital where she underwent an operation for appendicitis.

Miss Mary Beauregard of Pawtucket is the guest of her father, Isadore Beauregard of the Hotel Cargill, South Main street.

Miss Ruth McGarry of Boston has been spending a week with her sister, Miss Mary McGarry of Church street.

Rev. George Cain of Taunton, Mass. and Mr. and Mrs. James Bullard of Brockton, Mass., have been the guests of Mr. and Mrs. John Cain of Mill street.

Graves of Departed Odd Fellows were decorated on Sunday by a committee from the Israel Putnam Lodge. The lodge did not attend this rite as has heretofore been the custom but will hold the memorial services in the hall after the regular meeting on Tuesday evening at which all Odd Fellows, Rebekahs and friends are invited.

Clarence L. Booth, the professional golfer and instructor at the Putnam Country Club took part in the national open tournament held at the Worcester Country Club links For the 72 holes Mr. Booth turned in a score of 322, but 31 higher than that of the leaders, Bobby Jones and William McFarland, who had 291. On the first day of the tournament, he had a card of 153 for the first 36 holes and on the other day his score was 164. Previously Mr. Booth had qualified on the difficult course where he made an excellent showing and became eligible to compete at Worcester. He is especially good on drives and at one hole on the Worcester course he made a drive which is believed to be the longest ever made on that course.

Mrs. George B. Quigley, a sister of Frederick W. Seward of the city, died last Thursday at her home in Los Angeles, California. She had been suffering for some time from heart trouble and which caused her death. Mrs. Quigley formerly lived at Guilford, Conn., but was well known in Putnam where she made frequent visits. Her husband died a number of years ago and there were no children.

John H. Wilkes, 65, one of the best known citizens of Thompson, died suddenly at 8 o'clock Friday morning at his home on Brandy Hill. He had spent the previous day in plowing and did not seem to be affected by the intense heat. He got up at 6 o'clock, milked the cows, and then dropped over, dead. Cardiac trouble is said to have been the cause of his death. He was born in Tohmpson in 1860; his father was John H. Wilkes who was born in England and his mother Josephine Carroll Wilkes, a native of Worcester, Mass. Funeral services were held at the home at 2 o'clock Sunday afternoon.

Funeral services for Mrs. Matilda Bodo, widow of Abraham Bodo, were held at St. Mary's Saturdya morning at 9 o'clock. She was in her 73rd year. Two sons, Joseph and Frederic Bodo survive.

Mrs. Myrtle Law, wife of George Law of Thompson, died at hte Day Kimball hospital Saturday.

She was born July 5, 1844 at Dudley, Mass., her father being George Elliott of Thompson and her mother Mrs. Ada Taylor Elliott of Dudley, Mass.

Women Ask Us

Why Palmolive Soap is not intended for cleansing fabrics . . . Let us tell you, madam

PALMOLIVE Soap is made for ONE thing only. And that is to foster good complexions.

In the old days you were told, "Use no soap on the face." Soaps then were judged too harsh.

Then Palmolive came. A soap made of rare cosmetic oils—an exclusive beauty blend. A soap made to be used freely, lavishly on the skin.

Women tried it, and were amazed. One told another. Millions of clear, fresh skins were the result. Palmolive became quickly the leading toilet soap of the world.

In France, home of cosmetics, it became a leader. It largely supplanted French soaps. French women found in it their ideal of a soap. Today it is made in five countries to meet the universal demand for beauty.

Now in fairness we must tell you that to make it suitable for laundry work of any nature at all, the cosmetic properties of Palmolive would have to be much reduced.

And we believe good complexions far too precious to be endangered thus.

Sixty years of soap study stand behind Palmolive. It is a unique creation. A scientific soap made solely for use on the skin, to guard your youthful charm.

For laundry work, get soap other than Palmolive.

But on your skin, don't expect the cosmetic results of Palmolive from any soap claimed to be good for all purposes. . . No "jack-of-all-trades" soap should be used for your complexion.

There are soaps at 25 cents and over that approach Palmolive in complexion results. We know of two. But Palmolive sells at 10 cents . . . no more than ordinary soaps. Enormous production brings you this modest cost.

Remember this when asked to buy an ordinary soap for complexion use. Be sure that any facial soap you use is a facial soap alone.

Wash, launder, cleanse with any soap you wish. But when beauty is at stake, take care. Use Palmolive, a soap you know is safe to use. It is nature's formula to "Keep That Schoolgirl Complexion."

THE PALMOLIVE COMPANY
(Del. Corp.)

The "Germ" Folly

Soaps to "destroy" germs should be used only by advice of a physician. All soaps "remove" germs to a certain degree. Palmolive will "remove" germs as well as any soap safe for toilet use.

The real difference in soaps is in their effect on your skin. So, for your own sake, remember this when you are told some soaps combat germs and that for aseptic reasons should be used.

Don't be misled. Don't take chances with your complexion. A clear, good complexion is too precious to gamble with. Protect yours with Palmolive, a soap made solely to guard your youth and charm.

Soap from Trees

The only oils in Palmolive Soap are the soothing beauty oils from the olive tree, the African palm and the coconut palm—and no other fats whatsoever.

That is why Palmolive Soap is the natural color that it is—for palm and olive oils, nothing else, give Palmolive its green color!

The only secret to Palmolive is its exclusive blend—and that is one of the world's priceless beauty secrets.

Note carefully the name and wrapper. Palmolive is never sold unwrapped

THE COMING CITY MEETING

When Mayor Waters, at the organization meeting of the court of common council, urged all council members to be present at the adjourned annual city meeting, for the purpose of furnishing such information as is desired, it was an excellent suggestion.

Mayor Waters didn't urge a large attendance of the citizens, but perhaps that was not necessary. It is at this meeting that the appropriations will be made for running the city for the next twelve months. Estimates have been made of what it is believed the several departments will require and what it is figured will be received by them in the way of income. Norwich will not get enough revenue to carry on its work by $343,-187.09 and it will be necessary to raise this sum by the imposition of a tax of 20 3-4 mills.

When such a tax is levied no provision will have been made for the list of extra things which have been asked for, such as increased wages, new construction, new street improvements, new sewers and other projects, the total estimate for such work being $130,-300.

Should all the extras be voted it would mean an additional tax of 6 1-4 mills, or a total of 27 mills for the city tax.

It is well therefore that the taxpayers of the city should be aware of what is proposed for action at the city meeting and attend it in such numbers that whatever action is taken it can be considered as representative action.

It is a time when the citizens may want to know what the purpose of the appropriations are, as the mayor suggests, and it is a time when they may want to ask some questions which only those who have had something to do with the making up of the estimates can answer. Likewise they may want to know what it is that justifies the call for extras that will mean almost a third more tax than is needed for the regular department activities.

Extras are placed in a list by themselves and placed before the citizens. They are without the recommendation of the council, but in view of the fact that they were not turned down they cannot be said to bear the mark of disapproval.

Being set before the citizens for their approval or disapproval, it behooves those entitled to vote in a city meeting to grace the meeting by their presence and give it the benefit of their judgment. It rests with them to say whether it is time to call a halt in the mounting tax rate, or whether it is the time, under present day conditions, to boost it still higher.

FEDERAL INHERITANCE TAX

When plans are made for the cutting down of federal taxes, it is high time that serious consideration should be given to the elimination of the estate tax. There are only two states which do not have inheritance taxes in additional to the federal tax. Thus it is evident that the states are already drawing enough in the way of taxation from this source without the federal government also stepping in.

There are some glaring instances where such taxes have worked a gross injustice, while in all instances where the law is applied it means the imposition of double taxation. Under the state taxes serious handicaps and drains are imposed since such a tax applies to property in the state where the deceased lived but if he was the holder of property in other states there would be a tax of similar nature in each one of them. The injustice of such can be readily appreciated in the case of railroad stock when every state, through which such a transportation line does business, can put in a claim for a tax on the stock of that road held by the deceased before it can be released for the settlement of the estate. Then for Uncle Sam to come along and say that he wants a slice of the estate makes the situation all the worse.

Various plans have been offered for the further cutting of federal taxes. Included in the plan advanced by the president was the repeal of the estate tax. It may well be incorporated in all and enacted into law. The country can get along with less taxation, and this is one of the taxes that should go.

It has recently received the support of the chamber of commerce of New York state, which claims that inasmuch as such taxes are passed along it ultimately affects the poor as well as the rich. For the same reason that it is advisable to cut down the surtaxes the federal inheritance tax ought to be dropped.

THE NOTE TO GERMANY

Germany hasn't officially answered the note from the allied nations, but it is represented as being bitterly opposed to certain of the claims and demands therein set forth. Perhaps Germany will not answer the note in the same manner that some of the leaders have referred to it, since that might not be good diplomacy, but the impression is given that Germany will oppose its surprise and endeavor to point out the unreasonableness of the requirements.

Germany is desirous that the allies should recall their forces from Cologne. This important point has been held by the allies for the purpose of insuring compliance with the terms of the Versailles treaty. When Germany undertakes to claim that the terms have been met and the allies should now keep their word, the allies come back with the statement that Germany has not lived up to the treaty terms, says so emphatically, points out the instances where Germany has failed and informs the German government that it cannot expect the forces at Cologne to be withdrawn until Germany toes the mark.

Much importance is attached to the prevention of Germany from again becoming a war power. That was the aim in the restrictions required in the Versailles treaty, and now Germany is told that it has failed to do what it promised. It is not told so in general terms but it is pointed out where this failure lies.

Perhaps Germany is disappointed over the note, but it follows a situation which it cannot fail to admit when even its minister of defense recently told of what it had been doing and the allied note appears to be based upon such established facts.

The aim is not to cripple Germany. Too much is desired from it in the way of reparations to think of such a thing, but there is an insistence that make the contribution demanded for the purpose of forcating a better peace safeguard in Europe. Germany should also appreciate what a basis it has created for the latest allied note.

THE AMERICAN LEGION DRIVE

It is a part of a nationwide campaign that is being carried out by the American Legion in this city in endeavoring to raise $5,000 as its share, for the national fund of $5,000,000 to be raised this year. This fund is to be a perpetual trust from which only the income will be used as the "financial backbone of the rehabilitation and child welfare work of the Legion, the central generating plant for the nation wide activity of 11,000 Legion posts and 6500 Legion auxiliaries.

The raising of the fund is not based upon some condition which it is believed may develop but upon actual conditions. There are 5,000 children of veterans who need help at the present time and that number is expected to increase.

Because the parent has been taken away it is not believed that the children should be allowed to make its way the best it can. There is a commendable ambition on the part of the Legion to do something for such cases, to see that they are maintained in their own homes where possible, to find other homes for them if it becomes necessary and to see that such homes are proper ones, and to care in billets maintained by the organization for those who are not placed elsewhere or adopted.

The effort is a worthy one. It will get strong financial support among the Legion members themselves, but it is entitled to and will receive the endorsement and aid from the public as one of the means of showing appreciation for the service rendered to country by those whose children it has now become necessary for others to give the proper training and homes that may become good and useful citizens.

DEPARTMENTAL REORGANIZATION

The transfer of the bureau of mines to the department of commerce from the department of the interior places it under the guidance of Secretary Hoover. This is only one of several changes that have recently been made which increases the duties of this department, but they are made with the idea of bringing about greater efficiency and with the approval of the cabinet member whose responsibilities are thereby made greater.

Secretary Hoover has been striving for betterments. The administration has been seeking a better organization, one that will function to greater advantage and at less expense, and these are part of such changes as ar deemed advisable.

It was not so long ago that Secretary Hoover might have changed from the head of the department of commerce to the department of agriculture. He was even offered that portfolio but he preferred to remain where he was, recognizing that, while there were large responsibilities in each position, he has put into operation certain reorganization efforts and increased efforts and increased certain activities to the point where he was anxious to see it completed.

He has displayed a healthy interest in a department which had amounted to little in years past. He has brought it to life and put it on its feet. He has welcomed other tasks of the same kind and it is as the result of that and a recognition of his fitness as an organizer and director that the transfer of the bureau of mines was made and previous to that the patent office was put in his department.

WOMAN IN LIFE AND IN THE KITCHEN

SUGGESTIONS FOR THE HOUSEWIFE

A soft paint brush is desirable to have for brushing bread, rolls and pastry with melted butter.

All cereals should be stirred into boiling water and they should boil.

Remove fruit stains from the hands by rubbing them with cornmeal and vinegar.

Use adhesive tape to protect your fingers when ripping seams or paring hard vegetables.

A good cleaning fluid for general use is made of a half a pint each of grain alcohol and chloroform and a tablespoon of ammonia.

If you want to keep roses fresh, keep them in very cold water. Change the water frequently and at night set them in a cold place.

Never put the ivory handles of knives or forks into hot water as it causes them to crack and discolor. Hold in the hand while washing the blades or prongs.

Fasten loops of strong material to the corners of the heavy mattress and it can be handled easily when it is necessary to turn or remove it.

When shipping a mirror or glass-covered picture, paste narrow strips of paper across the glass. This breaks vibrations and prevents cracking.

When cutting absorbent cotton, do not tear the paper away, but cut through paper and cotton.

In making a sauce which contains egg yolks for thickening the sauce must not boil after the yolks are added or it will curdle. It must be remembered that eggs will not thicken a mixture unless the boiling point is nearly reached.

The surface of the child's or young girl's dressing table is only too often marred by nicks or spilled perfume, cold cream, etc. Glass tops are expensive, but a thick blotter cut to the exact size of the top does not show under the cover and prolongs the life of the furniture.

To make old silk dresses have a new, crisp appearance, sponge with gum-arabic water and press on the wrong side. Use either lump or powdered gum arabic dissolved in hot water.

When house cleaning, use a stick with a notch in the end so that you can lift picture cords off the hooks without stepping up and down.

FOR THE HOME OWNER

Learn how to put washers on your water faucets. These small repairs can easily be done without the aid of the plumber and are not so apt to be neglected for a long time if you know how to remedy them. Leaking spigots mean larger water bills.

HOW ABOUT YOUR CELLAR?

Is it all cleaned out, rubbish, trash and papers removed before the winter is upon us? There is a necessary amount of dirt connected with the furnace, but if the cellar is in applepie order and free from accumulated articles, the ashes will not prove unsightly.

SAVE MONEY ON LEMONS

By purchasing several dozen lemons during the season when they are cheapest the housewife can save considerable money. All the juice should be squeezed from the lemons, strained through a cloth and placed in glass jars. To one part of juice two parts of sugar are added. Lemon juice stored in this way is all ready to use for puddings, ices or fruit drinks.—Delineator.

HEALTH AND BEAUTY

Health has been called "the greatest game in the world"—because it has to be played by rule. The moment you begin to violate the rules of health as set down by Mother Nature, she imposes upon you a little penalty.

Be sure to ventilate each room for a while each day now that cooler weather is here. You will not only have a fresh atmosphere about your house, but the fresh air is much easier to heat and in consequence the house will be warmer.

Boric acid solution is an excellent wash for pimples both before and after they are opened. A sterilized needle should be used to prick the ripe pimples. Exposure to the sun for 10 to 15 minutes to produce a mild case of sunburn is helpful for some skins. A good lotion for pimples may be made of two drams of sulphate of zinc, one and one-half ounces of rosewater, one-half a dram of sublimated sulphur.

Headache is one of the most common penalties and too frequently it is disregarded or banished for the powder, or, worse still, a sleeping draft. More often than not the pain in your head may be traced to overeating, a disordered stomach or faulty elimination. Food-poisoning and headache are the result. Loss of sleep and late hours are another cause of headache and lassitude.

FOR THE FERN DISH

Now is the time to start some grape fruit seeds to sprout in your fern dish for the winter table decoration. Soak the gradefruit seeds in cold water for 24 hours. Then plant them in your fern dish. They will bloom in about three weeks.

CABBAGE MINUS ODOR

A little piece of charcoal placed in the water in which cabbage is being cooked will prevent the odor from circulating through the house.

A RESTFUL CHANGE

Persons employed will find great comfort in a change of footwear upon their arrival home in the evening. A fresh pair of shoes after the day's work seems to take away a great deal of that tired feeling.

TO BONE FISH

To bone fish, work from the inside. Slip the knife under the rib bones near the head and slit down the entire length of the body cavity. Then cut down to the ridge of the backbone, taking care not to cut through the skin. Treat both sides of the fish in the same manner. Disconnect the backbone at the head and lift the bony framework out of the fish.

The bone is left in the tail to help keep the shape. The head, which may be left on or removed, according to preference, aids in keeping the stuffing in the fish.

LABEL THEM

When packing a lunch box it is a nice idea to fasten the waxed paper around the sandwiches together with a gummed label on which is written the kind of sandwich therein. This is particularly handy when packing a picnic or train lunch for the entire family.

DICTATES OF FASHION

Very small or very large is the guiding note in the choice of millinery for late spring.

There are many signs pointing unmistakably to the return of the hat of large proportions.

A distinct innovation is seen in a hat of shirred taffeta with the brim turned up in back and a single large rose for trimming.

Many of the newest hats in both straw and felt are in shades of beetroot, a deep purplish red, or the soft shade of green that is almost a gray tone.

The French designers have taken astonishingly attractive coats and cloaks this year of waterproofed Shantung silk, crepe de chine and satin. These are in the gayest of colorings and match or harmonize with the frocks worn beneath.

In the smaller hats there is much use of bangkok, panama, ballibuntl and similar straws, with felt still employed in new and different ways, one of which is in narrow strips of different colors forming a design on the body of the hat.

The evening wrap for spring is often of sheer georgette or the more opaque crepe de chine and is bordered with wide bands of ostrich. One model in a brilliant red tone is faced with velvet the same shade, and for trimming has bands of black and red ostrich.

In the latest cables received from Paris considerable emphasis is laid upon the vogue of black satin, which is particularly successful when chosen for coats either of the separate type or as part of an ensemble.

Blouses are again making their appearance with the tailored suits. The majority of these have a pleated plastron of crepe in the front, rolling turned down collars and turned back cuffs. The blouses are quite distinct in type from the tunics worn with a slip, although they are frequently so long as to reach almost to the knee.

BANDEAU IS REVERSED

The bandeau which for years adorned the front of the head has coasted around to the back. Now this type of headgear is frequently placed low on the neck, covering the sometimes unsightly ends of bobbed hair. Occasionally a row of tight little curls almost cover the bandeau, but with the shingle cut the band is used to hide the line where hair and neck meet.

FEATHERS TRIM COAT

A striking coat seen on Park avenue was made of a tobacco brown silk and wool material with a high, close collar formed of beige-colored hen feathers. At either hip was a huge medallion of hen's feathers. The sleeves were slashed and flared from elbow to wrist and each bore a similar feather medallion of smaller size.

NOVELTY IN ENSEMBLES

Many a man has wished for a coat and a waistcoat all in one. Women now have them. One of the newest designs for ensemble coats is made with the coat swinging open in front over a long white waistcoat which comes almost to the hem of the coat to which it is attached. The coat usually is of ottoman or rep, while the waistcoat is of moire or corded silk.

SEWING HINTS

When putting on the collar of a blouse the collar itself should not be stretched. If necessary the neck of the blouse can be stretched, but not the collar, otherwise the blouse will not set well around the neck.

If you should blunt your machine needle and have no other on hand to replace it, stitch for a few inches through fine sandpaper. It will sharpen the point beautifully.

One good housewife ravels out some of the good linen threads from her wornout table linen and winds them on a large spool. Then when she has mending to do on her other tablecloths and napkins, she has thread that will mend and blend neatly.

Where material puckers with the machine stitch, one should place a piece of thin paper under the material, sewing it into the seam. The paper is easily removed afterwards and prevents drawing of the seam. Chiffons, laces and georgettes often require a paper foundation upon which to sew.

GETTING OUT STAINS

First of all, clear your kitchen table or cabinet of everything else and be sure that the surface on which you are going to work with your linen or other material is absolutely clean, so no other spots or stains may be gathered while you are working. Have a large bowl ready and plenty of boiling water, if it is a fruit stain you wish to remove. Spread the stained article over the bowl and pour boiling water through it until the stain disappears. This method is usually successful, except sometimes in the case of peach stain. Then if the stain is stubborn and the boiling water has not entirely removed it, soak the spot either in Javelle water for a short time or in a weak solution of oxalic acid. Then, of course, you must be sure and rinse thoroughly the material, so the chemical will not injure it. Sometimes pear stains will not yield to the boiling water treatment and a chemical must be used.

Javelle water is made as follows: One pound sal soda, one-half pound chloride of lime, one quart hot water, two quarts cold water.

Dissolve the sal soda in the quart of boiling water. Put the chloride of lime in the cold water, allow the mixture to settle, then pour the clear liquid into the sal soda solution. Put in a tightly corked bottle and keep in a dark place, for light and air cause it to lose its strength. When using, add an equal amount of clear water to the portion of Javelle water.

JOT IT DOWN

If you find a brand of food that just appeals to you along the line of canned goods, jot down the maker's name. Then when next you order you are certain of being pleased. It is foolish to continue trying different brands of food when you know of a satisfactory one.

BOIL MILK CANS

Milk cans may be kept sweet by boiling occasionally in a strong solution of washing soda.

WASHING GLASSES

Glasses used for milk or any milky substances should always be washed in cold water in preference to hot. The latter is apt to leave a cloudy appearance and necessitate a great deal more labor in the washing. The same rule applies to perfectly new glasses which have not been used.

RECIPES.

Plain Pastry: Into an earthen mixing bowl sift one and one-half cups of pastry flour, one-fourth teaspoon of baking powder and one-third teaspoon of salt; with the tips of fingers lightly rub into the dry ingredients or cut in one-third cup of shortening, using two knives. Then moisten with just enough cold water to hold the mixture together, continue mixing with a knife to a paste that leaves the bowl clean. This is sufficient for two crusts for a pie plate that measures eight inches in diameter. This pastry is sometimes used at the bottom crust and the flaky pastry for the upper crust.

Cheese Straws: Roll flaky pastry to one-fourth inch thickness into a rectangular sheet, sprinkle one-half of the sheet with grated cheese which has been seasoned with salt and a few grains of cayenne. Fold lengthwise of the sheet and press the edges firmly together, fold again from top toward the bottom and roll again to one-fourth inch thickness. Sprinkle again with the prepared cheese and proceed as before. Repeat twice. Then roll into a sheet and cut in strips five inches long and one-fourth of an inch wide. Use a pastry jagger for this purpose. Arrange the strips perfectly straight on a baking sheet and bake eight minutes in a hot oven (400 degrees F.). Parmesan cheese or equal parts of parmesan and any sharp cheese may be used. Cheese straws are a dainty accompaniment with green salads. Pile them log-cabin fashion on a fancy plate covered with a lace paper doily.

What a lot of wise men there would be in the world if every man knew half as much as he tries to make others think he knows!

—"and the storekeeper grinned his approval."

"Oh, Boy!" exclaimed Bobbie

Bobbie had been given a nickel. Also some specific advice by his mother as to just what kind of candy was best for him. So off he ran to the store.

"Life Savers," he said to the man. "This kind, Wint-o-green—," pointing out his favorite flavor.

And the genial storekeeper grinned his approval. He knew it was good business to have satisfied customers.

Every growing child craves candy. Active little bodies demand sugar. But children's candy must be pure—and they should not overeat on sweets.

Life Savers, the little candy mints with the hole (life saver shape), answer this problem in just the right way. They are china-hard and deliciously flavored. This means that Life Savers are eaten slowly. Children suck them to make those wonderful flavors last longer. Little tummies are not upset. And they are kind to tiny teeth.

Life Savers are safe and wholesome. You may conscientiously be generous with them, for they are the ideal candy for little folks.

Six flavors are displayed at all good stores so you may help yourself: Pep-o-mint, Wint-o-green, Cinn-o-mon, Lic-o-rice, Ci-o-va and Vi-o-let. Five cents a package.—Life Savers, Inc., Port Chester, N. Y.

From Small Beginnings

Joseph Haworth, an American Actor

Aw! You better be an actor!" So one small boy taunted another in the years immediately after the Civil War. Joe Haworth, the boy to whom he spoke, had just recited from one of Shakespeare's plays. What he had recited was only a few lines—a chance passage that had been quoted in a newspaper—but he had recited the passage with mock gravity, many flourishes and exaggerated intonations, mimicking acting rather than attempting to act. "I'd be a great actor, wouldn't I?" Joe replied with a laugh. "Look! Listen!"

Immediately he put himself into a cramped position and went limping and hobbling off a little distance, with his head held curiously on one side. Then he stopped and in a voice with a quaver said: "Now, you boys, tend to business and don't do no skylarkin' 'round here." He was imitating an old man who was known to every small boy in the place. The second boy laughed again as he cried out: "Joe, you'll be a great actor! There ain't no one else can imitate folks as well as you can."

Joe Haworth grew a few years older and began to take part in little plays. "It's a heap of fun!" he said. Soon he found himself in demand for the little plays that were staged in his home town. There came a chance to go on the professional stage in a performance of Shakespeare's Richard III. "How old are you?" the manager asked him. "Sixteen," he answered. And at that early age Joseph Haworth, one of the most noted American actors, began his career that terminated in 1903 when he was 48 years old. He did so well in the minor part that he played that he found himself set on fire by the wish to become a professional actor. He had no difficulty in finding a place in a small stock company and for years gained experience playing scores of different characters. It was a steady development then toward the time when he appeared as Macbeth in Shakespeare's great tragedy. Lady Macbeth was played by no less a character than the great Mme. Mojeska, one of the greatest of actresses. For over 10 years Joseph Haworth played important parts until his early death. His boyhood play, his youthful ambition, had led him into a high success in doing the thing that he liked best to do.

Stories That Recall Others

A Word to the Wise.

The routine of freight claim investigation is often broken by humorous and sometime serious incidents, in proof of which the excerpts from a letter received by an investigator from a railroad agent bear mute testimony.

"The agent that handled this shipment died November 15. Appendicitis. His successor in hospital. Operated on January 11 for same trouble. Better sterilize this dope or handle with gloves. Say it's catching."

"Pants" not "Pianos."

This is one of the stories that John Likes to tell.

Several years ago a new justice of the peace was sworn into office. He was not supplied with any law books or statutes and in lieu of same, in order to keep up appearances, he bound a mail order catalogue with a legal looking covering. When law violators were brought before him he would thumb carefully through the catalogue and assess the fine.

One day a constable brought in a man charged with a minor offense. The justice thoughtfully consulted the catalogue. "The state finds you guilty and fines you $3.98," he said. The defendant started to protest when the constable drew him aside and whispered in his ear, "Pay the fine, you are lucky."

"How so?" exclaimed the other.

"Why" explained the constable, "it's lucky for you that he opened the book at 'pants' and not 'pianos.'"

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Dr. Walter M. W. Splawn, who is to be inaugurated as president of the University of Texas, is one of the youngest men ever chosen as executive head of a prominent American university. He is 41 years old and a native of Texas. His early academic education was received at Baylor University. He next went to Yale and in 1906 received a Bachelor of Arts degree. He practiced law in Fort Worth for a time but found that such work left him no leisure hours to pursue the studies he loved—economics, history, and government. In 1914 he entered the University of Chicago and was awarded the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. He then returned to Baylor University and became professor of economics and later dean. In 1919 he joined the faculty of the University of Texas. When Earle B. Mayfield resigned as Railroad Commissioner of Texas to go to the United States senate, Dr. Splawn was appointed to his place by Governor Neff.

BRITISH ARE TRAINED FOR LIFE OF SETTLER

Unusual interest has been created by the plan of sending out from England to the colonies and dominions groups of men and women selected from various districts and carefully trained to take up the life of settlers. A committee recently formed in London is recruiting a new "community settlement from the ranks of retired officers and civil servants who find it increasingly difficult with their comparatively small pensions to maintain in England the standards of life to which they have been accustomed. It is proposed to gather communities of 60 or 70 families and train them in England on two-acre garden plots. Each prospective settler will thus gain some experience of farming and at the end of five years the whole group will be moved to a homestead in South Africa, Canada or Australia. Meanwhile, it is believed, they will be able to pay their way from the produce of their gardens.

JUGOSLAV SOLDIERS DIVIDE ON ETIQUETTE

In the Jugoslav army there is to be observed an interesting difference in military manners. The army is composed of Serbs, Croats and Slovenes. The traditions of the Serbs favor the spirit of comradeship between officers and men. Off duty these two regard each other as equals. The Croats and Slovenes have been accustomed to Austrian etiquette, which is modeled on the Prussian, under which the men are regarded as inferior creatures.

A major in a Slovene cavalry regiment has just resigned his commission. He could not tolerate the sights of his Serb colonel sitting in a restaurant engaged in friendly conversation with one of his soldiers.

TWO ARRESTED ON WET DRIVING CHARGE

Harry Redhead, a machinist, was placed under arrest Saturday afternoon by Traffic Officer William Sharvan on the charge of operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The traffic officer observed Redhead slouched over the wheel as he drove up Shetucket street and around into Main. Jumping onto the running board of another machine, the officer followed Redhead's machine until he caught up with him at the Buckingham Memorial and took him to police headquarters, where he remained locked up over night.

About noon Sunday, John G. Driscoll, under whom Redhead is employed gave bonds for him, but several hours later both men were arrested by Sergeant Morgan and Officer Daniel O'Neil, when they were found in Driscoll's car.

WEDDINGS

Falvey—Curran

Among the prominent weddings mentioned in the Boston Sunday papers the following will be of local interest:

Because of the extreme warm weather, His Eminence Cardinal William O'Connell, was indisposed and unable to perform the wedding yesterday of Miss Lydwine A. Curran, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Maurice Curran of Andover and 107 Atlantic avenue, Swampscott, and Donald Falvey, son of Mr. and Mrs. T. J. Falvey of Strathmore road, Brookline.

It had been planned for many months that His Eminence would honor the two families by performing the ceremony, but he had officiated at religious services during the week and the heat had quite exhausted him.

Mons. R. J. Haberlin took his place and was assisted by Mons. M. J. Splaine, together with Rev. Fr. George A. Reardon, as masters of ceremonies; Rev. James A. Hurley, Rev. Francis J. Mahoney, Rev. Thomas P. Fogarty and Rev. J. Connolly.

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Margaret Curran as maid of honor, and the bridesmaids were Mrs. Maurice Curran, Jr., of Andover, Mrs. Leland Evans of Belmont; Mrs. Herold Abbott of Andover; Miss Helen Dwyer of Kingston, N. Y.; Miss Adele Jaegl of Rock Island, Ill., and Mrs. F. S. Ritchie of Montclair, N. J.

Wallace Falvey served as best man and the ushers were Maurice Curran, Jr., of Andover, Donald McDonald of Methuen, Donald Evans of Belmont, Thomas E. Lunt of Rochester, N. Y., Lawrence Pierson, Jr., Essex Falls, N. J., Paul Corcoran of Cambridge and William Nolan of New York city.

The altar was banked with American Beauty roses, and the altar rail was solid with white spirea. At each seat there was a huge bouquet of roses and the side walls and back of the church had been transformed with asparagus-plomosus, ferns and palms. Even the vestibule was colorful with ferns and greenery, creating an atmosphere of extreme beauty.

Exquisitely beautiful was the bride in a robe of princess satin and rose point lace. The court train of cream satin hung from the shoulders and the veil was of rare old rose point lace and tulle, with a coronet of lace, embelished with orange blossoms. She carried white orchids and lilies of the valley.

The maid of honor wore a frock of sweetest chiffon, in lyis shadings and a transparent hat with chiffon roses in the same colorings. Her flowers were Claudius, Pernet roses and Gerberd roses.

Lovely indeed were the bridesmaids in their gowns of begonia, chiffon, tinting from palest ping to the deepest, tones of forget-me-not blue. Their transparent hats were trimmed with chiffon roses in begonia tints.

Mrs. Maurice Curran, Sr., wore a French model gown of azure chiffon, embroidered with China roses in pink tones. She wore a transparent hat of blonde hair and escurial lace with China pink roses.

Mrs. T. J. Falvey, the groom's mother was modishly gowned in a Worth model of soft peach satin, embroidered in colors beads, veiled in beige lace with self-toned lace and wore a corsage or orchids.

There was a long programme of music prior to the opening of the nuptial mass at 11 o'clock. This programme of organ selections from Wagner, was wonderfully interpreted by John A. MacGilvery, organist at St. Laurence's church, Lawrence.

Mr. MacGilvery played the wedding processional from Lohengrin, as the dainty bride entered the church on her father's arm, escorted by the distinguished bridal party.

The magnificent estate on Atlantic avenue presented a never-to-be-forgotten picture of beauty. There was an orchestra out in the specious gardens and also an orchestra indoors, and there were ten artists from the Boston Symphony and the Salem Cadet band who provided an excellent programme.

Roses and greenery was used in profusion in the beautiful rooms of the Curran residence, where the wedding breakfast was served. Following the reception the newlyweds left for a motor tour of Canada and upon their return will make their home in the Chestnut street section of Newton.

The bride is a graduate of Marymount college at Tarrytown, N. Y., class of 1922; Mr. Falvey is a graduate of Phillips Andover Academy, class of 1916 and of Harvard, class of 1920. He is a member of the Hasty Pudding club, the Institute 1776; the Fox club, the Harvard club of Boston and the Belmont Springs Country club. He is associated with the Massachusetts Bonding and Insurance company.

Without doubt the event yesterday morning was the most brilliant and distinguished the North Shore has witnessed in many seasons. The youth and beauty of the bride and the prominence of the two families brought added interest to the nuptials.

Norwich people numbered amongst the wedding guests were the Misses Marian and Marguerite Shea of 201 Broadway and John M. Lee.

The bride was charmingly gowned. The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Eccleston. Following a wedding tour Mr. and Mrs. Zuccardy will reside in Montville.

Wildowsky—Gear.

Stanley Wildowsky and Miss Doris Gear, both of Norwich, were united in marriage Saturday afternoon at 2.30 o'clock at the First Congregational parsonage on Elm avenue, Norwich Town. The ceremony was performed by the pastor of the church, Rev. Gurdon P. Bailey, in the presence of a large company of relatives of the bride and groom. The bride who was gowned in white and carried a shower bouquet of bride's roses, was given in marriage by her father. The attendants were the bride's brother, Raymond Gear, and the groom's sister, Miss Victoria Wildowsky.

The bride is the daughter of Adelbert Gear of Scotland road, and the late Etta Griswold. The groom is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wildowsky, also of Scotland road.

Following the ceremony a wedding luncheon was served at the home of the bride's father. Mr. and Mrs. Wildowsky are to reside on Scotland road.

THREE MACHINES BLOCK BRIDGE IN CRASH ON ROAD TO COLCHESTER

For several hours Sunday night after 9:30 the road to Colchester was blocked at the bridge on the town line between Bozrah and Fitchville by a triangular automobile collision involving Norwich, Willimantic and Hartford cars. Traffic had to take a detour until the highway was cleared.

The machines in the crash were those of Miss Emma Burchman, of West Main street near Maple street, this city, registration L-1183; Martin McIver, 97 Main street, Hartford, registration 80-180, and William Hirwayda, 71 Chestnut street, Willimantic, registration 31-572.

State Policeman Johnson, of the Groton barracks, who investigated the accident, summoned the three drivers to appear in the Lebanon town court on Tuesday.

The Norwich and Hartford cars, which were a Chevrolet and a Hupmobile respectively, and were traveling in opposite directions, each driver headed towards home, were the first to crash. It was reported that the Hartford man was making fast time on the down grade approaching the bridge, sideswiped the Burchman machine and then swung into the Willimantic car which was following the Norwich machine. The Burchman car, with its left front wheel off, came to a rest against one rail of the bridge, and the other two were wedged together against the opposite rail. Miss Burchman had her sister, Eva, and her mother, Mrs. Hyman Burchman, with her, the latter being thrown out and suffering bruises and lacerations.

The Willimantic car, which was a Dodge touring, had headlights smashed and was damaged about the radiator. The Hartford car was also considerably damaged around the front.

20 Stitches After Accident

Joseph Marshall, Patrolman Howard Sloan and two other New London residents, names and addresses undetermined, were injured more or less seriously, and narrowly escaped being killed when the automobile in which they were riding towards Norwich Friday night left the road and crashed into a telephone pole near De Wolf's switch. The accident, it is said, was caused when the driver lost control of the car.

En route to his home in New London from Worcester, Clarence W. Kaneen was near the scene at the time of the crash and took Marshall and Sloan to the office of Dr. Joseph M. Ganey in New London. Thirty-nine stitches were required to sew up the wounds in Marshall's face. His nose was practically cut off and one ear almost entirely severed from his head. He was most seriously injured of the quartet, Sloan and the other two suffering painful but not otherwise serious, bruises and lacerations.

CIVIL WAR VETERAN DIES WITH HEART ATTACK

The sudden death of Henry Thomas Clark, well known Civil war veteran, occurred early Saturday morning at his home, No. 37 Franklin street. Death was due to heart trouble. Although Mr. Clark had not been in the best of health he was up and around Friday. He failed to appear for breakfast and upon investigation it was found that he had died during the night. He was evidently seized with the attack while preparing to retire, having partially disrobed.

Mr. Clark was born in Hartford July 12, 1843, and was the son of Henry Lord Clark and Juliet Greenleaf Clark. When a young child his parents moved to this city and Mr. Clark had made his home in Norwich since.

When the Civil war broke out he enlisted under Captain Isaac H. Bromley in Co. C., 18th Connecticut Volunteers. In June 1863 he was taken prisoner at the battle of Winchester along with about 500 members of the regiment and was incarcerated in Libby and Bell Island prisons. He was later released from prison and rejoined his company serving until 1865 when he received his honorable discharge.

Mr. Clark was the last member of Company C living in Norwich and was one of the few surviving members of the regiment. He was a member of Sedgwick Post, No. 1, G. A. R., and was a daily visitor at Buckingham Memorial. He was well liked by all with whom he came in contact and was a great reader and an interesting talker.

In his early life Mr. Clark was an active member of Wauregan Hook and Ladder company. He attended Broadway Congregational church and always took deep interest in the welfare of the community. Surviving are one brother, Albert A. Clark of this city and nieces in Providence, Pelham Manor and New Haven.

MEMORIAL SERMON FOR WHITE CROSS COUNCIL

The members of White Cross Council, No. 13, Knights of Columbus, honored the memory of deceased members Sunday. The morning was devoted to the placing of memorial wreaths in St. Mary's and St. Joseph's cemeteries in this city and the cemetery at Jewett City. This part of the memorial was taken care of by the officers of the council headed by Worthy Lecturer Francis T. Diggins.

In the evening a special memorial service was held in St. Patrick's church, the service having been arranged by Monsignor M. H. May, pastor of the church. The members of White Cross Council gathered at the Knights of Columbus home on Broadway and at 7:30 o'clock, headed by the officers of the council, marched in a body to the church, where seats had been reserved for them. There were a good sized attendance of the members but the excessive heat had its effect on the public attendance.

Special music, with Prof. Frank L. Farrell at the organ, a solo by Roderick F. Sullivan and congregational singing by the Knights were followed by a sermon by Rev. Joseph M. Griffin of St. Thomas' Seminary of Hartford.

We cannot permit this time to pass without receiving some benefit from it, said Rev. Father Griffin. The message which I have for you I am sure your departed brothers would give to you if they could. Rear aloft the standard of good deeds so that others will follow in your footsteps.

We have had noble men and women teaching for 1900 years, still there are but few that have accepted the doctrine of Jesus Christ. Only 17 per cent of the people have accepted the doctrine of Christ. The other 83 per cent. are either pursuing a false religion or have no religion at all.

The work has not been done and the reason is that those who have received the doctrine of Jesus Christ have not felt the responsibility to give it to others. Christ desired that every Catholic should be an apostle. Here in the United States, the fact that there are not more conversions is because our Christian men have not felt the responsibility to spread their faith. The Catholic men are not giving the example they should to attract others to the faith.

Catholic men, it is necessary for you to give a good example. You must become intensely interested in the salvation of souls. I am asking you tonight, in memory of your departed brothers, to give a good example to those who have not yet become catholics.

If you fail to give them a good example you are failing in the mission Christ gave you to teach His doctrine. The most effective way you can honor your departed brothers is by doing something that will benefit mankind. You can give those about you an example so that they will come into the fold of Jesus Christ.

Benediction brought the service to a close about 8:45 o'clock.

PAGEANT SHOWS WORK OF HOME MISSION SOCIETY

At the Sunday evening service of the Central Baptist church, a beautiful pageant, The Planting of the Tree, was given by women from the Central Baptist church of Hartford. The platform was arranged in the form of a garden with flowering plants and palms making an attractive background for the pageant, which portrayed the work of the Woman's Baptist Home Mission society and the golden opportunity presented in the endeavor to make a gift of $300,000 for the half century anniversary of the society in 1937.

Mrs. H. M. Pettis, president of the Women's league of the church, made a few introductory remarks, and Mrs. D. A. Pitt interestingly described the history of the society leading up to the writing of the pageant.

While thousands of Manhattan people spent Sunday at Atlantic City, Long Beach, Rockaway and other resorts, it was estimated that 150,000 visited Atlantic City, where a cool breeze pushed the mercury down to 70 degrees at 8 o'clock Sunday night.

PRIACHER'S BACCALAUREATE TO STORRS SENIORS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Storrs, Conn., June 7—Makers of progress was the theme of the baccalaureate sermon given here today before the seniors of the Connecticut Agricultural college by the Rev. Dr. L. H. Dorchester, pastor of the First Methodist church of Hartford and president of the Connecticut Federation of Churches. Baccalaureate service was held in the Storrs community church, and it was largely attended by members of the senior class, their friends, and other interested persons of the Storrs community.

Taking his text from John 4:38, "Others Labored and Ye Have Entered into Their Labors," and Hebrews 11:40, "That They Without Us Should Not be Made Perfect," Dr. Dorchester called upon the congregation to ask of themselves the question, How can we become makers of progress, and what are some of the contributing factors. He showed clearly that we are not likely to make things better unless we are eager for progress and receptive to all that promises improvement; that in making true and lasting progress there is required a sense of continuity between past, present and future; and that the largest factor in the making of progress is the gift of one's self in service, and sometimes in sacrificial service.

In developing his theme, Doctor Dorchester, among other things touched on the display of what he termed "arrested development" as shown at times in the United States senate in its attitude toward international conditions; he spoke of the difficulty of maintaining the standard of prohibition without the willingness of the citizens to sacrifice individual tastes for the good of many; and of the Storrs church and Community house project, which he characterized it as "a shining goal to be reached during the coming year."

In his parting words to the teachers, Doctor Dorchester called upon them to make their influences count for the most in the communities in which they will locate, saying, "You who graduate from this college this week are about to go to your respective homes and fields of activity, to become the new leaders in the midst of the people. Of course, you will not be arrogant and seek to display your superior wisdom at the very start. But before long you will be called upon to declare your position on various questions of public betterment, and, perchance, to become standard-bearers, calling for high idealism and noble patriotism. It will cost you something; but the more it costs the richer service you will be privileged to render, and the finer the progress you will help to make. Be ambitious to have your standing and all your influence, seen and unseen, fit for others to follow.

HOME RUNS FEATURE ACADEMY VICTORY OVER WORCESTER TRADE SCHOOL, 11 TO 6

Saturday, the Academy added Worcester Trade to its list of victims, defeating them by an 11-6 score. The game is the Academy's third successive win. The contest featured some terrible hitting, displayed by both teams. For four times the pill was sent for homers, Fankard doing the four bag stunt for Worcester, while Cimokoski, Tombari and Greene went around for the Academy.

Worcester Trade, although losing the game, gave a good account of itself. The visitors fought with great determination and threatened throughout the battle. They socked Johnny Greene's deliveries for ten hits, a homer, a triple and a two-bagger being included in that number. They had Greene feeling warmer than the weather at times, but Greene managed to pull together and pull through.

Worcester Trade started the game with a score. Conners, the first man up, hit a triple to left field and scored on Bergiron's double to right. The Academy's aggregation had taken on too much in the Worcester's team was what the fans thought, but the end of the contest proved that their thoughts were wrong.

In the Academy's half of the 1st the locals scored three runs, making all breathe easier for the while. Carroll received a pass, went to second on Shorty Hamil's sacrifice hit. Jarvis singled to left, scoring Carroll. Hinrichs scored Jarvis with a hard hit bingle to left and stole second, coming in on Cimokoski's hit to center. Three runs had been scored.

In the second, Trade tied the score. A base on balls to Dalton and a homer to the right field fence by Fankard were the means of two runs.

The Academy could do nothing in its half and kept Trade from scoring in the third. In the third the Academy displayed some terrific hitting power when with two out, four runs crossed the plate. Hinrichs got on first by an error made by Maden and came in on Cimokoski's four-bagger to center. Burke hit a single to center and crossed the plate on Tombari's homer to left. Four runs had been scored and Fankard was beginning to feel the heat!

The fourth found neither team able to score, but in the fifth, Trade added one when Greene passed Mara, who stole second, coming in on Dalton's single.

Mara was now pitching for Fankard. Mara held the Red and White scoreless in the fifth. In the sixth and seventh while Trade could do nothing the Academy scored three more. In the sixth a base on balls to Carroll and a homer by Greene to left field accounted for two runs. In the seventh, a bingle to left by Cimmy and a two-bagger by Burke added one more.

In the eighth Trade made a valiant rally, scoring two runs, which were due to errors made by the Academy infield. In the eighth the Academy scored one run when Greene hit a double, coming in on Hamil's sacrifice hit. The Red and White held Trade in the ninth.

For the losers Bergiron and Conners were without doubt, the main lights, Bergiron making five hits out of six trips to the plate. The work of Conners also featured, both on the defensive and offensive.

For the Academy the work of Greene, who loved to get himself into holes, was a bright light. Greene struck out twelve of the visitors, made a homer and a two-bagger. Cimmy and Tombari also shone with homers. Cimmy made three hits out of four trips to the plate. Carroll was unlucky Saturday, both Fankard and Mara refused to pitch to him and he received his walking papers five times.

The Worcester team was late in reaching Norwich and so as to take up time a miniature game was staked by the Alumni present against the varsity team. Such fine players as Madden, Standish and McNamara, Hull and others furnished the amusement. "Red" Steinman, talent for the big leagues, pitched for the Alumni, and Standish played the backstop position. All in all it was a funny spectacle to view. Before we forget, did you see "Big Boy" Madden run bases. He was a scream.

The home team will don its battling togs for the last time on Wednesday when it opposes Westerly High on the Campus. To beat Westerly is the mark the Red and White are aiming at. It will be the last time the Academy baseball aggregation will be seen in action and the whole town is expected to turn out. Certainly they will be treated with their desire, for Lefty Jarvis will be in the box for the home team the last lap. Score:

TAFTVILLE A. A. DROPS 2 GAMES TO WESTERLY INDEPENDENTS

Westerly showed fine baseball in both games, beating Taftville at Taftville Saturday, 11 to 3. Taftville outplayed Westerly in the second game but one bad inning gave Westerly the ball game. Four errors and two hits accounted for this in the second frame. Mills had it easy the rest of the game. Taftville had lots of chances to put runs across but was not there in a pinch. Connors from Providence college pitched good ball and his teammates showed up well and pulled him out of a few holes. Taftville expects to get going next Saturday when Lloyd Jarvis gets in the box. ## WESTERLY'S DEFEAT GIVES ACADEMY THE E. C. PENNANT

Westerly, June 7.—The defeat of Westerly High here yesterday afternoon by Chapman Tech, 5 to 4, gives the Norwich Free Academy team the pennant in the Eastern Connecticut interscholastic league. Westerly, until her defeat yesterday, had a fighting chance to tie up with the Academy but the team from New London spoiled this. If Westerly had beaten Chapman and then beaten the Academy the two teams would have been tied. The best the locals can hope for is a tie for second place with Chapman Tech. The score:

BRASSCOS DROP TWO GAMES THROUGH LOOSE PLAYING

Waterbury, June 7—(A. P.)—The Brasscos played bad baseball this afternoon and dropped two games to Hartford by scores of 6to 1 and 4 to 3.

The fourth inning settled the first game when the Senators scored five unearned runs through poor support back of Fuller. Pat Shea, former New York Giant and Pacific coast hurler, held the local club safe until the ninth inning of the second game when the Brasscos threatened and Owen went in and saved it. Hartford's three run rally in the sixth won this contest. Joe Leary's two spectacular catches off Yordy featured the fielding.

SMALL CROWD SEES GOOD AMATEUR BOUTS AT NEW LONDON SATURDAY

New London, June 7.—About 500 sweltering fight fans made their way to the State Armory Saturday night where nine bouts of the amateur type, some in which the championships of the state were involved ended without any of the crowns changing hands. With the flyweight champ of the world present and none other than the famous Kid Kaplan of Meriden, Mosey King, commissioner Thomas E. Donohue, the affair from a business point of view was a disappointment. The intense heat no doubt had something to do with the small attendance.

The heat did not only seem to effect the spectators and held the crowd to a slim number, but the fighters seemed to be addicted to the same affliction. They were sluggish in their efforts and weary to mix it up. The first bout of the evening especially took on the nature of a loafing match or a dancing match. The fighters on the tail end of the card gave a better account of themselves. But in either case not one of the bouts took on the aspect of a real he-man bout. The seats in the spacious armory were only sparely settled, and the small crowd that was present at least supported enthusiastily the efforts of any boxer who attempted to mix it up.

All eyes were turned to the entrance of the principals in the star bout which was slated for the amateur championship of the state at 125 pounds. Scotty Carroll of New London was opposed to the state champ in the person of Tony De Palma of New Haven. Considerable interest seemed to be manifested in this bout, but New London's interest in the bout did not receive a favorable return. After knocking about in the ring for two rounds, Scotty Carroll with deceptive footwork and clever warding of De Palma had the edge over the champ going into the third round. During the early De Palma seemed to be fighting a conservative and cagey battle. He looked for his openings with the tact of a real fighter and his knowledge of boxing which exceeded that of the New London boy brought him to the front to stay. He fathomed the style of the would be champ and overcoming his defensive style peppered the plucky local chap with five uppercuts that had the latter reeling. Those wallops just about won the decision for the state champ, for up until this frame the battle was about even.

The fans craved a slam bang affair instead of the scientific and careful approach of the boxers which made up the majority of the card. But the more heavier boxers with Matt Baldwin of the Sub Base opposing Benjamin Roth of the Coast Guard division brought the applaudits of the crowd. Their efforts were well received and from the unanimous decision it seemed to point that the average fan at least local fan if not general fan likes bouts of the heavy weight type.

In the early bouts, Lou Sobol referced while Mosey King and Kid Kaplan were the third men in the more important matches.

The fights in summary form.

And; Gagano of New Haven defeated by Frank Paggio of New Haven by technical knockout in the third round. Fought at 126 pounds.

At 118 pounds, Andy Murray of New Haven won judge's decision over Pat Duffy of Bridgeport. 3 rounds.

At 122 pounds, Scotty Carroll of the U. S. Army lost judges decision to Tony DePalma of New Haven. 3 rounds.

At 146 pounds, Matt Baldwin of the U. S. Submarine Base won judges decision over Ben Rother of the U. S. Coast Guard. 3 rounds.

At 130 pounds, Matt Levine of Colchester lost to Johnie Mack of New Haven on technical knockout in the 3rd round.

At 120 pounds, Eddie Carney of New Haven won judges decision over Rocco Trezzio of Bridgeport. 3 rounds.

At 135 pounds, fight between Ed Crouch of New Haven and Frank Polo of New Haven ended in draw in three rounds, judges decision went to Crouch in 4 rounds.

At 125 pounds, Jack Esposito of New Haven won the judges decision over Tim Corbett in 3 rounds.

BULKELEY PLAYS LEOMINSTER HIGH TEAM THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin)

New London, June 7.—With the State championship practically decided by the fine record of the Bulkeley baseball nine in its games to date which includes 14 victories and a single defeat, Bulkeley enters its last week of baseball with the locals opposing two teams in three days. One of these games with Wilby High of Waterbury at this city on Wednesday is a game in which the state title is involved. The othe contest which will be played on this (Monday) afternoon in this city against Leominster (Mass.) High school will be the game with intersectional flavor. This game will begin at 3.

The emblem of championship, a gold baseball, will be distributed to the team members at the termination of the present season. Not a better balanced team has been produced by any High school that equals the smoothness of the championship 1925 team in many a moon. The team the best ever returned out at the local institution will see the majority of its members graduating to the ranks of colleges where it is expected that they will continue to pursue their baseball talents.

There has been no decision made about who will be the selection for mound duty against the Bay state team. Tillie Daniels is expected to be given the assignment regardless of the fact that he pitched a hard game Friday. This game with Leominster while not involving the state championship is coveted by the Bulkeley nine. For it is understood that the visitors come here with a fine aggregation of ball tossers and have cleaned up most of the opposition in their swing around loop of Massachusetts nines.

Bulkeley was without a game on Saturday and the players of nine enjoyed a much needed rest. There is much deprecation at the school on the hill to see the team hang up its spiked shoes for a good as far as playing for Bulkeley is concerned.

Valiants Win.

The Valiants' Athletic club, of Norwich, Conn., defeated the Hilltop Athletic club, of Westerly, Sunday afternoon, at Westerly, by a score of 14 to 2. The Hilltop A. ## ST. LOUIS TEAMS PROVE SENSATION OF LAST WEEK

New York, June 7—(A. P.)—New hope tonight tinged the background of a pennantless past for St. Louis baseball teams as they entered with zest into the major league races under the leadership of two infield idols.

Turning their backs to a disappointing start which has kept them in last place for several weeks, the Cardinals rallied under their new manager, Rogers Hornsby, to outhit and outscore the entire National league field for the best performance of the eighth playing week. Cincinnati broke before the spurt as St. Louis players swept the series and then topped off the week with a decision over the Giants.

Backed up by the brilliant pitching of Haines, Dickerman, Rhem and Sherdel, the Cards established a convincing offensive behind the long range fire of Hornsby and Bottomley, winning five of their seven games in decisive style.

Hardly less impressive was the sharp recovery of the Browns, under Sisler. In point of games won and lost, the St. Louis Americans were forced to share second place for the week with New York and Boston, but the team thundered a warning with a salvo of more than 100 hits and the week's high total of runs for both circuits at 66.

WINDHAM LOSES DECISION TO SO. MANCHESTER TEAM

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, June 7—Encountering a baffling brand of hurling, Coach T. A. Callaghan's Windham High school nine was on the losing end of a 5 to 1 decision yesterday afternoon at Recreation Park, Manchester High, tutored by the fiery Herman Bronkie, ex-big leaguer, romping away with the laurels in the second meeting between the two teams this season. E. Boyce was on the mound for the Silk Town athletes. The Crimson and Blue with the exception of Monroe Usher could do nothing with his offerings. Usher was credited with the two hits which Windham gleaned off of Boyce. The first was a single in the fourth inning and the second, a triple to the race track in left field which led to Windham's only score. Score:

FINANCIAL AND COMMERCIAL

Weekly Financial Review

New York, June 7—(A. P.)—Price movements in the past week's financial and commodity markets lacked uniformity. Stock prices turned reactionary after nearly two months of steadily rising prices although special strength developed in the oil, rubber and low priced motor shares as the week closed. Bond prices touched a new record high in reflection of the continuance of easy money but eased off on selling inspired by the approach of tax day.

Cotton futures broke sharply on publication of the government condition report, showing a relatively high percentage, but made brisk recovery on adverse weather reports, closing quotations showing gains of a half cent a pound or more above those at the end of last week. Wheat also was aided by the torrid weather and lack of rain, not quite on the week averaging between 7 1-2 and 8 cents a bushel.

Weakness of French exchange, which sagged below 4.70 cents to the lowest price since the spring of 1924, was one of the outstanding developments of the week. Selling of the French currency was inspired by the increases in note circulation and advance to the state shown in the weekly bank of France statement, and by cabled reports that Finance Minister Caillaux was meeting considerable opposition to his taxation programme. Italian exchange developed a temporary burst of strength on the announcement of a $50,000,000 Morgan credit, but yielded later in sympathy with the decline in French and Belgian rates. Demand sterling ruled steady around $4.85 5-8.

Palace Theatre

One of the many unique features which make "The Cat and the Canary" stand out as the greatest thrill—and laugh—success that the world has ever known, is the fact that there is no hero in it. That's the truth, and if you don't believe it, wait until you see this smashing success presented by the Augustin Stock Company all this present week starting tonight at the Palace Theatre with popular matinees on Wednesday and Saturday afternoons. Of course, William Augustin takes the leading role, but that doesn't make a hero out of him. He plays the part of Paul Jones, a rather bashful and stammering sort of a fellow. When all the troubles begin at the old mansion on the Hudson, Paul is scared stiff, his knees knock together. He is just as much frightened as any one in the audience, and that is going some. But in spite of his terrors, Paul Jones blunderingly does his best to clear up the mystery. He takes awful chances. He gets away with some of them. With others, he doesn't. The spooky and murderous member of this ancient household nearly kills him before the affair is cleared up, but Paul Jones, despite his wounds, plods grimly along, even when his hair is standing straight up. Every time Paul opens his mouth, you are going to laugh. You may be frightened half to death, as he is, but you'll laugh just the same, and before the horrific evening of thrills is over, you'll be glad that the playwright John Willard created the character of Paul Jones, for most of these laughs he hands you will come as a welcome relief to the series of chills along the spinal column that precede them. Each and every member of the company all have excellent roles that will win them new friends at every performance. The Palace theatre is equipt with typhoon cooling fans which makes the theatre 20 degrees cooler than on the streets giving patrons of this theatre greater comfort in watching the performances. Seats are now selling in advance for all performances and you are advised to secure your seats in advance.

Broadway Theatre

A rousing romance, seasoned with several spectacular thrills and some genuine laughs—that's "Code of the West," the new Paramount film that made its debut last night at the Broadway Theatre. It's a picturization of the story of the same name by the well known Zane Grey.

The author has every reason to feel grateful to Lucien Hubbard, who wrote the screen version, and William K. Howard, who directed the picture, for the plot has lost none of its virility and vitality by its transfer to the silver sheet. Moreover, the actual locations mentioned in the book—the picturesque and rugged country in the Tonto Basin, Arizona—were used as backgrounds, so that the colorful scenery is not the least of the photoplay's worth-while features.

Interest in the picture is further heightened by the performances of an exceptional cast headed by a quintet of popular players including Owen Moore, Constance Bennett, Mabel Ballin, Charles Ogle and David Butler.

The action of the story deals with the romance of Miss Bennett, a vivacious little flapper from the East, and Owen Moore, a somewhat bashful stripper from the West. Miss Bennett's flirtatious ways provoke Moore, who is passionately in love with her, into the caveman tactics and scraps that so startle him at the point of a gun.

The surprising developments that follow lead up to a thundering climax that furnishes the nth degree of excitement and thrills. Two of the many tremendous scenes in the picture include a dynamite automobile-horse race and raging forest fire.

Make it your business to see "Code of the West" if you are looking for the out-of-the-ordinary in film entertainment.

Walter Heirs was seen in a roaring comedy called "High Spirits" while a new Kinegrams rounded out a perfect show. Vaudeville, Thurs, Fri. and Sat.

Academy Orchestra

One more year has rolled around and the Academy Orchestra is due to present another annual concert. The evening selected is Wednesday, June 10, at which time the Orchestra will give its twentieth annual concert in Slater Memorial Hall.

There is every reasonable certainty that this concert will be a good one. The Orchestra is quite up to its usual standard, some may better, and the five solo numbers are of superior quality. These numbers will be presented by two Academy students from Hartford—two instrumental numbers and three dances.

Tickets for admission are 50c each, and may be secured from members of the orchestra or at Cranston's store.

POETRY

At Last.

When on my day of life the night is falling,
And, in the winds from unseen spaces blown,
I hear far voices out of darkness calling
My feet to paths unknown,

Thou who hast made my home of life so pleasant,
Leave not its tenant when its walls decay;
O Love Divine, O Helper ever present,
Be Thou my strength and stay!

Be near me when all else is from me drifting;
Earth, sky, home's pictures, days of sun and shine;
And kindly faces to my own uplifting
The love which answers mine.

I have but Thee, my Father! let Thy spirit
Be with me then to comfort and uphold;
No gate of pearl, no branch of palm I merit,
Nor street of shining gold.

Suffice it if—my good and ill unreckoned,
And both forgiven through Thy abounding grace—
I find myself by hands familiar beckoned
Unto my fitting place.

Some humble door among Thy many mansions,
Some sheltering shade where sin and sorrow cease,
And flows forever through Heaven's green expansions
The river of Thy peace.

There, from the music round about me stealing,
I shall would learn the new and holy song,
And find at last, beneath Thy trees of healing,
The life for which I long.

—John Greenleaf Whittier.

June Came Back This Morning.

Glad June came back this morning,
In all her raiment gay,
As on the year-gone twilight
When last she went away.
God seems to June most friendly
In fashioning her dress;
He gives her green and rose-tints—
His favorite, I guess.

I greeted her this morning
Out where the grass and trees
Play comrade to the river,
The dewfall and the breeze.
Yet, somehow, June seemed restless;
Unhappy, I might say,
For friends she'd hope to welcome
Were not out there today.

She looked far up the river.
She searched the woods and shore
For lovers she had guided
In Junetimes gone before.
War's drums for them had sounded:
The man to fight the foe.
The girl to nurse the wounded,
To knit, and serve, and sew.

Dear June, be not despairing
Some day they'll come again,
When he has won his battles
And she her fight for men.
Then you shall make them captive
With soul-bonds from above,
And they shall be forever
June's Prisoners of Love.

William Herschell.

BURGESS BEDTIME STORIES

NEW LONDON BUSINESS MEN TELL OF PLANS TO WIDEN UPPER BANK STREET

(Special to the Bulletin)

New London, June 7—Certain business men along upper Bank street declare that the powers that be in the city management have decided that Bank street is to be widened and that to accomplish this the sidewalks are to be narrowed a foot to two feet as conditions will permit. That's to be an expensive undertaking, one of the most costly the city has undertaken to effect an abatement of traffic congestion, but the plan is said to have been decided upon and it is to be carried tarough in the fall. When this occurs there will be some severe criticism of the proceeding that led the city management to refuse to narrow up the walks on Bank street south of Howard street when walks were laid last fall. Then three or four feet of the walks could have been thrown into street and the roadway widened to that extent, but the city would not do it. The walks were torn up the entire length and property owners asked that they and the city should be spared with the expense of laying walks that were not needed to the width that the walk was laid. Property owners along the street there declare that the proposed widening was a waste of money and it occasioned hardship to insist that they should raise the money.

Roger W. Jencks, a chief petty officer at the submarine base, was charged with a breach of the peace in the police court. Roger was accused by his wife, and he admitted by pleading guilty that he was rightly accused.

The trouble came from the alleged extravagance of the chief as when he was paid off Friday, getting $130, he went to the place of his wife's employment, the Palmer Brothers Co., and suggested to her that they should go out and have a good time. Roger's wife had two daughters when she married him, and to one of these Rogers gave a bathing suit that cost $5.0v. Mrs. Jencks regarded that as extravagance and so told her husband. She said she could make better use of money than in spending it for $5 bathing suits. Indeed she put her foot down and proposed that he should cut out that sort of extravagance. Then hotter words followed and Rogers lost his temper. He struck the woman he had promised to honor and respect, and soon she had a discolored eye that disfigured an otherwise handsome face. She asked for his arrest and secured it. The court was of the opinion that a reconciliation was not out of the question so an arrangement was made whereby Rogers is to pay his wife $10 a week and to stay away from her. This he agreed to do. The wife says she has had enough of married life with her husband and she desires to sever relations.

Raymond Bailey departed from the path of sobriety Friday and that led him into trouble. He was so noisy at his home that neighbors complained and he was charged with intoxication when police court assembled. Raymond explained and his wife agreed with him. She said he was not brutal to her, but when he indulged in liquor—well, that's something else. Raymond has not been in the police court for many months, so the court was disposed to give him a chance. Judgment was suspended for a term of six months and he was turned over to the probation officer.

S. Veles, a peddler, was charged with ignoring the signals of a traffic officer. He was to have been in the police court Saturday, but as he covers a vegetable route his case was continued till Tuesday.

Joseph Casino, 27 Stewart street, complained to the police late Saturday afternoon that while his automobile was parked on Main street, near John street, a car operated by Mrs Mary A. An automobile, owned and operated by John M. Fallon, Jr., of 35 Brooks street, and a machine owned and driven by James De Costa, 37 Blackhall street, were in collision Saturday night at the corner of Blackhall and Prest Street. Both cars were slightly damaged.

Mrs. Patterson, wife of Edward B. Patterson, 19 Center street, communicated with the police at 3.10 o'clock this morning, stating that an attempt had been made to steal Mr. Patterson's car, which was parked all last night in front of the Patterson residence.

Later Mr. Patterson informed the police that he did not believe that an attempt had been made to steal the machine, but that gasoline had been removed from the tank of the parked machine, the thieves being discovered as they stole the gasoline and escaped in their own car, which was seen to be operated away and to head for Hartford turnpike. Sergeant Patrick Murphy and Patrolman William Riordan went to the turnpike in the police car and continued as far as Colchester without locating the machine in which the gasoline thieves were passengers, this machine being in charge of two men.

SELESNITSKY ADMITS OVERSTAYING HIS LEAVE

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 7.—The hearing of charges made against Patrolman Charles Selesnitsky by Acting Lieutenant James D. Gaffney of being absent from his beat for 45 minutes on the night of May 22, during which time, it was alleged Selesnitsky was in the plant of the Columbia Leather Goods company, Garfield avenue, took place Saturday at the office of City Manager William A. Holt. Selesnitsky was represented by counsel in G. Curtis Morgan.

The witness, other than Selesnitsky and Acting Lieutenant Gaffney, was James Treadway, night watchman at the leather goods plant.

Acting Lieutenant Gaffney testified Selesnitsky reporting off duty for lunch at the customary time and also to the officer reporting on duty at the usual hour and that it was 45 minutes after the officer was supposed to have gone back on patrol duty before Selesnitsky returned to his beat, this act having been witnessed by Acting Lieutenant Gaffney. After Selesnitsky went to his beat, Acting Lieutenant Gaffney visited the leather goods factory and there Treadway informed him that Selesnitsky had been in the building about an hour and one-quarter.

Treadway corroborated the testimoney of the acting lieutenant.

Selesnitsky admitted being in the building during the time that he was accused of being absent from patrol, but stated that part of the time was occupied by his visiting a lavratory and that as he started to leave the plant he conversed a few minutes with Treadway.

Counsel for Selesnitsky criticised the manner in which Selesnitsky had been charged with violation of the police rules and regulations, stating that the officer had never received knowledge of the nature of the charges until the case was originally opened a week ago. This statement Captain Pinney brands as false and declared that written charges were read by him to Selesnitsky the day following Captain Pinney having been notified of Selesnitsky's acts of the night in question.

TWENTY-FOUR DOLLARS TO HAVE FORTUNE TOLD

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 7.—Another victim of the so-called "fortune tellers" was revealed in the person of Mrs. Mary Suza, 362 Main street this morning when Mrs. Suza complained to the police that she had been robbed of $24 by a roaming male gypsy.

Mrs. Suza declared that she was visited late yesterday afternoon at her home by the gypsy, who persuaded Mrs. Suza that the latter have her fortune told. The gypsy caused Mrs. Suza to produce $24 from its place of keeping and deposit it on a piece of furniture and then after purporting to tell the woman's fortune and replacing the money with several pieces of paper cut to the size of the bills, the gypsy departed with the $24. It was several hours afterwards that Mrs. Suza discovered her loss.

Several automobiles containing gypsies arrived in the city Saturday afternoon, but they were advised against camping within the city limits.

SAYS WOMEN BEAT MEN AS CAREFUL DRIVERS

After a thorough survey of all recent data concerning motor traffic and its hazards, Frederick L. Hoffman, LL. D., consulting statistician of the Prudential Insurance company of America, has arrived at the conclusion that women are usually more careful drivers than men. He goes even further, and says women have proved themselves so competent in control of motor machinery that the recent rule adopted by the International Commission on Aviation, excluding them as aviators, "is not, to be commended."

"There are no reasons," asserts Dr. Hoffman, "for assuming that women, in the course of time, will not prove as capable of managing aeroplanes as they have been found to be in the management of motor cars."

This statement is of special interest as the first that has come from Dr. Hoffman since he undertook an inquiry into aerial traffic hazards in view of the prospective development of commercial aviation in this country. He believes that aerial traffic as rapid transit for both passengers and freight will become a commonplace of the next decade, and he has already expressed an opinion, based on data from his investigations of rail and motor traffic, that the accident hazard will decrease in ratio to the increase in the number of flying machines.

Inferentially, he sees no reason, when the expected development is realized, why women may not qualify as pilots for the planes that carry freight, passengers and mails.

As for complaints frequently heard concerning them as being erratic or nervous drivers of motor cars, he declares they are uttered oftenest by men who could themselves be convicted of recklessness. "Motor car licenses," says Dr. Hoffman in this connection, "should not be granted as easily as they are, and a more adequate test should be required as to the physical capacity of the applicant to manage a car under trying conditions. The evidence is overwhelming that drivers are not dealt with as severely as they should be; particularly is this true in the case of those found driving at excessive speeds and under the influence of liquor. Licenses should be withdrawn from all who are caught speeding or violating fundamental laws of traffic safety."

"The price of ignorance, carelessness and apathy," Dr. Hoffman concludes, "is paid by the public to the extent of not fewer than 30,000 lives a year."

POETRY FOR THE WIDE AWAKES

A Green Cornfield

The earth was green, the sky was blue
I saw and heard one sunny morn
A skylark hang between the two
A singing speak above the corn:

A stage below, in gay accord,
White butterflies danced on the wing,
And still the singing skylark soared
And silent sank, and soared to sing.

The cornfield stretched a tender green
To right and left beside my walks;
I knew he had a nest unseen
Somewhere among the million stalks

And as I paused to hear his song
While swift the sunny moments slid,
Perhaps his mate sat listening long,
And listened longer than I did.

—Christina G. Rossetti.

Boy and Lark

Who taught you to sing,
My sweet, pretty birds?
Who tuned your beautiful throats?
You make all the woods
And the valleys to ring,
You bring the first news
Of earliest spring,
With your loud and silvery notes.

"It was God," said a lark,
As he rose from the earth:
"He gives us the good we enjoy;
He painted our wings,
He gave us our voice,
He finds our food,
He bids us rejoice—
Good morning, my beautiful boy!"

—Lydia H. Sigourney.

UNCLE JED'S TALK TO THE WIDE AWAKES

Good health should be the aim of every one, especially boys and girls for without health we are unhappy, often despondent and generally a burden to our relatives and friends. Sickness is very often the result of carelessness as it is a well known fact that most diseases can be avoided by correct living. Good health is a vital matter to people of today.

People who are continually in poor health have little or no interest in either their welfare, the welfare of those about them or the welfare of their business. A sick man, that is a man who is continually sick, has no place in the business world of today. He was tolerated in the old days but now that most people understand that disease is generally the result of carelessness the man who is continually ill is in a way considered a nuisance.

There is an old saying that an ounce of prevention is worth a pound of cure and that saying cannot be used to any greater advantage than in the interest of good health. If we take proper measures to safeguard our health we are less liable to contract disease. The boys and girls of today are going to be the men and women of tomorrow. That means, of course, that the boys and girls of today are going to take the places of the men and women of today when they have outlived their usefulness.

The time to guard our health is when we are young. Once disease gains a foothold on our systems it is very hard to regain our health. So it behooves us to take measures to safeguard ourselves against disease while we are young. We all know that people with good strong, healthy bodies are less liable to contract disease than those with weak, puny bodies. So you boys and girls who want to be healthy men and women better take care of your health.

The principle requisites of good health are fresh air, and plenty of it, cleanliness, physically and morally, regular daily exercise, preferably in the open air, and a contented and happy mind. Try to follow the rules of right living and by so doing you will enable yourselves to keep healthy and to enjoy life to its utmost.

LETTERS WRITTEN BY WIDE AWAKES

A Voyage

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to tell you about my voyage on the Richard Peck, which is the boat I sailed on going to New York with my mother, my girl friend and her mother.

We left New London harbor late at night and sailed on. The foaming water that came out from the bottom of the ship was lovely to see. That night we passed the New London and the New Haven lighthouses. It was windy on deck but the night was beautiful. I retired at midnight which was the latest I had ever gone to bed.

In the morning I woke up at seven o'clock and went out on deck. It was chilly but I did not mind. I approached the captain and asked him where we were. He told us we would be entering New York harbor very soon.

Suddenly the sky grew calm and the captain told us we were now sailing up the Hudson river.

By this time my girl friend joined me. She was very shy and did not like to ask questions so I asked them instead for her. Standing by the captain of the boat I asked him if he would [illegible]. We stayed [illegible] all planed. He showed us the Colgate's clock, the Brooklyn bridge, and the Manhattan bridge. We also passed a telephone building being built. It was all steel. I also saw the Woolworth building which is the highest in the world. During my stay in New York I saw the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company building which is one of the highest buildings in the world.

I hope the Wide Awake boys and girls will like my story and I hope that they may see this wonderful sight which I saw.

LIBBY SOLOMON, Age 12.
Norwich.

The Boston Boys

Uncle Jed: In the revolutionary days some of the English soldiers broke the ice on the pond, and trampled down all the snow hills. They interferred with the boys' games and sports.

George was an American boy. He and his friends went down to the pond to skate. When they got there they were disappointed to find the ice broken. George and his friends were angry, they decided to go up to General Howe's headquarters.

James played the drum and William played the fife. They marched straight to the house, one hundred or more boys. The sentinel asked George what he wanted. George told him he wanted to see General Howe. The sentinel said to him, "The general has something else to do than be bothered by young rebels."

George said, "We will stay here until we see General Howe." And in a chorus they yelled, "Hurrah."

The door opened and the general came out and asked why they were here. George exclaimed, "Your soldiers have broken up our ice pond again. They take our balls and bother us in every way they can."

Finally he exclaimed, "You will get what you asked for the next time a soldier interferes he will be punished."

"Are you satisfied," asked the General?

"Yes," said John and the boys marched down the hill shouting, "Hurrah! Hurrah."

A Rainy Day

Dear Uncle Jed: I am sending a story to tell the Wide Awakes how I spent a rainy day.

One morning in spring I woke up and found to my surprise that it was raining. At first I said, "Rain, rain, rain, nothing but rain," Then I thought how good the rain is because I knew it would help the daisies, violets, bluets, crocuses, and all the other flowers to push their pretty heads out from their winter home.

I was wondering how I should spend the day. When I did all my part of the housework, I thought I would sew. Suddenly I heard a knock on the door. "Who, in the world could it ever be on such a day," I said to myself as I went to open the door. I saw to my great surprise that it was my friend Josephine. I was glad she came because we could have a good time together the rest of the day. Josephine was not wet because she had on a raincoat and rubbers. Luckily she had brought her sewing along, so we sewed for awhile. Then we played Flinch for awhile and did many other things. At last the rain stopped. I walked home with Josephine. When I was alone coming home I looked at the leaves. They were as green as they could be, and I saw a little flower and the birds were singing happily in the trees. I was so happy I joined them in their song. Thus ended happily what I thought was going to be a dark, dreary, rainy day.

MARY MIHANCKI, Age 13.

A Trip to New York

Dear Uncle Jed: One Friday morning I awoke and dressed myself. When I came into the kitchen my father said, "You are going to New York with me today." We ate breakfast in a hurry and packed the things we needed. Soon we were started for the trip. My brother hitched the horse and took us to the station. When we reached there the train was just coming in. We got on and sat down inside and waited for a while. It took four hours to get to New York.

At the end of this trip we got off the train and went to our cousins. When we came there we put everything away and had dinner. When the dinner was finished we had some fruit then my cousin locked the door and we all went to the park. We saw all kinds of animals. When we went all around it was walked home. It was time for supper. She made supper. We all had supper. After supper we played some games. Then we went to bed. My father and I stayed there a week. We had a very good time.

SARAH BERMAN, Age 12.
Yantic, R. F. D. No. 1.

Memorial Day

Uncle Jed: A few years after the great struggle between the north and the south, the people set a day apart in which they honored the soldiers that had departed in the great Civil war.

More than a half a century has passed and this Memorial day is still kept. It comes on the thirtieth day of the beautiful month of May, when all nature is arrayed in her beauty, and all the flowers are in bloom.

Memorial day now is not only kept to honor the soldiers that died in the Civil war, but also those who had shed their blood so freely in the cause of right during the great world war when all the nations of the earth were upset.

So I think that on this day the least thing that one can do to show his gratitude and honor to those who gave their lives for a just cause is to place a garland of flowers on their graves.

HELEN E. MINSKY, Age 16.
Jewett City.

My Two Kittens.

Dear Uncle Jed: This is my first letter to the Wide Awake Circle. I think I will tell you about my two little kittens. One is black with a white nose and white feet, the other being nearly all yellow. I named the black one "Nig" and the yellow one "Toodles." They are very cute indeed. They play with one another. Every morning before I go to school and when I come home I feed them.

ED PAGE STORY

Building a Nest

Dear Uncle Jed: I thought I would write this time and tell you about building a nest. Under the eaves of an old house are two birds building a nest. The hole is as big as a rat hole. The color of the birds is a greenish black. The names of them I do not know. This winter my brother-in-law put some hay and grass around some rose bushes to keep them warm and that is where they got it from. They found a good place away from cats and cruel birds. I do not know how many eggs laid. I suppose she has some little baby birds by now. This makes two years she has built her nest there. I read the Wide Awake stories every week and find them very interesting. We always [illegible] all birds and animals.

DOROTHY PATRIDGE.
Norwich, R. F. D., No. 1.

An Unexpected Visitor

Dear Uncle Jed and All the Little Wide Awakes: I am sending you another story entitled, An Unexpected Surprise, which I hope all of you will enjoy reading.

One warm summers' day I was returning home from the fields. As it was noon I hurried and so reached home ahead of my father and brothers. Taking the daily paper I sat on the doorstep and began to read the news, so as to be up to date with the country. At last I came to the headlines Athletic Department. Immediately I began to read as fast as a hungry hawk devours its prey. As I was reading a fascinating paragraph of a ball game I thought I was the happiest boy in the world and that nothing could make me happier. But how easily one can be deceived. At that instant I heard someone say, "Why, hello, Steve!" I almost fell from the doorstep. The person before me was the last person I would think of seeing at that moment. I sat dumbfounded. Before me stood my sister who had come hundreds of miles for a visit. Then I found out that there is much more pleasure in seeing a sister absent for more than six years than reading of a baseball game.

STEVE L. BARTOK, Age 12.
Mansfield Center.

My Police Dog

Dear Uncle Jed: I am writing my first letter to you, my dog's name is Old Glory, after the flag. The collar she wears has forty eight notches on it, one for every star in the flag. She almost talks. I can hide anything and she will find it. She plays ball with me and watches over me at night. When I ask her what she wants she will bark and show me. No one can touch me and she is just like a soldier always on guard. When my daddy tells her to wake me up in the morning she jumps on my bed and barks at me until I get up.

MARGARET J. HETHER[illegible] Age 8
Plainfield.

My First Sewing Experiment.

Dear Uncle Jed: One day I did not know what to do, so I decided I would ask my mother if she would teach me how to make a decent dress.

She was very glad to teach me. She was very glad to know that I was interested in this trade.

The first thing she taught me was to have the material prepared. She then taught me how to make a dress.

The next day I made a dress without my mother's help. I closely followed her directions and succeeded in making a very nice dress. This was my first sewing experiment.

HELEN BROWN, Age 11.
Occum.

Safety First

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write and tell you about Safety First.

In my picture there are two rats and two cats. The cats are trying to catch the rats. The cats are trying to catch the rats. The two rats are hurrying to their holes. And there is a sign at the bottom which says "Safety First." They must think safety first next time.

NINA E. BURGESS, Age 8.

The Life of Columbus

Dear Uncle Jed: When Columbus was a boy he often went down to the wharf to watch the ships being loaded and sent away. He often wished that some day he might be a sailor. As the days went by he heard people say that the earth was flat. He had been told never to venture too far for he might walk too far and fall in the water and that would be the end of him. Columbus had different thoughts. He said that the earth was round. No one else agreed with him. Finally he wanted to prove it. So a good queen gave him ships and some sailors and he sailed away. For days they saw nothing of the land. The sailors grew homesick for home. They were going to throw him overboard if they did not reach land soon. The next morning they saw why the land they had discovered.

MARION PENDLETON.

A Model Boat Trip.

Dear Uncle Jed: Hurrah! Hurrah! Look what's coming, and oh, look! it's coming right into our bay. That is what I shouted when I was up in Maine on an island, because a motor boat was coming.

I could see now that there were two men in the boat, an older one who owned the land we were staying on, the other man who owned the boat. I also saw that they had some vegetables which they wanted to sell us.

Well, anyway, they sold us some. Then the man asked my brother and I if we would like to take a ride in his boat, as he had to go over to another island which was about a mile and a half away. We said we would like to go, so we jumped into the boat.

The men started the boat and away we went like a streak of lightning. Going over to the other island we had a high time going away out from the shore, then going near again.

Over at the other island the men sold more vegetables. Coming back, a storm came up with mammoth waves. Didn't they roll nice. You bet they did! One of the men asked me if I would like to steer the boat, and of course I said "Yes." I took the steering wheel and began to steer. I could not make the boat cut the waves right so I got all covered with water. We got home safely and then I told my mother that I didn't care because I got wet. Although I did get wet, I had a nice time.

HARVEY CONKLIN, Age 11.
Baltic.

My Visit to Rocky Point.

Dear Uncle Jed: I want to tell you about my trip to Rocky Point and the wonderful things I saw Memorial day. I went down with my father and mother. First off I was in the roller coasters. They gave me a thrill as it was my first ride. After that I was in the whip; that was lots of fun. I have also been to see Collins' cave, which is a new attraction and worth seeing.

I have been in the airplanes and also like them very well. I have had a very good time and hope to go again before the summer is over.

I hope the Wide Awakes will like my story.

HELEN BEATRICE RIOUX, Age 11.
Sterling.

Cotton

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write about cotton. Of all fibers cotton is the most useful. Cotton grows best in the southern states. Most all the people wear some cotton clothing. Cotton grows on little bushes. The members form around the seed in the boll or seed pod, bursts open when the seeds ripen. Then it is picked and hauled to the gin.

HELEN PENDLETON, Age 10.
Norwich.

My Kittens

Dear Uncle Jed: I am going to write and tell you about my kittens. I have a mother cat and she had four gray kittens. They are white pawed but one. That is just like his mother. The kittens were born the 12th of April, so they are 7 weeks old. One has a pink nose, so their names are Pink Nose, White Feet, Tiny and Blue.

VIDA E. BURGESS, Age 10.
Danielson.

Three Kittens

Dear Uncle Jed: We have three little kittens. One of them is all light brown. We found them behind my brother's crib. We took them upstairs in the shop and put them into a tub. They are still there. Their eyes aren't open.

His many friends express their best wishes for success in the work he has chosen. Many Taftville people were in Hartford Saturday to attend his ordination.

At the session of the church school at the Taftville Congregational church Sunday, there was a rehearsal of the Children's Day service which is to be presented next Sunday at the church, under the general direction of Miss Gertrude M. Young. On the second Sunday in June of each year the church gives up its main service to the children of the church school. This year one of the symbolic services prepared by the Congregational Sunday School Extension society is to be used. Sunday evening, the meeting of the Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor was led by Mrs. Edwin G. Crowdis.

NEWLY ORDAINED PREIST SINGS HIS FIRST MASS AT ST. PATRICK'S CHURCH

Rev. James Osmond O'Brien, ordained Saturday morning in St. Patrick's Cathedral, New York by Cardinal Patrick J. Hayes, celebrated his first mass Sunday at 10:30 in St. Patrick's church, Norwich. A native of Prince Edward Island, and having served with the 77th Division from New York state, including two and one-half years in France, the young priest has made his home in Norwich during his later college and seminary years, with his sister, Mrs. John J. Morley. This brought him under the jurisdiction of St. Patrick's parish, and he was invited by the rector, Rt. Rev. Mgr. Michael H. May to return to his home parish for the important event of his first mass.

Father O'Brien was accompanied by two young seminarians who in New York Saturday were elevated to the dignity of deacons, at the same ceremony in the Cathedral. They served as officers of his mass.

In spite of the intense heat there was a congregation of good proportions in attendance at the service, this including ex-service men, from the Army and Navy. The magnificent sanctuary was adorned with tree palms and ferns, the decorations of the three marble altars being roses, white and in delicate tints. When lighted at the consecration this sanctuary is of unsurpassed taste, refinement and beauty.

Special thanksgiving music was given by the choir, Organist Frank L. Farrell having arranged his program to include. Durant's Kyrie, Gloria and Credo, with the Sanctus and Agnes Dei of Generali. The processional and recessional marches sounded the jubilant note of the entire service. The quartet included Mrs. Frank L. Farrell, Miss Loretta Bellefeur, Frank G. Aubrey and Roderick F. Sullivan. At the offertory, Mrs. Farrell gave the beautiful Ave Maria, Frans Abt's setting, a composition of melody and dignity so worthy of the theme. Her voice filled the great auditory with ease, and in phrasing and expression the number was particularly beautiful.

In the solemn mass, Rev. Father O'Brien had as his deacon Rev. John J. Reilly, junior assistant at St. Patrick's, the sub-deacon was Rev. Mr. William A. Cassidy, of Piermont, N. Y., and the master of ceremonies was Rev. Mr. Joseph Keough, of Staten Island; as noted, the two last named have not yet reached the dignity of priests. The sermon was delivered by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Michael Henry May, the rector, so recently returned from Rome and wearing the crimson which denoted his new rank as domestic prelate of the Vatican.

The day was Trinity Sunday. Monsignor May read the epistle for all the masses of the Sunday, Romans 2, 33-36, and the gospel, Matthew 28, 18-20. From the gospel he chose his text. "All power is given to me in heaven and in earth. Going, therefore, teach ye all nations, baptising them in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost; teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you. And behold, I am with you all days, even to the consummation of the world."

Dramatic as was ever the commission of a knight from his king, in being sent forth, was his commission to the newly ordained priest as he fared him forth in his labors in missionary life in the Middle West. Father O'Brien leaves after a brief visit to his aged father at Prince Edward Island to labor in the great Diocese of Helena, Montana. Mgr. May spoke eloquently of the glory to God and the honor to Jesus Christ being paid by those gathered to rejoice with the young priest in his great happiness. He recalled the fact that over forty years before, he himself had celebrated his first mass in his home town and church of St. Mary's, New London, with relatives, friends, schoolmates and college friends assembled in the same way. He dwelt upon the awe and the solemnity of the priest's office—to call God Himself from the heights of heaven, quoting the Book of Kings, regarding the homage due the Creator and the reverence due those whom God has set aside as forming His priesthood, in unbroken succession from the time of the Apostles. What Saint Thomas, also, has said regarding Holy Orders was recalled: the mission of the priest to do God's work and to continue the ministrations begun by Jesus Christ, to teach and to preach.

Indicative of the majesty, the authority, the continuity, the wide-reaching influence of the Roman Catholic church were Mgr. May's words, as he pictured the young candidate who had received so lately the powers conferred upon him by the Cardinal, to continue an apostle of Christ, a power appalling in its greatness—to be the representative of Jesus Christ on earth—the ambassador of God. To obey the definite command of the Saviour, "Do this for commemoration of Me," after He had said of the consecrated bread, "This is My body." Following the multiplication of the loaves and fishes, the Saviour promised, "bread I will give you—not the bread of the body but of the soul, This bread is My flesh." This is the power conferred upon the priest—of compelling God to come down from heaven at the moment of the Consecration.

"All power is given to Me," the gospel says: "Receive ye the Holy Ghost; whose sins ye shall forgive they are forgiven them; whose sins ye shall retain they are retained." Such is the charter, the commission, of the young priest. And the same Christ has promised to be with him to the end of time.

Offering the holy sacrifice of the mass, exercising the consoling authority of the sacrament of penance, forgiving those repentant for sin, doing good in the world, by example and precept, uplifting and encouraging the erring, showing the imprint of Divine authority by a model life; loyalty to the Holy Father, bearing the cross with patience as Christ enjoined, assuming responsibilities and hardships and sacrifices as cheerfully as in his soldier-life, manifesting love for and confidence in the Mother of Christ who is also the Mother of and Queen of priests, these were a few of the duties which were pointed out as awaiting the new priest in his future years.

Mgr. May expressed the conviction that the young Levite would prove faithful to the training he had received fro mhis own former college mate, Mgr. McIntyre, at Dunwoodie Seminary; and he sent him forth with confidence to another classmate of his own at Grand Seminary, now Bishop John Carroll, of the Diocese of Helena. He begged the earnest prayers of the congregation for the spiritual and physical success of the new priest and added St. Paul's admonition, "Let us pray for one another."

Very modestly and humbly the young ex-soldier listened to the eloquent commission. Following the mass, the members of the congregation went to the altar railing—Father O'Brien's relatives being given precedence—each receiving the solemn blessing ceived from his own former college young priest, upon which, as Mgr. May had reminded them, the oil of and reverently kissing the hand of the

It was a long and trying ceremonial; but the soldierly young man who had not flinched at the duties of the days and nights in the Argonne Forest gave no sign of weariness, as by imposition of hands, he called down in Latin, God's choicest blessings upon each individual who knelt before him. This ended a day of great rejoicing for the entire parish.

NEARLY 150 BOYS LEARNING TO SWIM

Nearly one hundred and fifty of the city's liveliest lads are due to take their fourth lesson in the Y. M. C. A.'s "Learn to Swim" campaign at the "Y" this Monday afternoon, and Physical Director Frits and his assistants are having a busy time in trying to hurry the boys along in their "navigation" as they splash and gurgle about in the cool, sparkling water of the big pool.

The boys are being taught a step at a time, beginning with the proper method of breathing. This is followed by various stunts given for the purpose of helping them overcome their fear of the water and make them feel "at home" in the water. Later they are taught to float across the pool, after which are added the arm and leg motions, which with a reasonable amount of earnest practice results in most boys accomplishing the task of learning to swim.

The classes are scheduled for Monday, Wednesday and Friday afternoons of this week, the first class starting promptly at 4 o'clock. The boys enrolled in the lessons are as follows:

Frank Antenello, Christ Angelopoulis, Rosario Antenello, Jos. Astowski, Stephen Andivich, Mathew Angarano, Albert Baush, Chas. Banker, Raymond Banning, John Benker, Leonard Bogue, Jas. Bartoli, Thos. ### Y. M. C. A. SWIMMING POOL PROVING A BLESSING

The magnificent gift by Mrs. H. H. Osgood of the beautiful pool at the Y. M. C. A. is proving a veritable blessing to hundreds these hot days. Through the past week it has daily been filled with boys who were being taught to swim free of cost; large numbers of men and older boys have also found the sparkling pool a cooling comfort. The management of the association as well as many of the men and boys of Norwich will appreciate more and more this princely gift which is so very practical.

This is the third season that the management has offered free swimming lessons to the boys of the city eleven years and over, and an ever increasing number are taking advantage of the rare privilege.

It is easy to believe that in the coming years lives will be saved because boys are now learning the art of swimming in this safe and cleanly swimming pool.

WARNING OF SWINDLER OF CATHOLIC CHURCHES

P. J. Flanagan, superintendent of police at Bridgeport, has written the local police concerning Armand Bernier, who is alleged to be a swindler of Catholic churches. The Bridgeport police say the man has collected money around Bridgeport for Catholic entertainments and then disappeared. It is thought that he is in this vicinity and the letter is in the way of a warning. The man is described as being about 28, light complexion.

MASSACHUSETTS MAN WAS WITHOUT DRIVER'S LICENSE

"The joke's on me," exclaimed Edward A. Hackett of Bolton, Mass., at police headquarters early Saturday evening when he found himself summoned to appear in the city court for failing to have his operator's license with him while driving his automobile along the road between Jewett City and this city.

Hackett came to police headquarters to enter a complaint against a Noank man whom he accused of reckless driving and weaving in and out of a line of cars on the Jewett City road. Upon arriving in Norwich, Hackett made his complaint to traffic officer William Sharvan and the two men and the officer came to police headquarters. Hackett also accused the Noank man of refusing to show his operator's license upon request, but at the police station he showed it to Capt. Thomas Murphy who gave the information to the Massachusetts man, at the same time informing him that he would have to take up the complaint with the state police at the Danielson barracks as the alleged offenses had taken place out of the jurisdiction of the Norwich officers.

Then Capt. Murphy asked the Bolton man to show his operator's license. "I haven't it," was the response, "I changed into my summer clothes and forgot to change my license at the same time."

The Massachusetts man was told he would have to appear in the city court Monday because of his forgetfulness and he was also obliged to get a chauffeur to drive his car to a garage to remain until this (Monday) morning.

It is not known whether he has gone further with his complaint about the alleged reckless driving by the Noank man.

60 AUTO ACCIDENTS DAILY IN PAST MONTH

Automobile accidents happened in Connecticut at the rate of at least sixty a day during the last month, according to announcement of May statistics by the state motor vehicle department. Up to the close of last week, 1,800 May accidents had been reported to the department and several towns remained to be heard from. Twenty-five people were killed, making a total of 109 deaths caused by motor vehicles so far this year, an increase of three over the record for the corresponding period of last year.

Saturday and Sunday, May 23 and 24 are listed as the worst days this year in the state's motor vehicle casualty list. There were ninety-eight accidents on each of those dates, which was thirty-eight in excess of the daily average for the month. On the former date, there was a shower in the evening, during which many mishaps occurred, and the following day, Sunday, was marked by rain, with the result that many skidding accidents were reported. The records for those days are not so bad, however, as the high mark day of last year, which was November 23, the day of the Yale-Harvard football game when 154 accidents occurred, according to reports made to the department.

The May accident record is already worse than that of the same month in 1924, for which 1,700 accidents were reported.

The courses were served at the homes of the Misses Elizabeth Avery, Harriet MacCluggage, Marion Hancock, Phyllis Brewer and Agnes Dean. Following the supper impromptu dancing was enjoyed at the home of Miss Dean.

NOVELTY PARTY HELD FOR CHRIST CHURCH PARISH

The delightful novelty party held last week in the parish social rooms of Christ's Episcopal church attended by a large crowd of parishioners and friends proved in several ways a great success. After opening musical numbers by the Lambert orchestra a short business meeting was held at which reports of parish work done the last six months and the successful results were read. New plans were arranged for, to be developed next fall. One of the most interesting was the Parish Bazaar to be held in November. All organizations and every member of the parish are to make during the summer articles for the bazaar.

After several interesting numbers on the program from the stage, the grand march was enjoyed by every one present, then during the dancing which followed novel refreshments were served by the young people. Everyone had a wonderful time and all are getting ready for the parish picnic on June 30th.

Bible Pictures at Y. M. C. A.

In the gymnasium of the Norwich Y. M. C. A. Sunday afternoon an interesting service was held. The program consisted of the first half of the Bible feature picture, "The Fall of Jerusalem" and it proved to be a picture of real interest, as it portrayed several of the events of the thrilling story true to the record of Holy Writ. The pictures of Zedekiah, the weak king and his wife of the great danger of the course they were pursuing, and finally after several attempts had been made to take the life of the Prophet, Jeremiah urged Zedekiah to put away his heathen wife, which finally he did. The calm confidence of the prophet and his wonderful faith were pictures in several acts that demonstrated the courage and bravery of Gods prophet.

Secretary Hill made brief remarks, emphasizing the unfailing lesson that Just as Jerusalem finally fell because of sin, so any nation, any city, any town and any village will fail and eventually fail if sin continues, also it is always true of an individual, if he continues in sin, he is certain to fall eventually.

Hugh Kinder furnished music for the pictures.

After the business session a social hour was enjoyed.

PHILATHEA CLASS HAD SUPPER ON LAWN

On Friday evening, the Philathea class of the United Congregational Sunday school held its last regular meeting of the season at the home of Mrs. C. A. Spear, Canterbury Turnpike.

A delicious supper was served on the lawn at 6:30 o'clock, with the following menu:

Tuna Fish a la King in Pattie Shells
Peas Radishes
Potato Chips Rolls
Iced Tea
Orange Sherbert
Cake and Assorted Wafers
Mints

After supper, the business meeting was called to order by the president, Mrs. May Young, and the reports of the secretary, Mrs. Edwin F. Colt, and the treasurer, Mrs. A. J. Sinay, were read and approved. A tentative program for next year's meetings was made.

After the business meeting adjourned, a prettily decorated basket filled with many beautiful and useful gifts was presented to Miss Elsie Adams with the best wishes of the class in honor of her approaching marriage. The gifts included china, glassware, silver, linen, pictures and other articles.

Vocal and instrumental selections were rendered by several of the members. The color scheme of the evening was pink and white and the hostesses were Mrs. Spear, Miss Martha Reynolds, Miss Helen Spalding and Miss Irene Wells, assisted by Mrs. Alfred G. Bliven and Miss Betty Spear.

The affair was a very fitting close to a busy year.

MERCIER ASSEMBLY'S ANNUAL COMMUNION WITH BREAKFAST

The members of Mercier assembly, No. 12, C. L. of C., received their annual communion at St. Mary's Memorial church Sunday morning at the 7:30 o'clock mass, after which the members proceeded to the Wauregan Hotel where a very appetizing communion breakfast was served to about 75 members.

During the breakfast solos were rendered by the Misses Nagle, Donovan and Peloquin. Remarks and speeches were made by the various officers, including the president, Mrs. Thomas J. McVeigh; state secretary, Mrs. James J. Dutton; honorary president, Miss Mazie Maloney; vice-president, Miss Eleanor Donovan; recording secretary, Miss Mary Hamil; treasurer, Miss Mary McCrohan; first honorary president, Mrs. James J. Casey; and Mrs. May Symonds, chairman of the breakfast committee, who also thanked all who had in any way assisted to make the breakfast such a success. Owing to the intense heat, Rev. William A. Keefe, the chaplain, and Mrs. Esther Reardon, the state president, were unable to be present. The breakfast closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner by the assembly. The accompanists were the Misses Brennan and Daly.

Sisters From New Mexico.

NORWICH TOWN

In recognition of the esteem in which they are held by their friends and neighbors on Vergason avenue, Mr. and Mrs. William Weaver, for about five years residents on the avenue, were given a surprise farewell party Thursday evening, at their home, by a company of twenty-five or more. Mr. and Mrs. Weaver are expecting soon to move into one of Ruth Snow's houses on Huntington avenue. While the distance is not so great from the house they are leaving, it is sincerely regretted by many that Mr. and Mrs. Weaver are to leave the circle of friends that have cherished their presence for the past few years, during which sincere good will has always prevailed and in several cases lasting friendships have been cultivated.

Mr. and Mrs. Weaver not only have proven good neighbors in deeds of kindness and words of comfort and cheer in their daily life, which makes it harder for their friends to lose them; but on many occasions they have extended their hospitality to a much larger circle when a general invitation has been extended to members of the Solcal Corner to attend a picnic during the summer at their home. On these occasions which continued for many successive years, until last year, when due to illness in the family it was quite impossible, guests numbering 100-150, availed themselves of a delightful time, which always seemed assured, when going to the home of Auntie No. 1, of Club No. 2.

At the gathering Thursday evening, everyone brought something good for the inner man, which when opened up displayed a fine assortment of sandwiches, cake and fancy wafers. These were served by several of the women present. During the evening there was singing and recitations by young and old.

The last meeting for this season of the Lathrop Memorial Foreign Missionary society, is to be held Wednesday afternoon at 3:30 (daylight time), in the First Congregational chapel, when it is hoped that there will be a large attendance.

Judge and Mrs. William H. Williams, of Derby, were guests over the week-end of Mrs. Williams' brother and sister-in-law, Rev. and Mrs. Gurdon F. Bailey, at the Congregational parsonage on Elm avenue.

Supervisor of Agents of the Connecticut Humane society, Walter H. Phelps, of Hartford, and District Agent for Norwich-New London territory, Frederic H. Wyant, of Norwich Town, were visitors in Danielson, Moosup and Central Village, on Friday in the interests of the society. Mr. Phelps motored down from Hartford early that morning, and was joined by Mr. Wyant when reaching the latter's home on Town street.

FRANCE TO ATTEMPT TO HALT FALL OF THE FRANC

Paris, June 7.—(A. P.)—The loan which France negotiated with the Morgan firm, of $100,000,000, will be brought into play, the French ministry of finances announced today, in an attempt to prevent the further fall of the franc.

Sterling touched 103 and the dollar passed 21 francs yesterday. The officials of the ministry of finance are convinced that the rise in Anglo-Saxon exchange is entirely due to speculation, and, as outlined in M. Caillaux's recent declaration the Morgan loan, set aside to meet just such an emergency, will be brought into the market to stem the rising tide of sterling and the dollar.

C. L. BARDO GRANTED A LEAVE OF ABSENCE

The President Addressed the Norse-American Centennial at Minneapolis—Told the Assemblage That America Will be What They Make It—Declared Religious Liberty, Economic Opportunity and Integity of the Law Are the Most Precious Possessions of the Human Race—Crowd to Hear President Coolidge Was so Great That Thirty Persons Fainted.

Minnesota State Fair Ground, June 8.—(AP)—Facing a hostile wind but a friendly audience, President Coolidge paid tribute today, in an address at the Norse-American Centennial celebration, to the hardy Scandinavian immigrants who settled in the northwest and helped develop this agricultural empire.

A windstorm, with a fine, cold rain falling at intervals, reached its peak as the president was delivering his message to the thousands packed into the stands opposite the speaker's platform. But he completed his prepared address and, with Mrs. Coolidge, waited until several other speakers, among them Secretary Kellogg, had concluded their remarks.

Today's exercises, the feature of the celebration being held to commemorate the one hundredth anniversary of the first organized migration of Norwegians to the United States, were staged on the spot where three years ago Mr. Coolidge, as vice president, fought to address a state fair crowd.

On that occasion he was interrupted by a part of his audience, who thought his speech was delaying the horse races which they wanted to see. Today he had the respectful attention of a vast throng throughout his address and repeatedly he was cheered and applauded.

The president was introduced by Governor Christian who declared: Minnesota and the northwest believe in Calvin Coolidge."

Hundreds of uniformed national guardsmen kept the crowd back from the speakers' stand. An added military touch was given by the marine band from Washington, which played the "Star Spangled Banner" just before the president's address.

As he left the speaker's stand to return to the St. Paul home of Mr. Kellogg, to remain until he attends a reception at the state house prior to his departure later in the night for Washington, the president's silk hat and whipped into the stands by the wind, but his face was wreathed with a smile as he bowed acknowledgment to the cheers of the crowd.

Despite intermittent showers which for a time threatened to reach the proportions of a downpour, the crowd, made up of residents of surrounding states as well as Minnesota, stood its ground to hear the president.

Part of the audience was packed into the spacious covered grandstand opposite the speakers' stand. Thousands of others sat in open bleachers or stood in a far-reaching circle, the voice of the president being carried by amplifiers.

So great was the crush of men, women and children who wanted to get a glimpse of the president and Mrs. Coolidge at the fair grounds that thirty persons fainted or were injured, none seriously.

Army ambulances dashed through the crowd to take ten persons to a first aid station on the grounds, while the others who collapsed recovered sufficiently to return to their homes without hospital treatment.

The stand from which Mr. Coolidge spoke was covered, and on one side protection from the raw weather was afforded by hastily stretched canvas, but the wind, swirling across the race track, dusty, despite the light rain, repeatedly whipped clouds of fine dirt into the face of the president and members of his party.

Devoid of politics, the afternoon's exercises were presided over by Henrick Shipstead, Minnesota's Farmer-Labor member of the United States senate, who in 1922, defeated Secretary Kellogg, then a senator, for reelection.

The president, avoiding any reference to political or economical conditions in the northwest, confined himself to praise of the Norse immigrants and to an expression of satisfaction over the way national unity has been fused from varied racial elements.

"If fraternity and co-operation are possible on the scale of the continent among people so widely diverse, why not on the scale of a world?" suggested Mr. Coolidge, adding:

"It is not a new thought, but a profoundly engaging one. I firmly believe it is more than a chimera. I feel it is possible of realization. I am convinced that our national story might somewhat help to guide mankind toward such a goal."

The president told his audience that in the midst of "loyalties that are all beyond possibility of question" it was "difficult to choose among the many national and racial groups that have sought out America for their home and their country."

"We are thankful for all of them, and yet more thankful that the experiment of their common citizenship has been so magnificently justified in its results," he said. "If one were seeking proof of a basic brotherhood among all races of men, if one were to challenge the riddle of Babel in support of aspirations for a unity capable of assuring peace to the nations, in such an inquiry I suppose no better testimony could be taken than the experience of this country.

"Out of the confusion of tongues, the conflict of traditions, the variations of historical setting, the vast differences in talents and tastes there has been evolved a spiritual union accompanied by a range of capacity and genius which marks this nation for a preeminent destiny. The American people have commanded the respect of the world.

"It is not so many years since visitors from other quarters of the world were wont to contemplate our concourse of races, origins, and interests, and shake their heads ominously. They feared that from such a melting pot of diverse elements we could never draw the tested, tempered metal that is the only substance for national character. Even among ourselves were many who listened with serious concern to such forebodings. They were not quite sure whether we had created a nation with the soul of a nation. They wondered if perhaps we had merely brought together a large number of people in a large place.

"Had these misgivings been justified when the hour of trial came, it would have meant disaster to us and to the world. But instead of crumbling into a chaos of discordant elements, America proved its truly national unity. It demonstrated conclusively that there is a spiritual quality shared by all races and conditions of men which is their universal heritage and common nature. Powerful enough to hold this people to a high ideal in time of supreme trial, why may we not hope that the same influence will at length reach men and women wherever they are found on earth?"

President Coolidge praised the Scandinavian immigrants for their contribution to American life, but made no direct reference to present-day immigration problems which prompted congress to enact the law designed to limit the flow of aliens from south Europe and encourage immigration from countries in the northern part of the continent.

Recalling that just one hundred years ago a group of 52 persons set out from Norway on the 46-ton sloop Restauration as the first organized party of immigrants from that country, the president said that "Minnesota would not be Minnesota, the group of imperial northwestern states would not be what they are, but for the contribution that has been made to them by the Scandinavian countries."

During the period from 1815 to 1848, Mr. Coolidge asserted, immigration from northern and western Europe not only built the United States "into numbers, wealth and authority in the world, but had a tremendous reflex on Europe."

"But for American example and influence," he added, "the democratic movements of 1832 and 1848 in Europe might have been long postponed. The broadly democratic evolution which swayed Europe so greatly in the latter half of the nineteenth century might have failed entirely."

Immigration from north and west Europe, gave "constant encouragement there to liberal thought and action," he said, "and in this country by gradually giving the north a great preponderance in numbers, hastened the downfall of slavery.

"America with all that it represents of hope in the world," the president told his audience, "is now and will be what you make it. Its institutions of religious liberty, of education and economic opportunity, of constitutional rights, of integrity of the law, are the most precious possessions of the human race.

"These do not emanate from the government. Their abiding place is with the people. They come from the consecration of the father, the love of the mother, and the devotion of the children. They are the product of that honest, earnest and tireless effort that goes into the rearing of the family altar and the making of the home of our country."

ACQUITTED ON CHARGE OF BUYING STOLEN FURS

EVOLUTION DEFENSE BASED ON "DUE PROCESS OF LA[illegible]

New York, June 8—The [illegible] John T. Scopes, Tenne[illegible] school teacher, whose [illegible] charged with violating [illegible] of that state in having taught [illegible], will be based on the "due process of law" clause of the federal constitution, John Randolph Neal, of Knoxville, Tenn., chief counsel for Scopes, announced today after consultation with New York lawyers.

"The great point in this case is the constitutional question," Mr. Neal said, "we believe that the state has exceeded its police power under both the federal and state constitutions. The pronouncement by a state legislature that the teaching of evolution in schools is in conflict with the Bible is not within their province. The question of whether a legislature can regulate the curriculum of a school is absolutely novel."

Mr. Neal declared the defense also would attempt to prove that the recently enacted law clashed with the requirement of the state constitution, that "the legislature must cherish science." He predicted that the theory of evolution would be defined in the argument before the court, but doubted that the truth or falsity of the doctrine would arise.

Defense counsel asserted his belief that if Scopes were convicted and his conviction upheld, the people of Tennessee would force the repeal of the law through a rigid enforcement which would create public feeling against it.

Clarence Darrow of Chicago and Dudley Field Malone of New York, who have offered to assist in the defense, will confer with Scopes and his attorney tomorrow.

The conference today was under the auspices of the American civil liberties union.

MILD TEMPERATURES PREDICTED THIS WEEK

New York, June 8—Several days of exhilaratingly mild temperatures are held out to the population of the Metropolitan area as partial compensation for the week of record heat ended last night.

Driven from their shore and suburban resorts by the sudden slump of the thermometers under a steady ocean breeze, scores of thousands of heat refugees returning to the city today to find it enjoying a perfect "indian summer" day.

The riot of the heat wave did not bring the expected thundershowers. Instead, what seemed an icy blast swept out of the east and drove the mercury down 15 degrees in as many minutes. Today the temperature never rose above 70 degrees.

A shift in winds from the east to a probably south-westerly direction will come tomorrow or Wednesday the weather bureau said, bringing another warm spell but not the scorching kind which drove New Yorkers to cover for six days "average summer weather" will prevail, it was announced.

HELD IN $40 BAIL FOR ROBBERY AND INCENDIARISM

New York, June 8—Under indictment on two charges of roobery in this city, and also charged with attempted murder in a burning house at Bethel, Conn., Abraham Friedman was held in $40,000 bail, when arraigned in supreme court today.

Friedman was admitted to bail in the sum of $15,000, some time ago when arraigned in general sessions on the two robbery charges. This bail was later revoked when authorities received a notice of the charge against Friedman in Connecticut.

Today's arrangement was the result of an effort on the part of Friedman to be readmitted to bail. Justice Levy set bail at $25,000 on the two robbery charges and, in the absence of the necessary papers relative to the Connecticut charges, set bail at $15,000 pending extradition proceedings. Friedman was returned to the Tombs when unable to furnish bail.

SIX BALLOONS REMAIN IN GORDON BENNETT CUP RACE

Brussels, June 8.—(A. P.)—At 11 o'clock this evening, more than 24 hours after the start from Solbosh Plain, six of the eighteen competitors in the Gordon Bennett cup balloon race still were in the air.

The aeronauts aloft included the three men picked as favorites to win the race—Ernest De Muyter, the Belgian champion and holder of the original Gordon Bennett cup; Wade T. Van Orman, United States, and Maurice Bieniame, France.

Of the balloons which have come down none has travelled the distance that generally wins a Gordon Bennett race. The Italian Ciampino has the best figure, 570 kilometers (354.19 miles) and the Italian Aeroister the next best, 540 kilometers.

The other bags which had been reported as landing were the American S-14, the English Elsie, Miramar and Banshee, the French Marco, the Spanish Duro, Hespero and Captain Perenanda, Belgian Ville Bruxelles, and the Swiss Helvetia.

Decision Sustains N. Y. Anarchy Laws

Supreme Court Upholds the Conviction of Publisher Gitlow.

Washington, June 8—The supreme court divided 7 to 2, today in an application of the constitutional guarantees of free speech and the liberty of the press, upholding the conviction of Benjamin Gitlow under the New York criminal anarchy law for publishing in "the revolutionary age" and advocating in speeches a manifesto issued by the left wing of the socialist party.

The majority of the court, in an opinion by Justice Sanford, declared Gitlow's conviction did not invade any of his constitutional rights. The statute was valid, it held, and he could be punished under it for advocating acts of force violence, and unlawfulness in general terms. It was not essential that their immediate execution should have been advocated, the opinion stated, nor was it necessary, before a person could be punished under the act, that the language used should have been "reasonable and ordinarily calculated to incite certain persons" to such acts as addressed to specific persons.

Justices Holmes and Brandeis, in the dissenting opinion, asserted that the measure to be applied in each case was whether "the words used are used in such circumstances and are of such a nature as to create a clear and present danger that they will bring about the substantive evils that (the state) has a right to prevent." Applying what they considered the correct test, they held it was "manifest that there was no present danger of an attempt to overthrow the government by force on the part of the admittedly small minority who shared the defendant's views."

"If the publication of this document had been laid as an attempt to induce an uprising government at once and not at some indefinite time in the future," the dissenting justices declared, "it would have presented a different question. The objects would have been one with which the law might deal, subject to the doubt whether there was any danger that the publication could produce any result, or in other words, whether it was not futile and too remote for possible consequences. But the indictment alleges the publication and nothing more."

WILLIMANTIC

The regular meeting of the Pastors' Union of Willimantic and vicinity, was held, Monday, in the Congregational church, Chaplain. Ladies' Day was observed, a number of the wives of the ministers being in attendance. After the transaction of routine business, Rev. Florence Jones, one of the ministers of Mansfield Center church, under whose arrangement the program was given, gave an introductory address, which was followed by the reading of a poem "Crossen on the Walk" by Mrs. F. C. Williams. Mrs. W. F. Foshay read a paper on "A Cross Section of My Life," having to do with some of her own experiences as the wife of a minister. This was followed by a like statement from Mrs. Williams, on certain of her experiences in that capacity, and a general outline of what the minister himself, and the parish generally, may be led to expect from this "first lady" of the community. The point was taken up by Mrs. Jones and the discussion which followed led to an agreement by everybody present that ministers' wives are pretty good things.

W Malcolm. Eleven children joined the Sunday school cradle roll, and two were baptized, Donald Wells Robinson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Lucius Robinson, of Columbia, and Milton R. A field meet is to follow the parade.

The first step in the doing away with the old Hotel Johnson, so well-known around town and by people connected with Willimantic in past years, also the first step toward the erection of Willimantic's new and modern hotel on the same site, takes place today (Tuesday), with the sale of the furnishings of the Johnson Hotel.

QUESTION OF OWNERSHIP OF SO. COVENTRY PROPERTY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic June 8—A tangle in property ownership is pending solution in the Coventry town court since the opening of the case of The Leatherware company vs. Charles E. Clute, both of South Coventry, a summary process to quite possession of a residence for nonpayment of rent. After arguments in the case held this afternoon had been made by Attorney Morris Blumer, of Hartford for the plaintiffs and Attorney Davies of Norwich, for the defendant, Justice of the Peace A. N. Gilman stated that he would reserve his decision for ten days. It is expected that the case will eventually find its way to superior court. Clute who is in the pastry business in the town, claims that he has the right to remain on the property. In 1920, when N. J. Nichols was owner of the paper mills at Coventry Depot, he entered into a deal with Nichols whereby he secured one year's option on the residence, which was mill property, and what money he paid toward rent was to be applied toward the purchase of the house. From 1920 to 1923 he paid $200 toward the building and then quit payments because the house was affected by two mortgages, amounting to about $7,000 which were held against the mill property. The house was to be sold for $1,800, leaving a balance of $1,600 which he owed and which he claims he is willing to pay off at the rate of $100 a year providing the building is relieved of the mortgage. The original papers in the transaction were made out by the late Attorney P. J. Danahey, of this city, and the fact that he is now deceased adds to the complications in the case. On February 11, 1924, the Leatherware company secured a warranteed deed to the entire mill property, including the disputed residence. Clute was served disposession notices at various times but refused to remove and subsequently he legal action was taken to court.

STRIKERS PLAN TO ERECT NINETY-FIVE-ROOM HOUSES

Willimantic, June 8—At the usual meeting of the strikers, in the Gem Theatre, this morning, the meeting marking the fourteenth week of the strike, Horace Riviere, of Manchester, N. H., addressed the operatives in French, a similar meeting being held at White-Eagle Polish-American hall, with addresses in Polish and in English. The application secured from City Clerk J. Schley Donohue, for permission to erect buildings on the old circus lot on Natchaug street, owned by Napoleon Bacon, had not been received, Monday afternoon, by Fire Marshal and Building Inspector Harry J. Kelley, to whom it was to have been sent by the committee. Although it was stated by President McMahon, that at first tents would be erected, and later, if the strike should continue until winter, his plans called for the speedy erection of from 80 to 90 five-room houses, exactly the type of building the strikers' committee has in mind can not be definitely known until the filing of their application. The buildings are to be occupied by the strikers in case of their eviction from the Thread company tenements. Mr. Riviere told the strikers that he had been told that certain landlords had notified striking operatives occupying their tenements that the rents were to be raised. Several of the strikers, mostly women, are reported to be delivering addresses at labor union meetings in the campaign to raise money for the local strike fund

Any person who shall be aggrieved by the ruling or action of said commission may appeal to said district, but there shall be no appeal from the action of said district.

Sec. 2. Said Pawcatuck Fire District is authorized to designate certain localities in said district as strictly residential; to establish building lines; to regulate the alteration, repairing or rebuilding of any structure within said district; to order the removal of buildings damaged by fire or otherwise which may be considered a menace to public safety; to grant building permits; to grant manufacturing permits to regulate the construction of sidewalks; to control all districts; to levy assessments for the sidewalks and crosswalks built by the construction of sidewalks and to file liens for the collection of the same, which liens shall take precedence over any other liens or incumbrances except tax liens; to control all street traffic in time of fires; to control the erection of poles, posts, awnings, projection of signs, banners and flags; to make by-laws and ordinances and fix penalties to enforce the same and to specify the kind of material which may be used in the construction of buildings within certain boundaries in the business portion of the district.

DANIELSON

A large congregation witnessed at All Hallows' church, Moosup, at 9 o'clock Monday morning the marriage of Miss Marie Beatrice LaFrance, a daughter of County Commissioner and Mrs. Urgele LaFrance of Central Village and Attorney Louis A. Woisard of Danielson.

Rev. J. E. McCarthy, pastor, performed the marriage ceremony and was celebrant of the solemn nuptial high mass. Other officers of the mass were Rev. F. X. Richards, M. S., assistant at St. James' church, Danielson, Rev. Oscar Norman, Moosup, respectively deacon and sub-deacon and Rev. John Roux, M. S., of Bloomfield, formerly pastor at Danielson, Father Roux acting as master of ceremonies. Seated in the sanctuary were Rev. Joseph C. Mathieu, Rev. J. V. Tyler, and Rev. Jean Roux.

Leonard's mass was sung by a special choir from St. James' church, Danielson, with Mrs. Joseph Gareau as organist.

Mendelssohn's wedding march was played as the processional and the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin for the recessional. At the offertory Bassini's Ave Maria was beautifully sung by Mrs. Albert Bernier of Danielson and at the close of the ceremony Agnes Peltier and Miss Mary Moeller, both of Hartford, sang "Because."

The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Marie Stella LaFrance and the groom by his brother, Henry L. Woisard, of Danielson. Clement Prouix, cousin of the bride was ring bearer, and Marguerite LaFrance, sister of the bride, was flower girl.

The bride was charming in a gown of white satin, with veil, court train, and flowers. The bridesmaid wore a gown of poudre blue georgette and fillet lace over rose with hat to match. The bridal party included a flower girl and ring bearer. The marriage was performed within the sanctuary. The ushers were Frank J. Shea of New London, classmate of the groom and Theobald Bedard of Webster, Mass., nephew of the groom.

Following the church service there was a reception at the home of the bride's parents in Central Village. Attorney and Mrs. Woisard left later in the day on their wedding trip to New York and Washington and upon their return will make their home at 12 Palmer street, Danielson, where they have an attractively appointed house awaiting them. There were many beautiful gifts to the bride.

Attorney Woisard, who served overseas during the World war, is a member of the Windham county bar and is engaged in practice in Danielson. Mrs. Woisard has been for some time past with the Quinebaug company in Danielson in her professional capacity of registered nurse.

Rev. John Roux, M. S., formerly pastor of St. James' church, has been here from Bloomfield, Conn., spending a few days.

Cards received here from F. E. Bitgood tell of the interesting trip he experienced in reaching Los Angeles, where he went to attend the Shriners' assembly from all parts of the United States. Mr. Bitgood is expected to return here in about two weeks.

Attorney E. L. Darbie will be in Hartford a day this week, in connection with certain work evolving upon him, as speaker of the house, following the recent adjournment of the legislature.

A drop of as even 40 degrees in a little more than two hours was the record the weather man made in Danielson and vicinity late Sunday afternoon and evening in shutting off the heat after seven blistering days. The drop was from 100 to 60 degrees.

Incident to the holding here of the textile products exhibit it is interesting to note that the Connecticut Mills pioneered in the manufacture of cord fabric for tires and that some of the equipment for the process was developed at the Connecticut mills. This fabric revolutionized the tire manufacture industry.

Next Sunday the new schedule involving changes from the present running time of the south-bound local train will become effective. It is understood that since the change is made the Danielson institution at least will file formal protest with the United States postoffice department.

Growth of garden stuff during the intense heat of the past week was so rapid as to be really amazing though there was no rain at all hereabouts during the greater part of the period.

Chief John McFarland of the local police said Monday that motor traffic on Sunday was far less than on any Sunday since winter went away, and he attributed this to the unusual heat.

For activity, a bee hive will have nothing on the doings at the state armory for the next three days, for those who are engaged in the work being done there are set upon producing an attractive setting for the Textile Products exhibition, which is to open Thursday night and continue through Friday and Saturday under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association. Upwards of 25 manufacturing concerns having plants in eastern Connecticut and nearby territory and machinery and mill supply concerns are participating in the arrangements for the exhibit.

Carpenters were engaged Monday in constructing about 40 booths that have been alloted to the exhibitors and will have these ready for decorating to begin some time today.

Nothing just like this exhibit has been seen in Danielson or its immediate vicinity. It means the bringing forth of their products for public display in the territory where they are made. The exhibit is a matter of pride with the interested concerns. It promises no great financial returns, and, in fact, that part of it is a small consideration.

But the exhibit is certain to impress the thousands of people who are expected to view it with the fact that Eastern Connecticut is home of some of the finest textile products made in America. New looms, such as have been put into service as recently as the past year and showing the new high speed development, will be on display and there will be machinery in operation and many things to interest anyone who has a speck of interest in the textile industry, and who has not, directly or indirectly, for it is the backbone of eastern Connecticut's prosperity?

The illumination of the big drill shed will be brilliant. Arrangements for this are being worked out by the Danielson and Plainfield Gas and Electric company, which will light and power the booths of the exhibitors free of charge.

The new plant of the Eastern Dairies, Inc., at the head of Reynolds street is now taking form. Work on it is to be pushed that it may be ready for occupancy as early as possible this summer.

Such was the demand for electric fans in this town the past week that supplies here were exhausted by a number, necessitating rush orders for a new supply.

A capacity attendance is assured when the grammar schools graduation exercises are held in the town hall Thursday afternoon.

All manufacturing plants that ceased operation in this territory last week because of the heat were operating again Monday, the employes refreshed during the cool weather of late Sunday afternoon and night.

A. G. Senstron returned to his home in Providence on Monday after visiting with friends in Danielson.

The local post of the organization notes that W. R. C. Home day is to be at Cromwell on June 17.

It is anticipated that Charles A. Wheeler, Storrs, lecturer of the State granke will be a guest at the meeting of Brooklyn grange this evening.

Mrs. A. P. Burns will have the members of the Fortnightly club at her home for a meeting today.

Mrs. Lillian Frink of Canterbury will be the speaker when the W. C. T. U. meets with Mrs. John W. Gallup this afternoon.

Members of the Bar from Danielson and other nearby places were at Moosup Monday morning to attend the wedding of Attorney Louis A. Woisard.

An impressive memorial service was held Monday evening in honor of deceased members of the organization by Orient Lodge, K. of P.

PUTNAM

Police are investigating complaints that have been made that a quartet of boys have been using the chapel of the Congregational church for card playing and a sort of meeting place. As far as known no possessions of the church have been taken. The act is regarded as that of young and misguided boys who did not realize the seriousness of what they were doing. There have been no arrests and those in a position to know think that a severe reprimand will serve to stop the practice.

The appointment of a County Commissioner to succeed the late John A. Dady will have to be made by Governor Trumbull. It is greatly regretted here in Putnam that the representatives from Windham county failed to elect Samuel Rich, one of the Putnam representatives. In the caucus held Tuesday the day before the final adjournment of the General Assembly, Mr. Rich received ten of the twenty-one votes but one less that the necessary to have elected him.

The fifth annual convention of the Windham County League of Women Voters was held in the Community House at East Woodstock. The convention was called to order by the chairman, Mrs. William Valentine of Pomfret, after which reports of standing committes were given. Mrs. Herbert Knox Smith, president of the state league, gave a vivid picture of the National League Convention held in Richmond in April. Mrs. F. U. Johnston, vice-chairman of the county, reported the finding of the national committee on the civil status of women. This programme has one object: the removal of legal discriminations against women. It recognizes that this object can be securely accomplished only by the specific correction of state laws. Blanket legislation, either state or federal, is disapproved.

Miss Sally Fanny Gleason of Atlanta, Ga., field secretary for the state, spoke on organization after which the nominating committee brought in the slate and the officers for the coming year were elected as follows: Chairman, Mrs. William Valentine of Pomfret; first vice chairman, Mrs. F. U. Johnston of Woodstock; second vice chairman, Mrs. C. L. Ransom of Pomfret; third vice chairman, Mrs. Janet Sheppard of Woodstock; secretary, Mrs. George Nichols of Thompson; treasurer, Mrs. J. Frederick Ash of Pomfret; 28th senatorial district leader, Miss Alice Ringe of Eastford; 29th senatorial district leader, Mrs. H. L. Mason of Brooklyn.

Luncheon was served by the Woodstock league in co-operation with the five other leagues of the county.

In the afternoon the convention was called to order and Rollin C. Deming, director of the department of Americanization, State Board of Education was introduced. Mr. Deming had time to touch upon only a few points in his big subject. That local school boards should feel a responsibility toward the adult immigrant as well as the children of their districts, as education is not so much for the individual as to establish an intelligent citizenry. That every state should have a literacy test which includes the reading and discussion of any simple paragraph in English. And that the appropriations committee should approve the passage of a bill providing more money for this good work.

The next speaker, Miss Alice W. Hunt, vice president of the Rhode Island League of Women Voters, carried her audience with her to the 1924 conference of the League of Nations at Geneva where a multitude of men and women representing 54 nations of the world are striving for a sympathetic international understanding with the hope of outlawing war.

Those who helped to work up the convention felt well repaid for their efforts.

Miss Prudence Paine, daughter of Dr. R. C. Paine of Thompson has won the tennis Championship of the University of Wisconsin.

Misses Rachel and Annie Cain of Mill street have gone to Montreal to attend the 35th reunion and anniversary of Mt. St. Marie College of which they were formerly students. They will be gone for several weeks and will visit a brother, Rev. Stewart Cain of Sherbrook and another brother, Dr. Newell Cain of Abbotsford before their return.

The gasoline station and store of George U. Miller of Woodstock avenue was broken into and merchandise estimated to be worth about $30 was taken. No arrests have been made.

Tuesday will be graduation day at the Howe-Marot school. Both the preparatory school and the junior college will receive their diplomas. The speakers at the exercises will be James Stevens, author of "Crock of Gold" and Padraic Colum. Richards Platt will play. The exercises will be brought to an end with the senior garden party.

PUTNAM HAS FIRST DROWNING OF SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Putnam, June 8—James Wood, aged about 40, was accidentally drowned Sunday evening in Keeches pond, east of the city and just across the Rhode Island line.

There is a wooded island in the pond which has ben a popular resort during the hot weather because of the fishing and bathing facilities. Wood started to make his way from the mainland to the island. The distance is not great and the water not deep but is over a man's head. Whether Wood thought that he could wade and get beyond his depth before he realized it or whether he thought he could swim and found that he was unable to are matters for speculation. But little attention was paid to him by those on the island until they saw him sink. By the time would be rescuers reached the spot he could not be located. The body was recovered some thirty minutes later and taken to Chepachet, R. I. The coroner made an investigation of accidental drowning.

Wood was a former employe of the City hotel but for the past few months he had worked at odd times for a plumbing house. He has a sister who lives in Webster, Mass., but as far as is known has no relatives here.

JEWETT CITY

Judge John T. Berry's town court came in for special patronage Monday morning, not only from the standpoint of audience, but from those who were sufficiently unfortunate to find their engagements at the bar, imperative.

Two old offenders were sent "up" for 30 days. A man "left his registration in his other clothes," and said his memory jogged with a medium fine. Tomasia Yuretsko was presented for beating his wife. He drew a 60-day jail sentence and a $25 fine. His wife was in court with two small children, and a sample club with which the prisoner was accustomed to beat her up whenever things didn't go to his liking. Following the usual custom of maltreated wives, the woman told the judge that he was her only support and that if was protection she needed. More than that, he should spend the summer on the "Hill." So the court told the man a few things for his best good and suspended the jail sentence for six months.

Henry Pye, of Moosup was presented on the charge of violation of the state traffic laws. Pye was represented by Attorney B. W. Danielson, of Moosup. Saturday afternoon, at the junction of Brown avenue and North Main street, Andrew Bellivance's ice truck and the automobile owned and driven by Mr. Pye, were in collision. The truck lost a wheel and the car got a damaged running board and mudguard. The trial of the case occupied three hours. The defendant claimed he wasn't guilty. His testimony and that of his wife and mother-in-law, passengers in the car was diametrically opposed to the testimony of five witnesses for the state. Pye was found guilty, and given a fine of $5 and costs. Judge Berry took occasion to say that the testimony of Oscar Campbell, a purely disinterested witness, who explained the facts connected with every phase of the mix-up, had weight in forming his decision, as he believed it to be true.

Adelor LaPorte, gardener and caretaker for E. D. Ballou, of Sylvandale, takes the season's blue ribbon for early June peas. He picked a fine "mess" Monday, June 8.

Miss Delphine Beauregard made a business trip to Providence Monday.

John F. Sullivan is a patient in the Rhode Island hospital in Providence, where he underwent an operation last week.

In this section, all records for speedy weather changes were smashed Sunday afternoon, when the mercury took a tumble of 30 degrees in 120 minutes. That means a drop of a degree every 4 minutes for 2 consecutive hours. At 4:30 p. m., the mercury had climbed to 96; at 6:30 the degree lines showed that 66 was the figure. The sweltering heat of sleeping rooms rapidly cooled off. People took a new lease of life and gave thanks from whence all blessings flow and now they are telling "How hot I was"—

Saturday evening, Miss Bertha Montgomery, who is soon to become the bride of Frank Wilcox, of Jewett City, was given a miscellaneous shower, in honor of her approaching nuptials, at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Montgomery, of Pachaug. The pleasing success the affair proved to be was assured beforehand by having as its sponsor, Miss Mildred Montgomery, an elder sister. Lemonade and fruit punch helped to render the excessive heat less oppressive, while a radiant moon and pleasant lawn did the rest. The many gifts included linen, aluminum, cut glass, china and lustre ware. A fine company of friends of the bride-to-be composed the guests.

Frank J. Ray, superintendent of the Jewett City cemetery, is justly proud of the well kept ground of which he is in charge. His duties are made harder by the continued thefts of flags and flowers. Saturday, an out-of-town delivery truck, entered Anthony street by mistake. In attempting to turn at the end of the street, he backed into the South Cemetery driveway and in clearing, his heavy truck came in contact with one of the big iron gates, a gift from David Hale Fanning. Deputy Sheriff J. T. Dolan located the driver in Voluntown. He returned to Jewett City and, after being convinced that he had damaged the gates, he made a satisfactory settlement with Superintendent Ray. Superintendent Ray makes "perpetual care" mean something at the cemetery and he is anxious that visitors shall commit no infraction of common law either in the day time or night season. He says that a cemetery is not maintained for nocturnal spooners.

STAFFORD SPRINGS

Herbert E. Whitehouse and father, Robert Whitehouse, both of Windsorville, were before the Borough Court Monday morning upon complaint of residents of Willington, who notified the local state police barracks that there was a fight on the road in Willington, and that an officer was requested at once. State Policeman Hulbert went to the scene of hostilities and found that the two Whitehouse men had been engaged in a fight and that the younger Whitehouse had torn the shirt off of his father and that both were intoxicated. Herbert had been operating an automobile while under the influence of liquor. The two men were brought to the Stafford Springs detention house where they spent the night. When presented in court, Monday morning, Herbert pleaded guilty to operating a motor vehicle while under the influence of liquor, and was fined $100. He also pleaded guilty to assault on his father which drew a fine of $10. Drunkenness cost him another $10 and for breach of the peace a fine of $5 was imposed, a total of $125, which with the costs set him back $141.36. The father pleaded guilty to the charge of drunkenness and paid a fine of $10 and costs amounting in all to $24.26.

The warm weather Sunday drew the largest crowd of the season at Crystal Lake. It is estimated that there were about 4,000 people there during the day.

Work has commenced on the foundation for the garage to be erected by Frank J. Fitzpatrick south of the Warren Memorial building.

Cubans Add to Population.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Academy Orchestra

Miss Garber of Hartford is booked for two dances during the program to be presented by the Academy orchestra at Slater Hall tomorrow evening: a toe dance, which is the real thing, and a fan dance. The fan is very large, very beautiful and expensive, and the dance is said to be lovely.

Miss O'Donnell, also of Hartford, will present an oriental dance which she is reported to do with exceptional merit.

From the orchestra itself, Miss Ruth Drechsler and Henry Bryan have been chosen for solo numbers, and this group of five solo numbers is certain to prove worth more than the price of admission.

Then there is the orchestra itself in every way quite up standard. However, the members are not much on talk, preferring to be talked about. Therefore, this invitation to the public to come to Slater Hall and hear them.

Tickets for admission are 50c each and may be secured from members of the orchestra or at Cranston's store.

Nine states now require that the Bible be read at stated times in the public schools.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Round Trip Excursion to New York Sunday

Due to the popularity of the excursions being operated by the New Haven railroad from various points to New York and to the public demand for a similar excursion from this city, it was announced by officials of the road that an excursion would be operated from this city to New York and return on next Sunday, June 14th, at the exceedingly low rate of $3.00 for the round trip.

The schedule of the special train has been arranged to allow the excursionists practically a full day in New York to visit Coney Island, take sight seeing trips in and about the city or go to the baseball game in the afternoon between the New York Yankees and the Detroit Tigers.

The special train will be operated on an express schedule leaving Norwich at 6:30 a. m., and New London at 7:00 a. m., and arriving in New York (Grand Central Terminal) at 10:05 a. m. Returning the excursion special will leave New York (Grand Central Terminal) at 6:20 p. m., and be due in New London at 9:15 p. m., and Norwich at 9:50 p. m. All times given are Eastern Standard Time.

As the tickets are limited to the seating capacity of the special train it is suggested that those planning to make this excursion purchase their tickets well in advance of the excursion date.

Broadway Theatre

Picture-goers with a penchant for real old-fashioned melodrama will find Code of the West a very satisfying screen dish. This picturization of Zane Grey's great novel of the same name, which was produced for Paramount by William K. Howard for the film adaptation by Lucien Hubbard, opened a three days' run last night at the Broadway theater.

Melodrama runs rampant throughout this photoplay which finally winds up with one of the most melodramatic climaxes, in the shape of a rearing forest fire, that has ever been flashed upon the screen.

The story itself departs from the regulation plot formula and introduces several new dramatic situations and comic touches. The action revolves around a lovely little flapper from New York who is compelled to go to Arizona for her health. She chooses the Thurman ranch as her temporary abode because her sister, the neighborhood school teacher, is boarding there.

All of the ranch hands fall in love with her, but she singles out for her attentions Cal Thurman, the sky, awkward younger son of the family. Eventually he summons up enough courage to propose to her and receives the shock of his life when she coldly turns him down. And to add insult to injury, she deliberately flirts with Bid Hatfield, manager of a neighboring ranch and Cal's deadly enemy.

Maddened with jealousy and anger, the young cowboy determines upon a bold course of action. He kidnaps her, forces her to marry him and then carries her off to a cabin he has recently built. There is no telling what might have happened, had not a forest fire unexpectedly broken out and forced them to forget their hatred and attempt to save themselves from the flames.

The fire is the spectacular highspot in the film and is pictured in all its terrifying realism. So deftly has Director Howard handled this climax that the suspense is maintained right up to the last few feet of film.

Owen Moore gives a great performance as the cowboy who turns cave man, and Constance Bennett scores a distinct personal triumph as the flirtatious flapper. Mabel Ballin, Charles Ogle and David Butler are the other three players who have leading roles in the picture.

Walter Heirs in a fast comedy entitled Good Spirits and a new Kinograms completed a very attractive program will be here for Thursday, Friday program. The usual vaudeville and picture will be here for Thursday, Friday

Palace Theatre

"The Cat and Canary," was produced at the Palace theatre by the Augustin Stock company last night before a well filled house, and the weird story being accompanied by the usual shrieks of laughter and thrills on the part of the audience. Less than a year ago "The Cat and Canary," was playing in Boston and New York, and has lost none of its exciting flavor in the transition and a highly commendable performance was greeted by the enthusiastic audience. Twenty years before the play opens an eccentric old gentleman left a will which was sealed and read to interested relatives in the first act. Peculiar conditions, of course, are found in the document and as the old mansion is supposed to be haunted, the half dozen relatives and the executive immediately begin to become suspicious that all isn't as it should be in the house. The heroine who is the sole heir, always seems to be in danger. The comedy relief is in the handy of William Augustin, who as blundering Paul Jones, was very amusing as the backward suitor who finally wins Annabelle West. Ruth Floyd was happily cast as Annabelle West, and her performance was delightful. In fact, it is the sort of a part that Miss Floyd does best, that of a flapper heroine, who is harrassed by various and sundry horrors. Claire Maslin, Nellie Gray, Alice Bowditch, Arthur Behrins, Bernard Pate, Frank Sadler, Joe Angell and George Godvin all shared honors of the evening playing their roles in every detail and made a hit with the house. "The Cat and Canary," will be played all week and you are advised to see it as it is the greatest play that has ever been presented in this town at popular prices.

TONIGHT'S CITY MEETING

The voters elected the city officials. That was done at the city election.

They are then called upon to indicate to such officials how they expect the affairs of the city to be conducted, where the money should be spent, how much should be spent and what part of the required total must be raised by taxation. That is done at the annual city meeting.

That adjourned annual city meeting is to be held this evening for the purpose of taking action on appropriations amounting to more than $1,666,000 to meet the estimated expenses of the various departments for the ensuing year. This represents an increase of more than $50,000 over the appropriations that were made at the last annual city meeting when the total was just over $1,615,000.

In addition to this increase over last year's appropriations, which increase was recommended by the last court of common council, there is a list of extras presented on which the voters must pass judgment. The list reaches the total of $103,300 and while presented by the council for action does not bear its recommendation.

The new council looks to the citizens for instructions. It rests with those who must pass the bills to say whether the appropriations which have been asked shall be made, and in addition whether they want to go down in their pockets and provide the equivalent of a 6 1-2 mill tax for the additional projects included in the list of extras. Some of these extras involve improvements and some involve expenditures which will become permanent if approved.

It rests with the citizens to say whether they are paying a large enough tax, whether they believe they ought to pay more, or whether the time has come for calling a halt and bringing about a decrease in the annual taxes instead of an increase each year.

If the department appropriations as asked for are voted it will mean a tax of 20 3-4 mills. If the extras are voted it will bring the total tax up to about 27 mills, and when the time comes for the bonding of the city for $1,500,000 for increasing the water supply in accord with the authority obtained from the general assembly there will be another large sum to be raised in taxes for the purpose of paying the interest and principal on such bonds.

The time for Norwich to give expression to its wishes in regard to the increasing of appropriations and the consequent increasing of taxes is at tonight's city meeting. It should have a large attendance.

If Norwich wants better results through the introduction of greater efficiency and more economy, this is the time and place to let it be known.

THE DROWNING ACCIDENTS

It isn't the hot weather itself that causes the usual increase in drownings at this season of the year, but the fact that the number attracted to the water by the hot weather is larger and as that number in or on the water increases the number subjected to the danger of not being able to take care of one's self in the water is greater, and in the haste to get relief precautions are disregarded and almost before it is realized someone goes beyond his depth and is drowned.

This week the many drownings have eclipsed the customary first of the week stories of automobile fatalities. In several instances individuals who could not swim were enjoying themselves in shallow water only to continue to walk out into the unknown, step off a hidden ledge and lose their lives.

The number of drownings was also swelled by those who went out in canoes, tipped over and failed to get ashore.

These are only repetitions of what has occurred every summer. The spirit of bravado, the doing of stunts and the failure to realize their helplessness on the part of those who cannot take care of themselves in the water all served to furnish victims for the coroner's list.

Learning to swim is one of the excellent methods of reducing the many drownings. Keeping out of canoes unless you can swim is also a bit of golden advice which too many fail to appreciate. But there is a great number of persons who fail to take warning themselves from what has happened to others and proceed to do the same careless stunts and somehow seem to think that they are going to be protected by some [illegible] power.

Protection on land or water lies to a great degree in observing the plain rules of safety and keeping a safe distance away from what is known to be dangerous. Those who tempt danger are bound sooner or later to pay the price and be numbered among those thousands who throw their lives away each year.

PROTESTING COAST GUARD

As the result of protests which have been made by yacht owners because the coast guard has been interfering with their personal liberty, the Springfield Republican points out that the coast guard is doing no more on the water than a policeman does on land, and that "no one need get hurt on the water, any more than on the land, if he will promptly obey the orders of the constituted authorities and not try to show his heels."

It is not conceivable that there are any yacht owners who do not know that the coast guard is conducting a campaign for the suppression of rum running along the coast between Boston and New York. Likewise the yacht owners should realize that the coast guard in the pursuit of duty must act in accord with the way his suspicions are aroused. If there are yacht owners, who are not in the rum running business, but who persist in sending their craft through the waters which have been infested with rum running vessels become suspicious of their presence and in trying to establish whether they are rum runners or not call upon them to stop. If such calls go unheeded there's nothing very unusual about the fact that a coast guard becomes more suspicious. Nothing indicates guilt much more than a person running away, whether he is on foot, in an auto or aboard a boat, and the refusal to stop a boat makes it necessary for the coast guard to force the issue.

Under such conditions there is no one to blame but the fellow who refuses to stop. No one thinks of running away from a traffic cop after being told to stop unless he is guilty and expects to make his get away. It is the same situation that prevails in connection with the effort to stop the rum runners. Those who are not smuggling liquor have nothing to fear, and only those who refuse to heed a call to stop or turn about need fear a shot across the bow.

THE POSTAL REVENUE

Before the present postal rates were adopted it had been predicted that they would fail to meet the object for which they were created. It was held that they were not based upon a thorough understanding of the situation and that there should have been a careful study made of the postal situation before undertaking such an adjustment.

The rates were increased for the purpose of providing the additional $62,000,000 which was required to meet the advance in postal employes' pay, and even though there was some modification of the rates first suggested the study that is being made of them indicates that they are not going to accomplish what was desired.

From the study made of the revenue of 50 selected offices, handling more than half the postal business, it has been determined that the new rates are producing a loss of $12,000,000 a year instead of increasing the revenue, or in other words had the old rates remained the department would have received a larger revenue since the middle of April than it has.

It has been understood that the present rates were not necessarily final, that they would be subjected to careful study for several months to determine the effects, but with the department losing instead of gaining it would appear that the study of the possibility of the rate changes might better have been made without actually putting any change into effect instead of boosting the rates and producing a smaller revenue. Changes which were apparently not contemplated are taking place in response to the manner in which rates have been jacked up.

WIRELESS FOR MACMILLAN

In preparation for their flight in the arctic for the survey of that great expanse of unknown territory which MacMillan hopes to locate, or that region at least of which little is at present known, it is noted with much interest that the three amphibian planes are to be equipped with wireless. Tests of this apparatus are now being made in order that it may be in good working condition before the start north is made.

This must be regarded as a most wise provision. No one knows what has happened to Amundsen, or where he is. It is entirely possible that he encountered such trouble that it would have been impossible for him to have told about it by wireless, and yet he failed to take with him the means of communicating with the outside world.

In view of present day conditions it cannot be regarded other than a mistake that he should have gone on his quest for the pole through the air without such equipment.

MacMillan is not going to fly the entire distance between this country and his headquarters in the north but when the planes go out from the station in the north there is bound to be a greater sense of security on the part of those flying and those remaining at the station because of the wireless equipment. It may not prevent an accident but it will provide the means of giving information and guiding possible rescuers.

EDITORIAL NOTES

Bear in mind tonight's city meeting. It should be well attended.

The man on the corner says: Cheer up, cherries will soon be ripe.

How long will it be before Henry Ford is delivering the tin lizzies by airplane?

Well, it is no longer possible to say there's no recollection of what summer seems like.

No one seems to be grieving over the fact that the 1925 legislature is no longer in session.

With this at the beginning what are we to expect when he get knee deep in June?

No doubt many who are at a loss to know what to do with their money will find the American Legion fund an excellent outlet.

The place to voice your sentiment for or against high taxes is at the city meeting. It is a time for giving instructions to the public servants.

Not much relief is furnished the anxious to be told they should not worry about Amundsen and his party because they may be heard from a year hence.

Danger of an anthracite strike is considered slight because of the belief of the miners that the trade will not bear further demands owing to oil competition. That's about the first consideration the consumer has received.

WASHINGTON AFFAIRS

Washington, June 8.—The democratic party is much perturbed as a result of President Coolidge's Memorial day speech dealing in masterly fashion with local self-government and states' rights. Some of the leaders profess to see an attempt on his part to steal democratic thunder and arrogate to himself that which is a time-honored tenet of the disciples of Jefferson. Time-honored, yes, but in later days more in the breach than in the observance. It was a common expression so late as 1920 that the democratic administration had in eight years reduced the states to mere provinces, and it is one of the political paradoxes of our history that the party which produced the Great Nullifier and sought to change the Union into a Confederation, in 1913-21 carried centralization to the point of a dictatorship surrounded by a court of what Champ Clark called "limber-backed incense-swingers."

Today the pendulum is beginning its movement along the backward arc, but the mainspring is not democratic. Wadsworth, Borah and other republicans have long inveighed against the centripetal movement in government. Their words, to be sure, have been echoed by a number of the sane democrats, notably Underwood, Bruce, and Governor Ritchie, but the democratic party as a whole has sought to trade pelf for power and as President Coolidge aptly stated:

"If we permit someone to come to support us, we can not prevent some one coming to govern us."

Prior to the Civil war Calhoun went too far in one direction. The 1913-21 administration went too far in the opposite direction. To the programme of the latter the McAdoovians would add nationalistion of industry and, perhaps, religious discrimination.

There is and always has been a happy medium, and we shall no doubt discover it again under the wise guidance of the present chief magistrate. That in itself will be one of President Coolidge's great contributions to the welfare of the American commonwealth.

As president of the senate, the vice president of the United States adjourns that body at the suitable moment, "sine die." One of the neatest witticisms of Thomas Riley Marshall came at the end of the 1918-19 session of congress. It had been a bitter session devoted almost wholly to the attempt to put the United States into the league of nations. Feeling ran high and debate was acrimonious. The hour for adjournment arrived and the vice president with a stroke of his gavel declared: "The senate is adjourned sine Deo."

There appears to be no end to the optimism of certain professional democrats. Just at present a merry little war is being waged for what is left of the party organization. The McAdoodles have taken the lead. Recently they paid a gentleman indicted for bootlegging $500 for a weekly paper called the National Democrat. They seriously hope—at least some of them do—to make an impression upon the country through this organ.

They invite Thomas Fortune Ryan, the arch-angel of the party, to chip in, but he politely declined to do so. Mr. Ryan contributed approximately $250,000 in a futile attempt to nominate Senator Oscar Underwood at the Madison Square Garden circus last summer, and we suspect that his purse strings have been tightened up for an indefinite period.

Meanwhile a group of financiers are grooming for the 1928 nomination Mr. Owen D. Young, chairman of the board of the General Electric company and co-author of the Dawes plan. Mr. Young is an astute lawyer and business man with few peers but he has a sense of humor and it is scarcely possible that he is taking the grooming very seriously. It is altogether possible that Mr. Young may be drafted as a candidate for the senate next year in place of Governor Al Smith who has been heralded far and wide as the candidate to oppose Senator Wadsworth.

There is another "Owen" who may figure in national politics before many months roll around. We refer to Owen Roberts, the distinguished Philadelphia lawyer whom President Coolidge picked to prosecute the oil cases. Mr. Roberts today is one of the most talked of men in Washington as a result of the decision of Judge McCormick of California who cancelled the Doheny oil leases. It is an open secret here that Mr. Roberts has had to fight almost single handed the greatest aggregation of legal talent assembled in this country during a generation.

In addition to the attorneys of record the Doheny and Sinclair interests retained scores of high priced counsellors who have never appeared publicly. The attorneys were flanked by a group of extremely expensive press agents who have used every trick known to their craft in an attempt to help Doheny to keep properties which he has publicly valued at $100,000,000.

In the event of the Vare-Pinchot-Pepper fight in Pennsylvania results in a nasty tangle there is no doubt Mr. Roberts will be seriously considered as the republican candidate for the United States senate.

Governor Ritchie of Maryland has declined to instruct the state troops to take part in Defense day. He makes the excuse that most of the citizens of Maryland as well as the members of the National Guard have already made their picnic arrangements for the Fourth of July. That's exactly the attitude the democratic administration at Washington took in the months preceding the great war. It was the attitude that prompted George Creel, the administration's press agent to "thank God we entered the war unprepared."

Incidentally Governor Ritchie still thinks he has hopes of being the candidate of his party in 1928. There is no doubt that he would make an ideal candidate of the "picnic party."

Great gloom hangs over the army and navy as a result of President Coolidge's announcement that $35,000,000 or thereabouts must be pared from the expenses of these establishments when their estimates are presented to the director of the budget. The generals and admirals are unnecessarily alarmed. The amount may be saved without discharging a single rookie; simply cut out the waste which follows red tape and antiquated methods.

Unless all signs fail the Coolidge economy axe is about to fall on the shipping board. The president is determined that the annual $50,000,000 leakage through this top heavy inefficient organization must cease. Almost $3,500,000,000 of tax payers' money has been spent by the board since it was fosted on the public as a war measure by the democratic administration. It must cease.

Every conceivable method has been used in an attempt to "sell it" to the public. It is manifest that the people will not "buy it" at the price demanded. They might as well buy the cantonments or some of the other junk which became a national liability on the day following the armistice. Congress apparently has never been able to bring itself to the point of scrapping vessels which cost hundreds of millions to build despite the fact that they are costing more millions to guard while rusting away in the Hudson and the York rivers, without the slightest possibility of ever returning the tax payers a dollar.

The president is now determined that this tragedy shall be terminated and he may be relied upon to make the best possible arrangements for salvaging what is of value and of junking the remainder.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Replies to J. M.

Mr. Editor: In your issue of June the 4th there appeared a letter signed by one, J. M., of Moosup, who claims himself an ex-service man and a son of a Civild war veteran. He would like to know if something cannot be done by the American Legion or some of the other organizations so that something like a military semblance might be shown on Memorial day.

It would be in order for J. M. as an ex-service man, unless his service was as a welfare worker in the service, in which case he would be ignorant of such a thing as military formalities, to join the ranks of the Legion or some of the other ex-service organizations.

As J. M. finds so much to criticise I am certain that any or all of the officers of the American Legion would willingly relinquish their position so as to make him an instructor for the post, but it is my firm belief that he knows no more of that stuff than those who are in sympathy with him.

Perhaps he is of the same opinion as the man who would not sign up in the Legion, because he claimed it was being run by men who belong to a certain fraternal order, who are not true Americans. But if so happens J. M. that to be a member of the American Legion you must show your Americanism not only by words but with action as well.

Signed.
ALBERT C. DE-FORGE,
Commander Ernest Godreau Post No. 91.

THE MAN WHO KNEW

"If you insist you are right, always the first crack out of the box, with firmness and a straight glance, you are certain to convince people that you are," young Harley Wintergate read somewhere and was converted.

It worked well. When in geology class somebody wondered casually how much that meteor weighed which had just fallen in the next county, Harley spoke up after an instant in which he realized the professor himself did not know. "Weighed 1,080 pounds," he found himself stating clearly, calmly. Nobody questioned his source of information and Prof. Cutter engaged him in casual conversation after class, as man to man.

Gradually everybody turned to Harley when they wanted information because he always knew.

"Why can't you study the way Harley Wintergate does?" exasperated parents demanded of their equally exasperated offspring who insisted that Harley spent no more time on books than themselves. "He's just naturally smart," they explained.

The idea was generally accepted. "Smart young chap, that Wintergate," the older men would say when Harley would settle some argued question with just the right touch of modesty mixed with his assurance.

With care Harley went through college in much the same fashion. The young chaps his own age were not so much impressed, however. Some of them said openly that Wintergate was a damned bore. He always knew everything before anyone else did and he always was correct. He insisted passionately on that point if the question rose, as it occasionally did. His habit of meeting defeat with a pleasantly condescending smile sometimes failed to work and he retired flushed, routed, fiercely angry.

Clarice did not especially want to marry Harley when he began going with her, but that fact made no difference whatever to him. He was as much in love with her as a self-centered individual could be, so he simply assumed that she would become engaged to him, looking her straight in the eye as he did so, and Clarice, who was a pretty little thing with no fighting ancestors to give her backbone, drifted into acquiescence.

Harley was a good-looking young man who would never be ignored in a crowd but she felt a flaw somewhere. It dawned on her what it was, after a few years of being married to Harley. Not only could he tell her what was wrong with the coffee, the way she did her hair and the manner in which she entertained the card club, but he could instantly state why her father was not a success and why the baby should not be allowed to do thus and so. In other words, Harley Wintergate was a prize domestic pest.

The odd thing was that as the years accumulated Harley slid down instead of up. The corporation for which he worked and whose president's chair he had sternly expected to occupy was too big a juggernaut to pause in its pathway respectfully at Harley's bleatings. As he grew older he developed a red-faced, bombastic method of asserting himself, snorting slightly and looking around fiercely for objectors. He fiercely became more right than ever, even when his stationary salary was cut down and they moved into a smaller apartment.

He became ill suddenly one day and had to come home and go to bed. Clarice wanted to send for the doctor but Harley forbade her. "Just a hard cold," he said. When he was red with fever she tremblingly telephoned the medical man and when the latter came he regarded Clarice accusingly. "This man has double pneumonia," he said. "Why wasn't I sent for earlier?"

"Nothing of the sort!" Harley snapped and gasped. "I have merely a hard cold as I said before! Utter nonsense!"

Harley died of his hard cold in two days and very few persons attended the funeral. A man with straggling gray hair and a weak and petulant mouth who did not count much in the world's affairs was carried out of the little flat for the last time and Clarice wept dumbly. She wept for many, many reasons, the sort that lie obscure in women's hearts through all the years.—Exchange.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Henry Phipps, who is to expend $3,500,000 for the erection of a 15-story hotel for working women in New York City, is one of the last survivors of the older group of millionaires who made their fortunes in association with the late Andrew Carnegie. Like Carnegie, Mr. Phipps started as an office boy in a Pittsburgh shop. It is said of him that he borrowed the quarter with which he advertised for the job. At 22 he was part owner of a small iron mill. Later he became interested in the iron and steel industry with the Carnegies and gradually increased in wealth until he became one of the dominant factors in the industry. For many years he has been practically retired from business and has given much of his attention to practical philanthropy. He has built model tenements for the poor in New York, donated large sums to Johns Hopkins and other universities for scientific research, and given generously to numerous movements looking to the public welfare.

Stories That Recall Others

They Were Both Interested.

A clubwoman who was working for the passage of the child labor amendment tells this story:

"I was at the legislature working in the interest of the child labor amendment. A woman next to me asked me whether I was interested in it.

"'I certainly am,' I replied.

"'Well, so am I,' said the woman. 'I have a son and I don't want him sitting around until he is 18,' and then drawing closer, 'Do you know,' she said, 'nobody on earth wants the amendment passed except a lot of fool clubwomen who haven't anything to do but attend to things they don't know anything about.'"

A Slip of the Tongue.

They had decided to go out of town to get married. The bride must have a wedding gown so the next morning found her in an apparel shop. The proprietor exclaimed, after a gown had been finally decided upon: 'Why, you must be going to get married!"

"Oh, no," timidly denied the maiden.

"Well," heartily counseled the matronly shop owner, "Let me give you a little advice, "When you do, don't try to live with either of your parents. Live to yourselves."

"Oh, we don't intend to live with them until we can do better," eagerly confided the girl. She stopped, confused at the manner in which her tongue had betrayed her. "But we don't intend to get married," she hastily amended.

From Small Beginnings

Naphtali Imber—The Wandering Jew

Sing us one of the songs of Zion. How shall we sing Jehovah's song in a foreign land? If I forget thee, O Jerusalem, let my right hand forget her skill! Let my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth, if I remember thee not; if I prefer not Jerusalem above my chief joy." In those words the ancient writer of the Psalms, far from his home in Jerusalem, wrote of his longing for the restoration of Zion. In somewhat similar words a modern Jew, Naphtali Imber, in the United States—farther away from Jerusalem than any of those ancient Jews who were carried away to Babylon—expressed his thoughts in what has become the solemn song of the Zionists in all parts of the world. The modern hymn, sometimes called The Hope of Zion, is curiously like the ancient song that the Psalms record. It is equally fervent in its hope for the restoration to Jerusalem, for the bringing together of Jews from all over the earth, into one common homeland in Palestine. Thus the extreme past and the very present touch hands across the centuries. Naphtali Imber was a lover of the Psalms, and wrote a book called The Music of the Psalms. He may well have modeled the Zionist hymn on the 137 Psalm.

Naphtali Imber was born in 1854 in Galicia, on the edge of Eastern Europe. His people had no money; he wore rags; he lived in a hut: he was denied many privileges, but he did have an intense thirst for knowledge. Like a modern "Wandering Jew" he set off from home, and for years went from land to land. He visited Jerusalem and wept by its ancient wall of the temple; he wandered in Egypt and in Turkey; lived for a time in England; then came to the United States—only to move restlessly from place to place. In his wanderings he picked up a vast amount of information, became an expert in languages, and mastered the ancient Hebrew so that he became one of the leading scholars in Hebrew, and wrote books on the Scriptures.

In the United States he found an unusual opportunity in the papers printed in Yiddish, and became a most important contributor. Because the Zionist movement filled him with the deepest enthusiasm, he wrote much on that subject. He produced several volumes of fervent poetry, in much of which he extolled the Zionist cause. Among other songs, he wrote that one that so resembles the old song in the Psalms. Here, then, was a man born to extreme poverty, who made himself a scholar, and a voice for his people.

After some 17 years in the United States Naphtali Imber died in 1909, at the age of 55.

A reasonable figure for the sparking voltage under average conditions in an aircraft engine at full power at sea level is 6,000 volts; under extreme conditions it may rise to 10,000 or fall to 3,000.

Jumper Doesn't Seem Impressed

A thing to you important may
To me be quite the other way.
—Jumper the Hare.

It didn't take Peter Rabbit long to find out that little Mrs. Rabbit had no thought or time for anybody but the six helpless little babies which made up the newest Peter Rabbit family. In fact, Peter wasn't wanted around. At least that is the way it struck him. So at the very first chance back he went to the Green Forest. He wanted to find his cousin Jumper the Hare. He wanted to tell Jumper about this new family of his, for like all fathers, Peter was a little proud down in his heart.

So he scampered lippety-lippety-lip through the Green Forest until at last he found his big cousin Jumper

"Huh Mrs. Jumper told me the same thing about our babies," replied Jumper the Hare. "Hello, cousin Jumper," cried Peter. "While I was over here last time a wonderful thing happened over at my home in the dear old Briar Patch.

Jumper pricked up his long ears a little and looked mildly interested. "I want to know," said he.

"Yes," replied Peter. "There were six birthdays at my home all on the same day while I was away."

"Well, that isn't a particularly new experience with you, is it Peter?" replied Jumper.

"No-o," replied Peter slowly. "But there are the handsomest babies that ever were born."

"Do you honestly think so, Peter?" replied Jumper.

"Well, Mrs. Peter says they are, and really she ought to know," replied Peter.

"Huh, Mrs. Jumper told me the same thing about our babies," replied Jumper. "And the other day I overheard Mrs. Grouse telling Mr. Grouse the same thing about their babies. I even overheard old Mrs. Possum telling Uncle Billy Possum that never since the world began had there been such beautiful children as their latest family. Now what have you got to say about it?"

Peter had to grin. He simply couldn't help it. "I guess all mother's are alike," said Peter. "I never yet saw a mother who would admit that her baby wasn't the most wonderful baby in all the Great World. But really cousin Jumper, these babies of mine are quite wonderful. I wish you could see them. I really do. I think you would say that, as babies go, these are very unusual. Did I understand you to say that you have a family?"

"Yes," replied Jumper. "Anyway, Mrs. Jumper has a family, and I suppose that amounts to the same thing. I dont see much of them, but I suppose I will later."

"And I suppose Mrs. Jumper thinks her babies the most beautiful babies in all the Great World," said Peter slyly.

"I suppose so," replied Jumper. "If she doesn't there's something wrong with her. When did you say your babies were born?"

"When I was over here in the Green Forest two days ago."

"Oh," said Jumper, "that is the day my four babies were born. It seems we have the same birthdays in both families. They are surprisingly lively little scamps for their age. I don't suppose you would care to see them, Cousin Peter?"

"Indeed I would," replied Peter. "I would like to see how they compare with mine."

"Oh, of course, they don't really compare with yours, because yours are the most beautiful in all the Great World," replied Jumper. "But if you want to see them come along with me."

POETRY

Pipes.

He would not buy a valuable pipe
Do injury to a man,
Nor snatch from life one treasured joy
More than humor truly can;
And yet while passing thru the woods
One lovely summer day,
He lit his pipe and carelessly
He threw the match away.

He knew the havoc fire can cause,
He knew this friendly foe,
He'd seen at home uncounted times
Its weight of woe and woe;
Yet he, who would not by a word
Or deed his neighbor wrong,
Flung to the woods a lighted match
And calmly moved along.

There followed that one careless deed
A forest's dismal fall;
Brave homes which sheltered pioneers
And held their little all
Were swallowed by the hungry flames
Which only rain could stay—
The ruin from one tiny match
A man had tossed away.

One may recall the thoughtless word
And right the careless deed,
But fire no pity shows to men
When once its power is freed;
And many a forest lies today
In desolation gray
Because one careless hand had tossed
A lighted match away.
—Edgar A. Guest, Chicago Evening Post

On the Grasshopper and Cricket.

The poetry of earth is never dead:
When all the birds are faint with the hot sun,
And hide in cooling trees, a voice will run
From hedge to hedge about the new-mown mead;
That is the grasshopper's—he takes the lead
In summer luxury—he has never done
With his delights, for when tired out with fun,
He rests at ease beneath some pleasant weed.
The poetry of earth is ceasing never:
On a lone winter evening, when the frost
Has wrought a silence, from the stove there shrills
The cricket's song, in warmth increasing ever,
And seems to one in drowsiness half-lost,
The grasshoppers among the grassy hills.
—John Keats.

CONN. LEGISLATURE PASSES MANY FORESTRY MEASURES

The 1925 legislature has given more attention to matters concerning state forests and state parks, and to general forestry, than any in the history of the state, although its accomplishments fall far short of the program laid down as necessary by the experts and advocated by both the state departments and the Connecticut forestry association. The total appropriations made for forest and park purposes amount to $455,000 against $240,000 at the 1923 session. The total appropriation requested by the various forest and park agencies was over $1,000,000.

The most significant legislation is that creating the new commission of forestry and wild life, which consists of the united membership of the park and forest commission and the board of fisheries and game. This commission will act as a land-purchasing board. Most of the lands acquired will be added to the state forests and administered by the state forester, for the production of timber, but the game upon them will be managed by the board of fisheries and game. Part of these lands will be open to public shooting; the rest will be reserved for game-breeding grounds from which the game can migrate to those areas open to shooting. Certain marsh areas will probably be acquired, and administered directly by the board of fisheries and game, exclusively for waterfowl shooting.

The sum of $150,000 was alloted for these land purchases. It is estimated that this will add some 25,000 acres to the state-owned forests and game reserves which now contain only about 12,000 acres. It is expected that land will be acquired extending the boundaries of the existing state forests, which lie mostly in the north and central part of the state and that new units will be established elsewhere. Such a system of state forests will help to meet the future timber shortage, conserve water supply, and supply hunting for citizens of the state. If this appropriation is continued by future assemblies, the state can build up, within the next twenty years, the 200 000 acres of state forests which experts consider necessary for its future prosperity.

Another significant piece of legislation is that of appropriating $50,000 for leasing by the state board of fisheries and game, of fishing rights on streams, thus preventing them from being closed to public fishing.

The legislature also authorized the establishment of a state forest nursery for the growing of young forest trees for planting on the state forests, and appropriated $5,000 to start the work.

They also strengthened the forest fire laws by requiring a permit from the fire warden for the burning of brush and the building of camp fires from March first to December first, the previous law requiring it only during the spring and fall.

The state park commission received $100,000 for acquisition of lands to the state park system, in place of the $200,000 asked for and estimated by them as required to build up an adequate system of state parks. The smallness of the sum given will mean that the commission can do little more than round out the boundaries of some of the existing parks. No provision was made for a shore park in Fairfield county, although a strong effort was made by the people of that section to have a park on the lines of the famous one at Sammonsset Beach.

The park commission receives $140,000 for maintenance and development, but most of this sum will have to go to maintenance, as the intensive use of some of the parks requires the presence of a caretaker and other expenses of up-keep.

One state park was added to the system by legislative action, this being Mumie Island in Gardner Lake, in the towns of Montville and Salem. This is a small island to which the state has held title since colonial days, but has never administered. It is well adapted for park purposes.

The park and forest commission was also made custodian of the Schaghticoke Indian reserve on the banks of the Housatonic river, in Litchfield county, this being the last Indian reservation in the state.

POLICE SEARCHING FOR LEO MARX, NEW YORK ACTOR

Detroit, June 8.—(AP)—Working on the theory that he has temporarily lost his memory because of the oppressive heat, police tonight were still searching for Leo Marx, New York actor, who mysteriously disappeared Saturday night. Marx left his dressing room in a local theater just before the final curtain Saturday night saying he was going outside to get some air, as he did not feel well. He has not been heard of since.

The automobile in which Marx and his wife have been traveling is at a local garage. Neither Mrs. Marx or Marx's three brothers who are playing with him could assign any reason for the actor's disappearance.

Washington, June 8.—(AP)—A rehearing in the famous Coronado coal case was refused yesterday by the supreme court.

MRS. KENYON'S PETITION FOR PARDON NOT GRANTED

Mrs. Mabelle Kenyon, 50, of Pawcatuck, who has been in state prison since October, 1926, was an unsuccessful petitioner for pardon Monday at the session of the pardon board at Wethersfield.

State Attorney Arthur Brown, of New London county, offered no opposition to the release of the woman, who is serving 10 to 15 years for manslaughter for the killing of Dr. Tetlow, third member of a triangle in which Mrs. Kenyon was involved. Mr. Brown was foreman of the grand jury which indicted the woman for murder in the first degree, but he told the board that Judge Hinman, who presided at the trial and Dr. Scanlon, principal witness for the state, had freely declared their opinion the woman had suffered sufficiently and Mr. Brown was willing to accept their views of the case.

Attorney Herbert Rathbun, of Westerly, appeared for the woman, and said the sentiment was strongly for the woman, her husband had stood by her loyally, and that she had suffered keenly because of her imprisonment, her hair having become snow white.

Charles Brusuek, of Windham, sentenced for one to four years, and to pay a fine of $1,500 for keeping liquor with intent to sell, made a personal plea for clemency. The board was informed that no part of the fine has been paid, and the reason for the stiff penalty was because there had been tampering with witnesses.

Charles A. Gasson, of Waterford, 49, serving two to four years for abortion, pleaded for clemency. State Attorney Brown claimed the man was a notorious abortionist before he was caught, and should at least serve his minimum sentence.

Justice Maltbie informed Attorney Fischer, counsel for Simon S. G. Salsbury, serving life sentence, that but 15 minutes is allotted for the presentation of a case, and the justice had been made timekeeper. Mr. Fischer had continued for more than that period and had to be limited. Salsbury was indicted for the killing of two Preston men, Chapman and Kinney, and Attorney Fischer argued that it bordered very closely on manslaughter. Salsbury once made his escape from the Norwich jail but was recaptured. Attorney Brown did not believe the seven years served by Salsbury was quite sufficient.

F. B. DISCO'S PATENT ON COMBUSTION TUBES

Frank D. Disco of 25 Roswell avenue has just been granted a patent for central and reverse draft combustion tubes, the object of which is to provide a more complete combustion of the fuel and a more thorough combustion of the gases generated from the fuel during the burning operation

The invention is an inexpensive and simple device which may be readily adapted to the conventional stovepipe inside of which it is placed between the stove or furnace and the chimney. Air is admitted in such a way that it may be partially heated and commingle with the gaseous products from the fuel, with the result that these products will be practically entirely consumed by the fire in the furnace.

There is a wide field for the use of the combustion tubes and it is anticipated that the patent will be an important and highly valuable one for Mr. Disco.

SERMON ON TENNESSEE'S

At the Sunday morning service at

[illegible] a reversal to the medieval type of society.

Rev. Mr. Foster spoke upon the topic, "Liberty to think as we please and the sinister threat of the Tennessee [illegible] using the text John 8:32, 'Ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free.'

In part he said:

'These famed and significant words were inscribed over the commemorative arch for the pioneers of civil and religious liberty at the world parliament of religion at the Chicago exposition in 1893. That parliament gathered representatives of all the great religions of the world including spokesmen of the manifold variations of Protestant Christianity. They met in solemn and fraternal assembly and magnified certain basal elements common to all. One wonders if the fundamentalist controversy would not appear in strident form if such a gathering were attempted today. At that time the Spencerian philosophy—with John Fiske's poular version—had won the approval of the world of scholarship and compelled the regard of thinking men and women. It was realized that the historic conflict between science and dogmatic theology was quite aparate from the religion of the humble and contrite heart and the teachings of Isaiah and Micah and Jesus as to the essentials of religion and the great commandments of the moral life. It was seen that science, rather than nullifying religion, has so vastly enlarged life and so greatly extended the horizon of thought as to open new opportunities for the expression of the devout soul and of the Divine sovereisgny. Is was presumed that the world would never again go back to othe petty views of the literalist set to the bitter schisms of the dogmatist. And yet, today we witness anr action that is both extensive and humiliating and that threatens the prized heritage of civil and religious liberty.

Several of our state legislatures have before then for consideration bills which in law would make it a crime to teach evolution or progressive development in the public schools and colleges of the respective states. Tennessee has already enacted such a law and a testing of the law will soon come from the local high school in Dayton, Tenn.

'There seem but three alternatives in our attempts to explain creation. First; things have always existed as they are today.

We know this is not true because in common experience we witness changes in nature and the world. Second; all things,—moon and stars, mountains and sea and the myriad forms of plant and animal life, were created in an instant by fiat. There is no sufficient evidence for believing that to have been true. Third, the present state of things has evolved through progressive changes from a very remote past and the process of orderly change is yet with us even perchance, as we anticipate the future of marvel and of glory.

The last is the tenable and logical explanation. If it disconcerts our honored traditional theory of a six days' creation, the integrity of the moral law and the value of treligion are not thereby affected at all. To study the stones and the flowers and the birds and the fascinations of human nature and human history is to strengthen our knowledge and to increase our wisdom. Dogma may put a premium on ignorance but religion views the search for truth as a worthy and inspiring command of the Divine.

Citizenship has a right to demand that public institutions of learning shall reflect the higher leadership of society and teach the demonstrated truth which pioneers and martyrs have proclaimed at great sacrifice. To attempt to teach science without any regard to evolution is to trifle with opportunity and to encrust education within the confines of dogma. How long will such a policy hold the approval of thinking men and women and how long will it quicken the worthy ambitions of youth?

This is not altogether a question to be decided by a majority vote nor by the amount of money, taxes or contribution. Truth is not commonly found nor its value rightly estimated in that way. It involves a reasonable response to accredited leadership; commonly society has made its most significant advances when following the leadership of a true and determined and consecrated minority. Our American heritage has gloried in the right of individual judgment and in the separation of church and state. Such legislation in America in the 20th century marks a reversion to the medevial type of society and flouts the prized liberty of conscience and the incentive to gain the larger freedom which comes through the knowledge of the truth.

"A sense of law and beauty and a face turned from the clod, some call it evolution and others call it God."

CHRISTMAS SEAL SALE WENT TO $100,000

With a total of practically $100,000, the last Christmas Seal Sale in Connecticut broke all previous records, according to the final report which was made Monday at the office of the state tuberculosis commission in the capitol. The commission last December appealed to the people of the state to contribute that amount to its preventive and educational work and to the valuable anti-tuberculosis programme which its 75 local units are carrying out throughout the state, largely consisting of directing tuberculosis nursing, holding tuberculosis clinics, and making other efforts to locate, in an early stage of the disease, cases in the cities and towns and to get them promptly under treatment.

The exact sum raised by the seal sale is $99,053.12, which is practically $3,000 more than the amount secured a year ago, and which established a new high-water mark as a Connecticut Christmas seal total.

The manner per per capita sales this year in fourth class towns reported a sale of 36 seals per inhabitant of that town. Mrs. S. P. Taylor was the chairman of the committee which directed the campaign.

West Hartford stays second in per capita sales with 18, the campaign being directed by Clarence H. Root. Canton stood third with 16.5, New Canaan fourth with 15, Newton fifth with 15, Plainville sixth with 14, Old Saybrook seventh with 13.4, Beacon Falls eighth with 13.3, Essex ninth with 13.3, Simsbury tenth with 13.1, Sprague eleventh with 13.7, East Windsor twelfth with 12.6, Norwich thirteenth with 12.6, Guilford fourteenth with 11.8, Fairfield seventeenth with 11.3, Meriden eighteenth with 10.3, and Cheshire nineteenth with 10.

Hartford for the fourth consecutive year led the state with its total which was $13,826. New Haven was second with $11,695, a new high mark for the total in that city. Bridgeport raised $9,000, which also broke the record for that city. Waterbury with $5,444, Meriden with $3,905, Norwich with $2,87 and Stamford with $3,093 also created new top levels. A summary of the total amount raised in the towns where the commission has local units follows: Ansonia-Derby $1,563.84, Beacon Falls $246.06, Bethel $91, Bozrah $80, Branford $497.26, Bridgeport $9,000, Bristol $1,291, Canton $611, Cheshire $325, Danbury $1,255, Darien $244, East Haven $385, East Windsor $494, Essex $288, Fairfield $1,583, Glastonbury $356, Greenwich $1,717, Griswold $161, Groton $218, Guilford $285, Hamden $876, Hartford $13,236, Killingly $438, Litchfield $377, Madison $188, Manchester $1,182, Meriden $3,905, Middletown $1,967, Milford $505, Montville $100, Naugatuck $906, New Britain $3,050, New Haven $11,805, New London $1,765, Newton $414, North Canaan $120, North Haven $452, Norwalk $1,248, Norwich $3,327, Old Saybrook $200, Plainfield $343, Plainville $669, Plymouth $170, Putnam $281, Seymour $465, Simsbury $415, Southington $236, Sprague $217, Stafford $326, Stamford $3,093, Stratford $465, Suffield $499, Thomaston $239 Torrington $1,871, Rockville $629, Wallingford $1,514, Waterbury $5,444, Waterford $645, West Hartford $1,954, West Haven $1,283, Wethersfield $97, Windham $896, Windsor $539, Windsor Locks $221, Winsted $602, New Canaan $642.

The opening exercises which included Scripture reading, prayer, singing and the regular reports, were followed by a very entertaining report of the tri-county conference of King's Daughters held Thursday, May 21, at the Second Congregational church, New London. This was submitted by Mrs. Thomas Keen, first delegate to the conference from Home chapter.

It was voted at the meeting Monday to purchase a new electric flat iron for the Johnson Home, also to have a new door bell installed there. It was announced that the next meeting of Home chapter sewing circle will be held at the home of Mrs. Neville Blicq, 223 Rockwell street Tuesday, June 16th. ## GROTTO'S JUNE CEREMONIAL SUCCESSFULLY CARRIED OUT

Nemrod Grotto's June ceremonial was conducted with great success on Monday evening with a class of candidates to go through the mysteries in the elaborate ceremonies at Grotto hall on Broadway.

The programme opened with a business session at 6 o'clock at the hall with Monarch Herman Steimer presiding. Following this about 200 of the prophets had supper at 6.45 at the Community house where the ladies of Sachem chapter, No. 57, O. E. S., served an attractive menu. At 7.30 there was a parade in which the features were the East Side drum corps in their white suits, the Grotto patrol in their colorful costumes and the Grotto drum corps.

Upon the return to Grotto hall the initiation consumed the time from 8 to 10, when Hartford entertainers put on a programme of the best vaudeville that has been given at any of the Grotto ceremonials.

Those appearing on the vaudeville bill were the Carpenter Sisters, song and dance artists; Helen of Troy character dancer; Esther Keidel, soprano soloist; Pinkas and Leete, classical and acrobatic dancing; Willis and Spencer, comedians; Martin and Storen, accordion duets; Leroy and Appleton, balancing and juggling acrobats.

WITHDRAWAL IS FILED IN MAIN ST. SUIT

Withdrawal has been filed in the superior court of trustees of Trinity Methodist Episcopal church of this city against Abraham Abelman, also of Norwich, in which $5,000 damages were claimed.

Abelman bought from the city of Norwich the old fire station property on Main street that adjoins the church property and the litigation that was started concerned a six foot strip of land along the church property line. The trustees claimed that upon the strip, the defendant had erected a steel platform which fills the whole space between the building on his land and the church building and threatens to erect a stairway thereon. In case of a fire or other accident, the plaintiffs alleged the platform would constitute an obstruction to access to the church property, and an irreparable injury and the stairway and further building threatened are in a direct breach of the condition upon which th eland was conveyed upon which the land was conveyed plaintiffs.

MAYOR WATERS TO THROW OUT FIRST BALL IN OPENING OF TWILIGHT LEAGUE

At 6:30 P. M. (D. S. T.) tonight Umpire Charles Coleman will cry "Play Ball" and his honor Mayor Milo Waters will wind up and send the first ball of the Norwich Twilight League on a speedy journey to the plate. For two months the Duwell Members have worked hard to get ready a field suitable for this purpose and tonight when the gates of the park are thrown open at 6 P. M. the fans will have their first chance this season of seeing some fast baseball in Norwich.

According to all reports the league should prove a huge success as all the teams in the league are evenly balanced and contain some of the fastest men in these parts.

While all the other teams are real head-liners, the fact that the East Ends champions of the 1924 League and George Madden's Nuggets have been selected to play the opener is bound to prove an attraction that will pack the Park.

The East Ends, with a record of nine straight wins and only one defeat last year, will present a team stronger in every department than the one which last year brought home the bacon to people across the bridge. While Madden's team will make a strong bid for the league leadership, George's one ambition is to take a gamble out of what he claims is an over-rated team. To prove that he really means business he has signed up Johnny Green, one of the N. F. A.'s star twirlers and Lloyd Jarvis, the sensation of the 1925 high school season to do his twirling. Hinrichs, winner of the Athletic Cup at the Academy, who has broken many a high school pitcher's heart with his heavy hitting will do the backstop work and others whom are familiar to local fans are Chick Stanley, who turned in a big year at the Catholic University at Washington, Red Lesseman, the popular little fellow from Thamesville, Duffy, of the State Hospital, Lemieux, of the J. B. Martin team, Burke of the N. F. A., and others whose names for reasons best known to himself, Manager Madden refused to announce.

In the East End lineup will be Durgee, who hales from up around Jamaica Plains with a record that is in a class by itself, who will do the catching, Tim Coughlin, Leo Hamel, Dutch Leonard, Chip Dyer, who recently returned from Tufts University with a big season under his belt, Jimmy Pedding

MARKET WAS REACTIONARY

New York, June 8—Stock prices after an early period of strength which was featured by the brisk accumulation of a selected list of oil, rubber, motor and merchandising shares, Selling, which was largely of a professional origin, was attributed to prospects of temporary money stringency in anticipation of June 15 tax payments, and the apparent inability of pools to attract a public following.

Pronounced weakness developed in a number of high-priced stocks. General Electric broke seven points and then rallied one, while net losses of 2 1-2 to 5 1-2 points were recorded by Allis Chalmers, American Can, Dupont, Mack Trucks, Maxwell Motors B certificates, Laclede Gas, Nash Motors, U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, Western Union and Woolworth.

Havana Electric showed outstanding independent strength, soaring 13 1-2 points to a record high at 167, on buying said to be fore the account of electric bond and share interests, and then slipping back to 161 on profit taking.

Early strength of the oil shares was based on expectations of an early increase in Mid-Continent crude. Texas company and Mid-Continent petroleum were quickly bid up to nek 1925 highs at 49 1-2 and 36 1-8, respectively, but these gains were cancelled in the general wave of selling which swept the market during the afternoon. The Pan-American issues reacted about 4 points from their early highs, while net losses of 1 to 3 points were recorded by Atlantic Refining, General Asphalt, General Petroleum, Pure Oil and Pacific.

Rubbers also enjoyed a temporary period of strength with U. S. Rubber common and first preferred, Fisk common and first preferred and Kelly-Springfield 6 per cent., preferred, all breaking through their previous year's maximums. The early strong spot in the motor group were Moon and Chandler but each closed lower in the day. Steels were heavy throughout the session. U. S. Steel common closing one-half point lower at 113 1-2.

Rails yielded with the industrials. Lackawanna closed nearly 4 1-2 points lower at 143 after opening at 147 3-4, a new high record for the year. Norfolk & Southern touched a new top at 37 1-2 and then dropped back two points, for a small fractional gain on the day. Not declines of a point or more also were recorded by Baltimore & Ohio, Chesapeake & Ohio, St. Paul preferred, Rock Island, Great Northern preferred, New Haven, Northern Pacific, Southern Railway, Union Pacific and Wabash issues.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

Sharp recoveries of the French and Belgian currencies featured the irregular foreign exchange market. French francs were bid up nearly ten points to 4.55 1-2 cents on reports that early use of the $100,000,000 Morgan credit was contemplated to stabilize exchange, while Belgian francs recorded a similar gain at 4.76 1-2 cents in reflection of reports that Belgium will send a commission here next month to negotiate a settlement of her war debts to this country. Demand sterling held firm around $4.85 5-8.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET

Chicago, June 8—Rains and lower temperatures brought about a decided fall today in the price of wheat. Besides, the United States visibye supply of wheat failed to show as much decrease as had been expected. Closing quotations on wheat were heavy at 3 1-4 to 3 7-8 c. net decline, July $1.65 5-8 to 1:65 3-4 and September $1.62 1-8 to 1.62 3-4, with corn 5-8 to 1 7-8c. off, oats at 1-4 to 7-8 c. down, and provisions varying from a setback of 30c., to 7 c. advance.

A general rush to sell wheat took place soon as the market opened. With scattered rains shown all the way from the Gulf of Mexico to Canada and with widespread coler weather prevailing, the buying which developed was of insufficient volume to do more than bring about transient rallies. This was especially the case after the domestic visible supply statement came out, and the fact was evident that no such hole had been made in the total as the majority of traders had looked for. The smallness of the visible supply decrease too, was emphasized by knowledge that new export buying today had been slow, hardly 300,000 bushels, and that, the 1925 harvest was getting well under way in the southwest.

Rains eased down corn values as well as wheat, but oats displayed stubborn resistance to selling pressure. With both the oats crops and forage unpromising, the corn market also received good support of declines.

In line with hog values, the provision market averaged lower.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 8—Buying interest in today's bond market was quickened by the announcement that the forthcoming treasury financing of $125,000,000 would be the smallest since the war. Funds which had been withheld in anticipation of a larger offering were thereby released and immediately sought employment in investment channels, lifting five United States government obligations to the highest levels of the year, and bringing about moderate improvement throughout the entire list.

Indications that the government was in an unusually strong financial condition, as shown by the small amount of cash needed at this time, contributed to the rally in its bonds. Both treasury issues and the first, third and fourth Liberties established new records.

Foreign developments continued to command attention. Announcement that Berlin city authorities had approved of $12,500,000 seven per cent. American loan is expected to lead to an early offering of the bonds by Speyer and company, who extended a credit to the German capita last year. Bankers asserted that the investment market was in

It became known this afternoon and by the provision of the will, the entire estate is bequeathed to relatives of Mrs. Palmer, except the income of a trust fund, which is bequeathed to former employes of Mrs. Palmer, Joseph Quinn, Miss Christine Comrie, and Miss Margaret Sherry, all of this city.

The instrument was drawn April 18, 1922, and was witnessed by George B. Frost, Grace A. Hilton and H. Coe Gardner.

The document provides for the following bequests

A provision of the will is that when ever any of the beneficiaries of the said trust fund dies, that the proportionate part of the beneficiary shall become a part of the rest and residue of the said estate.

All the rest and residue, no matter of whatsoever nature or wheresoever located is divided equally between the the testatrix's two daughters, the Misses Theodora and Virginia Palmer and Mrs. Palmer's grandson, the issue of Mr. and Mrs. Charles T. Palmer, the former having died about two years ago.

By the provisions of the will Miss Theodora Palmer and William H. Reeves, the latter a former intimate acquaintance of Mrs. Palmer, are named executors and without bond.

Mrs. Theresa Beatrice, 54, wife of Manuel Beatrice, died this morning at her former residence, 62 Willetts avenue. Mrs. Beatrice had been ill several weeks. Besides her husband, she is survived by a son, John Beatrice, New Britain, and a daughter, Mrs. Nellie Beckwith, this city.

Miss Mary I. Terson, daughter of the late Bertrand and Hannah Terson, died late Saturday at her former residence, 41 Georgianna street, death terminating an illness of several months. Miss Terson is survived by two brothers, Peter Terson, this city, and Thomas E. Terson, Thames View, Waterford and by two sisters, Miss Anna Terson, this city and Mrs. Josephine Foley, Hartford.

The funeral of Miss Elizabeth Buckley occurred this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large throng of mourners. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Raymond O'Callahan, assisted by Rev. Timothy M. Crowley as deacon and Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger as subdeacon. At the conclusion of the mass Edward F. Murray rendered "One Sweetly Solemn Thought." The bearers were Francis J. Corcoran, Thomas F. Gannon, Edward J. Nellan, Peter E. Dyer, John J. Farrell and William Quinlan, the latter of Westerly. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Miss Harriet Emmerich, Connecticut avenue, stenographer in the probate court, is spending a few days at Hampton Manor, Southampton, N. Y.

Mrs. Charles A. Pinney, wife of Captain of Police Pinney, and Mrs. Mary McBride, 33 Truman street, have returned from Boston where they spent the week-end. Mrs. Pinney was accompanied home by her son, Harold Pinney, who has been pursuing studies at Harvard law school.

Michael L. O'Connell has sold a house and lot on Alewife avenue, Ocean Beach, to Mendel and Rose Zimmer. Mr. and Mrs. Zimmer have also purchased of Louis G. Goldberg a house and lot on Alewife avenue, together with a house and lot at 21 Midway place of Henry J. Welson, Hartford.

Thomas J. McCarthy has sold to Alfred O. Lawrence a building lot on Robinson street.

Frederick W. Mercer has sold to Annie Murphy a house and lot on Bentley avenue, Ocean Beach.

The funeral of Antonino Ragonese, 3, son of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Ragonese, 698 Bank street, was held this afternoon at 2 o'clock at the residence of the child's parents and was attended by a large gathering of relatives and sorrowing acquaintances of members of the family. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Bert De Vault was liberated from the county jail Saturday where he served a sentence of three months on the charge of assault. He proceeded to get drunk and escaped arrest Saturday and Sunday, but this afternoon he was taken into custody by Patrolman Howard Sloan when De Vault was found helplessly intoxicated on Water street, near the tracks of the New York, New Haven & Hartford railroad. De Vault is an ex-soldier and was dishonorably discharged at Fort Wright about four months ago.

Ruby Parker, Flanders merchant, will be arraigned before Judge Frederick Dimmock in the Waterford town court Wednesday night of the charge of operating a motor vehicle at a reckless rate of speed.

Parker was taken into custody Saturday afternoon by State Police Officer Robert Bobnick when the officer alleges that he detected Parker operating his machine at an estimated speed of 40 miles an hour. Parker did not have his operator's license in his possession when he was apprehended.

Florence Joyce and Ruby Schaefer, young women who have become well known characters on the streets and in the dance halls about this city, were sent out of town today as persons who were not desired here. They were fined $25 each in the police court and a term of three months each in jail was attached to their penalty as lascivious persons unless they quit the city and remained away during the next twelve months. They raised the money to pay their fines and thus escaped a stay at the county jail. How they have been immune from arrest so long has been a matter of surprise to people frequently in the streets. They were not employed in lawful occupation, were frequenters of dances nightly and disported themselves in the public eye brazenly. Judge Prince's warning to them was positive. They are likely to heed it.

John Rooney and William Burchess, appeared in the police court today with last week hang-overs. They admitted that they were drunk and that they were amenable to law. Judge Prince had compassion on them and suspended judgment. Harry Watchinsky, a Groton peddler, parked his truck while he did business on Church street. He was there so long that he was charged with violation of the parking ordinance. Judgment in his case was suspended.

Victor Danesi, 54, died this evening at his former residence, 117 Water street, Stonington. Mr. Danesi had been ailing for some time, but had only been confined to the bed for about a week, death resulting from dilation of the heart. He is survived by his wife and by seven children, Frank Danesi, Railroad avenue, Norwich; Peter Danesi, Mystic; Mrs. Etta Satti, Webster, Mass.; Mrs. Mary Squadrito, Stonington; Mrs. Anna Chesbro, Stonington; Mrs. Victoria Orlando, Stonington, and Louis Danesi, Stonington.

Mr. Danesi was born in Italy in 1861 and located in Stonington Dec. 14, 1899. He was engaged in the fruit and confectionery business a number of years and as a merchant he gained many friends and the respect of the community. About three years ago Mr. Danesi retired from active employment and enjoyed apparent sound health until about last Monday when he suffered the heart attack and his decline from that time was rapid.

George W. Hull, Battery C, Coast Artillery, Fort Duval, Boston, Mass., was brought to the police station tonight a prisoner, and charged with desertion. He will be taken to Fort Wright tomorrow for court martial.

Ernest Smith, 4, son of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Smith, 93 Howard street, is a patient at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital tonight suffering from muscular abrasions of the body and possible internal injuries as a result of being run over by an automobile owned by Owen W. Coffey, 512 Main street, and operated by Roger H. Tinker, 30 Pleasant street. Tinker was arrested charged with reckless driving and operating a machine equipped with defective brakes. He furnished sureties on his bond of $150 for his appearance in the police court tomorrow morning in N. R. DiBiasi and Michael DiBiasi.

The Smith child was playing in front of his home and while crossing the highway was run down by the machine operated by Tinker. The police were notified of the accident and Sergeants Nelson Smith and John Cavanaugh went to the scene of the accident in the police automobile, causing the child to be removed to the hospital.

Mrs. Annie L. Dunn Dart, 50, wife of John E. Dart, died Sunday at her former residence, Waterford, after an illness of about three weeks. Gaffney, of the patrolman being off duty 45 minutes on the night of May 22nd. City Manager Holt stated late this afternoon that he would probably render his decision some time Tuesday.

Henry D. Slate, son of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley M. Slate, Fowler court, and Miss Edith Mae Johnson, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Justin L. Johnson, 247 Vauxhall street, were joined in wedlock this afternoon at 3 o'clock, the nuptial ceremony being performed by Rev. Charles E. Spaulding at the Methodist church in the presence of a large assemblage of relatives and friends. Ralph Vickery, New York, was best man and Miss Mildred Johnson, sister of the bride, was bridesmaid. Mrs. Waldo Miner and infant daughter, 15 Post Hill place; Mrs. Max Abram and infant daughter, Westerly place; Miss Grace Lutica, Westerly; Thomas Malloy, 288 Huntington street; Mrs. Joseph Grillo, 50 Shaw street; Charles Sarrasin, Westerly; Cadmore Donatello, 20 Pratt street; and Francis Salnius, United States Coast Guard destroyer Downes and Edward Flynn, 25 Mather court, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

Three cases of alleged violation of the automobile laws held the attention of Judge Cornelius C. Costello in Groton town court this forenoon.

W. A. Clarke, Elm street, Mystic, was charged with reckless driving and his case was continued until next Monday.

William Broks, New London, drew a fine of $25 and costs, the latter amounting to $39.65, on a charge of operating an automobile without proper registration.

L. M. Winkler, South road, was fined $25 and costs, the latter amounting to $17.30, of a charge of operating an automobile by a standing trolley car. Judge Costello, however, remitted $15 of the fine.

NEW LONDON TO HAVE WHARF FOR YACHTS

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 8.—New London, with the best harbor on the Atlantic coast, has no wharf or yacht station at which vessels of organized pleasure boat clubs or associations may obtain the privileges accorded to them at other ports along the coast. This city has in contemplation now the provision of such a station. The city council this evening decided to accept an offer of the Home Memorial hospital to put its wharf in repair and to make use of that during the summer now beginning. Hereafter the city will provide a building, probably on a wharf which it will buy or construct, that yachts, when coming to this harbor, may make free use of. There will be a keeper stationed there and such provision will be made for the accommodation of boats from the yachts, the reception of mail for owners and guests as the New York Yacht club formerly provided. Henry H. Flint has manifested an interest in such a movement, and as he is a yacht owner the city naturally wishes to conform to whatever idea he has as to the provision of a station. In the prosperous years of yachting prior to the war New London was one of the principal stations of the club of the New York squadron. But the property whereon the station existed was sold to the Home hospital and the building was finally torn down. Another and just as convenient a structure will probably displace the former building.

MUCH BUSINESS FOR NEW LONDON COUNCIL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 8.—The city council held a meeting of an hour's duration this evening, but it transacted a considerable volume of worthwhile business. There were ten applications for building permits, mostly garages and verandas, but there was some new work also. The council voted to purchase something more than 2,500 gallons of fuel oil for the heating of Hillside home, or the almshouse, at a price of 8 1-2 cents a gallon. The Standard Oil company is to furnish the oil.

A contract was awarded to L. H. McLoughlin to repair the municipal wharf at the foot of State street at a cost of $1,000, the bid of McLoughlin being the lowest of three bids received.

Frank H. Bailey and seven others represented to the city manager that the New Haven railroad company was encroaching on city land in the erection of a board fence at Converse lane and Montauk avenue, but investigation by the city manager and a report from the director of law was to the effect that no encroachment had been made, so the protest of Mr. Bailey and others was received for record.

The council voted to extend the sewers on Squire and Colman streets, on the latter highway the extension to be 88 feet north of Fuller street.

Home Memorial hospital offered the use of its wharf on Pequot avenue for a landing place for boats in the lower harbor and the city manager was given the power to enter into an arrangement with the hospital authorities by which the wharf shall be repaired and kept in condition for use by the city during the summer.

The Swarthmore Chautauqua was given permission to make use of Williams Memorial park the week of July 6 to 11 for meetings as in previous years, and the day nursery was given permission to use the streets of the city for a tag day on the 15th of August. The Circle of the Methodist church was given permission to use Williams park for garden day on the 24th of July.

Councilor Streeter called up the matter of the zoning law for the city, but was informed that the city manager had written to the secretary of state for a copy of the act and that as soon as that was received the matter would be brought to the attention of the council and then the act could be taken advantage of.

ATTY. TROLAND INJURED IN AUTOMOBILE SMASH

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 8.—Attorney Thomas D. Troland, Hillside avenue, and Mrs. Caroline Epp, 74, colored, employed by him as cook, were injured tonight, the latter seriously, when the automobile in which Attorney Troland was driving and with Mrs. Epp as passenger, were struck by a car operated by John Biers, 15, of Golden Spur, Waterford. Attorney Troland sustained cuts and lacerations of the face and head and after receiving treatment at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital, was taken to his home. Mrs. Epp sustained an ugly cut of the scalp and because of loss of blood, her condition is considered serious at Home Memorial hospital, to which institution she was removed immediately following the accident. Biers was arrested charged with taking an automobile without permission of the owner, operating a motor vehicle without driver's license and reckless driving. Biers took the automobile owned by his father and due to the latter's absence, came to New London this evening. While driving south on Montauk avenue he collided with the machine operated by Attorney Troland, as the latter car emerged from Gardner avenue. The cars came together with terrific force, causing both to be extensively wrecked, so much so that they had to be towed to garages. Attorney Troland and Mrs. Epp were caught with the wreckage and with the assistance of passing autoists they were removed to the hospitals that their wounds might be given necessary attention.

NEW TYPE WATCH DOG INTRODUCED IN LONDON

A new kind of a watch dog has made its appearance in London. These dogs do not need any special training to be efficient, nor do they differ in pedigree from any of the other useless lap-hounds that escort their mistresses on sunny afternoons along the Mall.

What makes these pets distinctive is that on their collars they wear tiny watches, often set with jewels and sometimes with little bells that strike the hours. A woman from San Diego, Calif., is credited with having started the fashion, which the Bond street jewelers were not slow to encourage.

A journey baker in Paris claims to have found a formula for bread dough, the use of which will keep the loaves in an edible condition for months or even years.

NORWICH DOINGS 75 YEARS AGO

Plans to start the Citizens bank in Norwich were formulated 75 years ago and the legislature was asked to repeal the bonus section of the charter. During the same week the south in convention passed a resolution to bind themselves together and take the position of non-intercourse with northern states unless laws screening runaway slaves were rescinded.

News of the week, in part, as taken from The Courier of 1850 was as follows:

Tuesday, June 4, 1850—The memorial for the Citizens' bank of Norwich, chartered at the last session of our legislature, was signed almost unanimously by our business men, embracing, with but few exceptions, all the mechanics and retail merchants of the city. The bank was chartered with a capital of $250,000, of which $50,000 is to be paid on subscription, $50,000 in 90 days and $20,000 every successive 90 days until the whole amount shall be paid in. But the bonus of $5,000 proved fatal to the charter. Weeks and months of endeavor on the part of the petitioners failed to find subscribers for the stock under such an incumbrance.

The aggregate amount of bank capital of this city is barely $989,629, which is, we venture to say, less by from 50 to 75 per cent. than that of any other city in the state in proportion to its business necessities. There has been no increase of bank capital in the city since the charter of the Merchants bank, 17 years ago, but an actual decrease to the amount of $100,000. Because of this much banking business has been lost to this city while manufacturing has increased and the value of manufactured products in this town and vicinity cannot be less than $5,000,000 per annum.

An appeal has been made to the legislature asking that the petitioners be relieved of the bonus and the senate has unanimously passed a bill to that effect. Norwich appeals to the legislature with confidence that the prayer of the petitioners be granted.

The city election passed off very quietly yesterday. Three tickets were in the field—the regular whig ticket, the citizens' ticket and the firemen's ticket. The regular whig ticket was elected throughout and the contest was good natured. The locos had no ticket of their own, yet cast their vote against the regular whig ticket, of ccurse. The whole number of votes cast was about 500 we believe. The following is the ticket elected:

Mayor, William A. Buckingham; aldermen, James A. Hovey, Franklin Nichols, John G. Huntington, Charles Osgood; councilmen, David Moore, Thomas J. Ridgeway, N. C. Brackenridge, D. B. Tucker, James M. Huntington, James Maples, Gurdon Pendleton, Samuel H. Grosvenor; treasurer, Lyman Brewer; clerk, Othniel Gager; sheriffs, Zebulon R. Robbins and Edward W. Eells.

Thursday, June 6, 1850—The remains of the late Commodore George W. Rogers, U. S. navy, which arrived at New York on the U. S. ship Lexington, were brought to New London for re-interment on Wednesday last. The programme for the service was as follows: Music, Freemansons, escort, troops from Fort Trumbull, marines, clergy, body borne by seamen, officers of the navy as pallbearers, relatives of the deceased, officers of the army and navy, governor and suite, city authorities, town authorities, Odd Fellows, Sons of Temperance, citizens.

Four Americans have been executed at Cuba and 400 imprisoned and American warships have put into Cuban ports but demands to see the prisoners have been refused by Spanish authorities. An American frigate, Congress, has gone out to catch the Spanish boat carrying American prisoners and is followed by a Spanish man-o-war. The Spaniards have been told that the arrest of Americans in Cuba or on any other island will not be recognized or permitted.

Saturday, June 8, 1850—Bishop Brownell will, we are desired to state, institute the Rev. W. F. Morgan, as rector of Christ church on Sunday next and administer the confirmation in the afternoon.

By reference to an advertisement appearing in this paper it will be seen that the fare between this city and New York on the Steamboat line has been reduced to $1.25 and no charge for berths.

The second day of the Nashville convention saw business of importance transacted but on the third day a most important resolution as passed in favor of the Missouri compromise; that party distinctions should be dropped at the south, and invite a convention of the south, to be held on the 4th day of June 1851, without regard to party, to decide upon a candidate for southern support; that unless the northern states repeal their laws which screen runaway slaves, it is the duty of the south to pass retaliatory laws, and adopt the plan of non-intercourse.

ENJOY days and nights free from these troublesome pests. Spray Flit.

Flit spray clears the house in a few minutes of mosquitoes and disease-bearing flies. It is clean, easy and safe to use.

Kills Household Insects

Flit spray also destroys bed bugs, roaches, ants, and insect eggs. The cracks and crevices where insects hide and breed are readily reached by Flit spray. Spraying Flit on garments kills moths and their larvae which eat holes. Extensive tests showed that Flit did not stain or injure the most delicate fabrics.

A Scientific General Insecticide

Flit is the result of exhaustive research by expert entomologists and chemists. More than 70 formulas were tested on various household insects before Flit was finally perfected. Flit is a 100% effective insecticide containing no inactive (inert) ingredients.

SECOND OFFENSE BRINGS JAIL SENTENCE FOR INTOXICATED DRIVER

Six months in jail was the sentence meted out to Harry Redhead of Central avenue by Judge Arthur F. Libby in the city court Monday morning, the charge against Redhead being driving an automobile while under the influence of liquor. Redhead was in court on two charges, the second charge being intoxication. He was arrested Saturday by Officer William Sharvan for driving his machine while under the influence of liquor and got out on bail Sunday noon. Late in the afternoon his bondsman and employer, John G. Driscoll, and Redhead were arrested by Sergt. Myron O. Morgan and Officer D. J. O'Neil. This time Driscoll was charged with operating under the influence of liquor and Redhead with being intoxicated. Six months in jail is the minimum sentence under the law for the second offense for driving while intoxicated.

Along with the jail sentence were costs amounting to $11.75 and Redhead was also fined $10 with costs of $9.50 for his Sunday drunk. This he paid.

Following sentence in the city court Redhead was escorted to jail by Officer Charles Smith. This is Redhead's second offense of driving while under the influence of liquor.

It was also Driscoll's second appearance in court for driving while under the influence of liquor. Attorney Charles L. Stewart entered a demurrer which was overruled by the court. Driscoll was bound over to the superior court on bonds of $1,500.

Samuel Plante, 34, of Taftville, was in court on the charge of non-support. The case was assigned for hearing in chambers. Plante was ordered to pay his wife $7 a week for six months or serve a 30 day jail sentence.

Angus McNeil, brought here from New London, was also in court on a charge of non-support. His case was continued until Thursday.

Edward A. Hackett of Bolton, Mass., charged with failure to produce his driver's license, had his case nolled when he exhibited his license in court. He appeared at police headquarters to make a complaint against a driver who he alleged cut in on him in a line of traffic on the Jewett City road. When asked to produce his operator's license he didn't have it with him, so he was summoned to appear in court. Investigation showed that the place where the alleged cutting in was said to have taken place was outside the jurisdiction of the local court.

Pleading guilty to a charge evading responsibility, Austin DeWolf, 23, of Montville, was fined $50 and costs, a charge of reckless driving being nolled. DeWolf paid his fine which with costs amounted to $62.06.

The accident took place on North Main street, Saturday, May 23rd and it is understood that DeWolf will accept responsibility for the damage done to the machine with which he collided. It is said that DeWolf was proceeding along North Main street at a good rate of speed being accompanied at the time by Urban L. Cates of Trading Cove. DeWolf's machine crashed into a Buick touring car parked by the side of the highway and Cates was thrown out and knocked unconscious.

It is said that DeWolf stopped and talked with Irwin E. Burdick, No. 84 River avnue, owner of the Buick but when Burdick asked DeWolf for his license, DeWolf hurriedly left the scene. He gave himself up to the police about five hours after the accident.

Cates was taken to the Backus hospital where he was a patient until last Saturday. He received a fracture of the skull, concussion of the brain and other injuries.

Two men were fined and paid on intoxication charges.

All the Fellowship Leagues were asked to hold an open air meeting all over the country on June 7th. After a delightful reading by the leader of the meeting on the appointed subject, which was followed by discussions, a very impressive sunset service followed. Three or four very old and familiar gospel hymns were sung, then the Creed and prayers were used and just as the sun disappeared the closing hymn, 'Now the Day is Over, was softly and sweetly sung. Splendid work is being done by the Young People of Christ Church along the religious side of life.

NOON SHOP MEETING AT RICHMOND RADIATOR

Monday noon representatives of the local Y. M. C. A. conducted a meeting at the plant of the Richmond Radiator company. Rev. C. H. Ricketts was the speaker and his topic was "Rewards For Good Actions." The speaker emphasized the eternal truth of the scripture that, "whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap," and that while wrong deeds bring their own punishment here or hereafter, good deeds also bring their own reward. Mr. Ricketts cited the names of several persons who through the years had wrought good deeds, and in some cases they died unnoticed, yet as the years have passed their names have become great because of the good they did while they lived. No man can do good without a real effort, and to be bad one does not necessarily have to work hard, just float with the stream and the result will be ruinous. Rewards are for those who by real effort deserve them; you men do faithful work in this shop and your wages are your reward. Let a man come here to work and sit around and wait for the day to pass, and do nothing and the management will tell him to go home and sit around. Some people think that they can be good to take it easy and be wafted into heaven at last, but folks are not wafted in that direction but in the opposite. God never fails to properly reward every good action.

MISS GUSTAFSON DANCES AT WANAMAKER AUDITORIUM

Friends of Miss Ester Gustafson of Pomfret, an interpreter of music through the dance, will be pleased to hear of her recent engagement at the Wanamaker auditorium in New York last Thursday afternoon, when she shared the program with the orchestra of the S. S. Franconia, just returned from a world cruise.

In spite of the extreme heat the auditorium was filled with a large and appreciative audience.

Miss Gustafson appeared in the groups of dances of which a critic has said: "As an original interpreter of music her work is beautiful and moving beyond words. Just as the violinist or singer, through his art, expresses the inspiration of the composer, so in her dancing Ester visualizes the music for her audience."

Her programme was the following: Humoresque, Dvorak; 'Fantasie, F Minor, Chopin; Pastorale, Scarlatti-Tausig; Clair de lune, Debussy.

Prelude No. 1, Op. 28, Chopin; Prelude No. 11, Op. 20, Chopin; Waltz No. 8, Op. 39, Brahms; Waltz, No. 9, Op. 39, Brahms.

ST. VINCENT'S GUILDS ARE TO BE ENTERTAINED

The young men of Saint Vincent's Guild of Christ church and Saint Andrew's will entertain at supper from 6 to 7 o'clock, on Thursday evening, the servers of Saint Vincent's Guilds of this state and diocese. The day's event will begin with the eucharist at 10:30 a. m., at Christ church, it being St. Barnabas day. Later in the day after the supper, a beautiful choral evensong will be sung by Rev. L. E. Mitchell, of Saint Andrew's parish. The sermon will be preached by a visiting priest, and all of the young men from 65 parishes will take part in the procession led by four vested choirs. The rector of Christ church, Rev. C. Montgomery Budlong, will welcome all who would enjoy attending such a service for young men at 7:30, Thursday evening, the Feast of Corpus Christi.

Fr. Broderick Memorialized.

At 8 o'clock Monday, in St. Patrick's church, there was a high mass of requiem for a former rector, Rev. John H. Broderick, who died April 30th, 1921. The mass was sung by the rector, Rt. Rev. Mgr. M. H. May. Organist Frank L. Farrell directed the music and Mrs. Farrell sang the solo portions of the regular Gregorian mass. Parishioners and friends of Father Broderick during his successful pastorate were present at the service.

It was significant that during the mass the branching lights borne by the two marble angels standing at either side of the base of the sanctuary arch were illuminated. During his travels Father Broderick had seen similar angels and one Sunday morning, at the early mass, expressed a wish to his people to have such beautiful additions to the sanctuary adornment. The price was to be about $1,200. Before the end of the day nearly the entire amount had been voluntarily pledged, and later other parishioners notified the pastor of their desire to add to the fund, in case more were required. Consequently, these beautiful marble figures are, in a way, a lasting memorial to a rector who spent his strength, his life, in fact, for the parish which was his charge.

LITTLE GIRL DROWNED IN RIVER AT WINDSOR

Friends of Mrs. Nellie Moore Mc-Hale of this city learned with regret Monday of the death of her niece, Katherine Menser, 13, in a drowning accident at Windsor Sunday. The little girl was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Conrad A. Menser of 30 Hamilton street, Hartford, her mother's maiden name being Catherine Fitzgerald.

Frank Joseph Galler, 18, of Windsor was drowned in an attempt to save the Menser girl. The bodies were recovered about noon Monday.

The Menser girl with a younger sister, Madeline, went to Windsor Sunday afternoon to visit Anna Galler. Several young people organized a party to go swimming in the Connecticut river. They crossed to the east bank and all were in the water.

The girl waded beyond her depth and Galler, an expert swimmer, went to her assistance when she cried for help. He reached her, but in her panic she seized him and dragged him down into a deep hole in the river before other members of the party could reach them.

Galler was the oldest son of Mr. and Mrs. John Galler and besides his parents leaves two brothers and two sisters.

Mary Keleher of 4 Hamilton street, Hartford, who was one of the party, says that she ventured too far out and when feeling herself go down, screamed and was dragged back by some of the smaller children. In their excitement they did not hear the shouts of Frank Galler, who with Katherine Menser clinging about his neck, was shouting for the boat. When the little children finally did get the boat out it was too late.

Katherine Menser was a student at the Hartford Secretarial School and would have been graduated next February.

Katherine leaves eight brothers and sisters, all of Hartford, Lawrence W. and John C. Menser, who are supernumerary policemen, and David P., James E., William Norton, Eleanor M., Robert J. and Madeline Marie Menser.

Mrs. McHall was in Hartford Sunday visiting her sister, when the children left the Menser home to go to Windsor.

Roberts who was accompanied by Wells Rockwell of the Rockwell silver company. This trip was arranged for the merit badge scouts and others who had performed meritorious work during the past year.

On their arrival at Norwich after calling at local Scout Headquarters, they stopped at the Chamber of Commerce where Chief Lemuel Occum Fielding gave them an interesting talk. The party then visited the Uncas Monument and Norwich Falls and had dinner at the Ravine. In the afternoon Fort Shantok was visited where Arthur L. Peale of this city gave an historical talk on the Mohegans and their forts.

After supper on the banks of the Thames the party returned via this city and stopped at Norwichtown green where they visited the graves of the French soldiers near by and the tomb of Governor Huntington. The boys all showed keen interest in historical matters and returned home greatly pleased with their visit to this vicinity.

BUILDING OPERATIONS IN NORWICH

The exceptionally hot weather of the past week in a way had its effect on building operations in Norwich. In places the exterior work on buildings was suspended for the day and at other places the workmen worked only during the early morning which retarded progress to some extent. However, numerous projects were brought along during the week and the predictions that this year will be the largest year in building in Norwich seems to be coming true.

At the office of Fire Marshal Howard L. Stanton a number of applications for building permits were filed and will be granted this week. To date there has been a record set in the number of permits issued from this office.

There has been a noticeable increase in building in the outlying sections of the city and town. This is particularly noticed in the East Great Plain section and in Thamesville around Geer Ave. and Dunham street. In Thamesville there are at least a dozen new houses being erected, the majority of them being of cottage type. At East Great Plain, Thomas Washburn is erecting a cottage house for himself, the foundation having been put in and it is now ready for framing.

On the New London-Norwich road there is usual building activity. This is especially true in the Butternut Hill section where four new cottage houses have been erected during the past few months. Further down at the foot of Mohegan hill several houses have been built and on Mohegan hill there are two in the process of erection.

In Montville Fred St. Germain is building a bungalow on Hill Top for himself.

This house will have seven rooms and bath. The foundation which is of cement blocks is already built and the first floor has been laid.

Norwich Town has also been the scene of extensive building during the first part of the year. In this locality several new houses have been erected and carpenters are at work on several others.

REAL ESTATE SALES AND MORTGAGE LOANS

During the past week there were 18 sales of real estate in Norwich as compared to 16 sales for the corresponding week in 1924. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $165,980 and $46,275.

In New London during the past week there were 20 sales of real estate, a marked increase over the number of sales for the same week a year ago when there were 6. The mortgage loans for the respective weeks were $59,387 and $43,700.

State Building Permits.

Permits for new buildings in the towns of the state reported in the Commercial Record this past week numbered 362, as against 369 in the same week of last year and 329 in the like week of 1923. The cost of new construction work for this week amounted to $1,125,859. A year ago buildings to cost $1,075,447 were started and in 1923, the cost of the proposed new work was $1,314,073.

New London.

The cellar has been completed for a house in Waterford for Charles B. Tinker, Waterford, the contract for which has been awarded to H. B. Prentice, 141 Mohegan avenue. The house will be of frame construction, arranged for seven rooms.

The S. S. Kresge company, of Detroit, have plans for alterations to the front of the Cronin building on State street. There will be new plate glass windows, tile entrances and interior changes.

The permit has been issued to Simon Rynasko for a two-family house at the corner of Connecticut avenue and Pleasant street. The house will be 27x50 feet, of frame construction.

Building Permits.

Pauline Schmauk, store alterations Tilley street, $500.

J. L. and J. P. Doyle, garage, Perry street, $250.

Nicholas Samataro, brick addition, 25 Shaw street, $2,000.

E. C. Ford, gas station, Crystal avenue, $500.

Thos. Gahey, tile garage, Colman street, $500.

J. D. Cronin, store front, 88 State street, $5,000.

Number of permits issued for the week, 10; estimated cost of buildings, $10,200.

Westerly, R. I.

Architects are preparing plans for a residence in Westerly for Dr. M. H. Scanlon, 45 High street. The house will be of brick and hollow tile construction, 40x50 feet, with a kitchen in the rear, 20x33 feet. It will contain 15 rooms and two tile baths, sun porch and porte cochere. There will be hot water heat, hardwood floors, enamel finish and other improvements.

East Lyme.

Extensive improvements and alterations are being made at the former Plant estate for Fred Stone, prominent comedian. The buildings on the property, consisting of a house and two barns, are being remodeled. New plumbing and electric wiring will be installed and material interior changes made.

Groton.

A New London architect has been commissioned to prepare plans for an addition to the Eighth district school in Groton. It is proposed to build a second story on the present building. The addition will contain two school rooms and an assembly hall which can be converted into two classrooms. James A. Ward, Box 52, Groton is chairman of the building committee.

CHINESE RESORT TO ARMS TO FORCE GENERAL STRIKE

Volunteers Fired on Chinese Workers in Belgian Mills, in Shanghai, Killing One and Wounding Several Others—Chang Tso-Lin, Manchurian Military Dictator, Has Ordered Two Battalions of Troop to Shanghai to Reserve Order—Four Americans Were Fired on at Canton.

Shanghai, June 9.—(AP)—Chinese volunteers today fired on Chinese workers in a Belgian mill for refusal to join the general strike, killing one and wounding several others.

London, June 9.—(AP)—An Exchange Telegraph agency despatch from Shanghai says that Chang Tso-Lin, the Manchurian military dictator, has ordered two battalions of troops to Shanghai to maintain order.

TROOPS CLOSING IN ON THE CITY OF CANTON

Canton, June 9.—(AP)—Cantonese troops tonight were closing in on the city of Canton, but all attempts to capture the city from the Yunnanese troops holding it had failed.

Chinese gunboats at midnight last night attempted to land forces on the Canton side of the Pearl river (Chukiang), but were repulsed.

Heavy firing continued throughout the night.

General Hsu Ch-ung-Chi and his Cantonese troops are reported advancing on the city from the east and General Chu Pei-Tak with further reinforcements is reported on his way down the North river.

Earlier report that Commander Wing Fung of the gunboat Popik had taken a bribe from the Yunnanese and decamped tonight proved incorrect. Wing, it since is reported, collected $100,000 from the Yunnanese, but handed it over to the Kwang-Tung forces. The Popik, apparently acceding to the Yunnanese demands, conveyed a number of soldiers across the river, where they promptly were captured by their Cantonese enemies, together with a large quantity of opium and counterfeit coins.

The situation among the foreigners here continued extremely tense today. The fighting has been going on continuously since Saturday. The foreign settlement (Shameen) is not in the line of fire, but is not far removed from the battle.

Representatives of the Chinese Chamber of Commerce, accompanied by the Associated Press correspondent and several other foreigners, proceeded to the Kwang-Tung headquarters on the Island of Honanm and requested the Cantonese commander, General Li Fook-Lum to move the fighting base to some point outside the city, where less material damage would be done by the warfare.

General Li told the delegation that he was perfectly willing to agree, provided only that no soldiers on either side were permitted to enter the city during the hostilities.

FOUR AMERICANS WERE FIRED ON AT CANTON

New York, June 9.—(AP)—A dispatch to the Evening Post today from Hong Kong said four Americans in a launch flying the American flag had been fired on by Yunnanese at Canton, China.

The party, composed of Frank Crampton, head of an American contracting firm at Hong Kong, and Montgomery Ogden, bursar of the Canton Christian college, and their wives was endeavoring to cross the river at Canton from Honan Island to Shameen, the foreign settlement, when the firing started.

Mrs. Crampton was wounded in the arm. The others of the party were injured by splinters of glass. The firing continued thirty minutes and compelled the party to return to Honan and take shelter in the Canton Christian college, the Evening Post dispatch said.

Mr. Crampton was said to have told friends the anti-foreign feeling was intense and that he hoped the United States would intervene.

FIGHTING SIXTY HOURS WITH LITTLE DAMAGE

Canton, June 9—Fighting between Yunnanese and Cantonese troops which has lasted almost without a break for sixty hours has caused very little damage because of the barricaded positions of the opposing factions. The fighting commenced at 4 o'clock Saturday afternoon.

It is believed the contest will be protracted, with small chance of a decision until the armies meet in the east and west river districts.

MOTION FOR SECOND MURDER TRIAL OF OLYMPIA MACRI

New Haven, Conn., June 9—Olympia Macri must again face a judge and jury for the alleged murder of John Sagnano, whom she claims was the father of her child, it became known today when State Attorney Arnon A. Alling notified Joseph Koletsky, counsel for the defense, that he would prosecute the defendant at a retrial. At the first trial, completed a short time ago, the jury failed to agree, dividing 11 to 1 for acquittal.

The state's attorney announced in his letter that he would launch the second trial of the unwed mother at the summer term of the superior court, opening here June 23 before Judge John R. Booth, "unless the judge holding the June term shall otherwise direct."

State's Attorney Alling also made it known in his communication to the defense counsel that he would endeavor to have the second trial held in some other county than New Haven, stating that he would ask for change of venue.

It was reported in official circles that if the request was granted, the state's attorney would ask that the case be tried in Litchfield county. Attorney Alling also notified Mr. Koletsky that he "will make a presentment to the superior court of your attitude in publicly upbraiding a member of the jury for New Haven county—who is in fact a minister of justice—immediately after the dismissal of the jury from further consideration of the case of state vs. Olympia Macri."

DISTINGUISHED COUNSEL IN TENN. EVOLUTION CASE

New York, June 9—Two of President Wilson's secretaries of state will be matched against each other when John T. Scopes goes on trial next month on the charge that he taught the theory of evolution to his Dayton, Tenn., high school pupils in violation of a state law.

The two former cabinet officials are Bainbridge Colby, who was chosen today to assist the defense, and William Jennings Bryan who has already agreed to help prosecute the young teacher.

The American Civil Liberties Union, which is arranging the defense of Scopes also accepted the offer of Clarence Darrow, Chicago lawyer, who volunteered his services. Both Mr. Colby and Mr. Darrow will take part only in the first trial in Tennessee. If the case is carried to the supreme court to test the law's constitutionality, Charles Evans Hughes, another former secretary of state, may be asked to conduct the defense.

SHENANDOAH TO MAKE FLIGHT TO MINNEAPOLIS

Washington, June 9.—(A. P.)—Secretary Wilbur announced late today that the dirigible Shenandoah would make the projected flight to Minnesota instead of the Los Angeles, which was forced to turn back at Cleveland Sunday because of engine trouble.

The secretary after receiving a communication from Captain George W. Steele, Jr., commander of the Los Angeles, that he cancel orders for the craft to make a second attempt to fly to Minnesota, decided to have the helium removed from her envelope at once, refitted and placed in the Shenandoah.

HEART FAILURE FATAL TO CUSTOMS OFFICER

Montreal, June 9.—(AP)—H. A. Gatien, for 33 years U. S. customs official here died today from an attack of heart failure. He was born at Rock Island, Quebec, 68 years ago.

PAINLEVE GOING TO WAR FRONT IN MOROCCO

Paris, June 9—The departure by airplane for Morocco this afternoon of Paul Painleve, premier and minister of war, brought home to a majority of the French people the realization that war is in progress in north Africa.

The fact that the under secretary of aviation is a member of the party was interpreted in military circles as meaning that the government had resolved to discontinue its policy of "watchful waiting" while the Moors are concentrating troops, and would throw into battle all the resources of France's peerless aviation contingents.

The activity tonight around Bourget, Buc, Orly and Issy, the four leading airplane centers in the vicinity of Paris, is regarded as meaning that the request of Marshal Lyautey, the French resident general in Morocco, for an additional 150 planes will be granted.

The first announcement of the impending departure of M. Painleve was interpreted as a political move to keep parliament in line. But the rapidity with which the entire chamber, with the exception of the communist deputies, threw out the demand of the communist member Dorriet for an immediate discussion of the Moroccan situation showed that the chamber stood practically solid behind M. Painleve and that his departure for Fez probably meant a radical change in the French war methods against the Moors.

BELGIAN ENTRY LEADS IN BENNETT BALLOON RACE

Brussels, June 9—Tonight it seemed certain that Belgium would be declared the winner of the first renewal of the Gordon Bennett cup race for lighter than air balloons. This evening Ernest de Muyter, who piloted the bag Belgica, was credited with having gone the greatest distance from the starting point, landing at Quimper, Brittany, 442 miles away.

Actually the Goodyear III, piloted by the American Wade T. Van Ortman, covered 716 kilometers (441.18 miles), but dropped in the Atlantic near the Unhant Light and Van Ortman probably will be disqualified under the rules governing the race.

A wireless despatch was received by way of Havre tonight from Van Ortman on board the steamer Vaterland. The message said:

"Dropped into the sea June 2 eleven o'clock in the morning; latitude 48.27 north, 5.31 longitude west Greenwich. Rescued by Vaterland. All safe. Equipment saved."

Belgium's second string man, Veenstra, flying the Prince Leopold, is the lone aeronaut of the eighteen who started the race who had not reported up to ten o'clock this evening. Veenstra has been the runner up to de Muyter in all the balloon races in Europe during recent years, and there is strong hope among his partisans tonight that he may yet prove to be the winner of the race.

Baron MacDonnell Dead.

London, June 9.—(AP)—The first Baron MacDonnell of Swinford died here this morning. He will be remembered chiefly for his tenure of office as undersecretary for Ireland from 1902 to 1908 when he was Sir Antony MacDonnell. Although an avowed home ruler and an Irishman, he failed to placate the nationalists, but was awarded a peerage upon his retirement in recognition of his services to the British government. He was born in 1844.

TESTIMONY IN MURDER TRIAL OF DOROTHY PERKINS

New York, June 9—Testimony declared by the prosecution to show that Dorothy Perkins, 17, had coldly premeditated the shooting of her suitor, Thomas A. Templeton, was presented today during the first session of her trial. Witnesses asserted Dorothy had carried a revolver for some time prior to the fatal St. Valentine party at which her war veteran suitor met his death.

The prosecution plans another attack tomorrow on the girl's claim of "accident" through the testimony of Micky Connors, also a suitor for Dorothy's favors. What her relations were with Connors and what led to her exclamation, "I'll show you whether my friends are yellow," which the prosecution claims preceeded the fatal shooting, will be developed during this cross examination, according to District Attorney McDonald.

The initial attempt of the prosecution to establish a motive for the alleged crime was quashed today when Judge McIntyre ruled out evidence offered by Joseph Harsell, a "buddy" of Templeton, relative to a scene in the closed company room at 9th coast artillery armory between Templeton and Dorothy, the night before the party in her home.

Harsell's evidence was the big gun of the prosecution during today's short session. He testified of his knowledge of Dorothy being a "gun toter," and of her exclaiming that she was a "blonde haired bandit," when criticized by Templeton. Harsell testified that Dorothy said she was carrying the gun because she was afraid of Mrs. Connors, who she alleged had threatened her.

The jury of 12 "family men" gave no visible signs of reaction today to the young prisoner's second breakdown. This occurred when Medical Examiner Norris traced the blood clot that surrounded her dead suitor's heart.

DISCLAIMER ISSUED BY BANKER OTTO KAHN

New York, June 9—Otto Kahn, prominent New York banker, returning on the Majestic today after a five months tour of the continent, issued a statement denying alleged interviews which quoted him as criticising the attitude of the United States government's efforts to collect the French debt.

George W. Wickersham and Former Ambassador James W. Gerard, who were also quoted as expressing similar criticism of the American debt program, also have issued sweeping denials of the interviews.

"I have been scrupulously careful not to say one word in public during my stay in Europe on the question of the foreign debts to America, except in one speech before an American club in Paris," Mr. Kahn declared.

"On that occasion I said it would be unbecoming to speak on the question of the French debt, a question, which I hoped would be settled before long in a manner satisfactory and honorable to both nations.

"At a private dinner, later, at which no reporters were present, I cautioned the gathering against placing too much dependability on words from America that wound susceptibilities, declaring even journalists and politicians were not cloaked in infallibility."

When he learned the garbled reports of both speeches had been cabled to London and America, Mr. Kahn declared he immediately cabled a correction.

TWO FAIRFIELD, CONN. INNS ARE ORDERED PADLOCKED

Bridgeport, Conn., June 9.—(AP)—The first federal injunctions ever handed down in Fairfield county to check immorality have been signed by Judge Arthur F. Ells of Superior court at the request of State's Attorney William H. Comley, Jr., and they also ask the absolute closing for one year under staunch padlocks of two roadhouses, the Aurora inn, Greenwich, and the Circle inn, Darien. Harry L. Dennison proprietor of the Circle Inn and Louns Fratooni, manager of the Aurora Inn were before Judge Edwin Dickinson in the criminal superior court this afternoon. Each were fined $500 and a jail sentence of six months imposed in case of Fratanooni was suspended. Leniency was exercised in both cases because of the pending injunctions. Action was taken against the road houses not only because of alleged presence of liquor on the premises, but the accusations made by two Stamford girls, against 15 and 16 who were described to Judge Dickinson as having been ruined by their association with men at the inn. State's Attorney Comley's aesthetic sense was out-raged when he was presenting the case of the Aurora Inn and he was moved to remark: "Aurora—that most ironical perversion of the beautiful name" and expressed his wrath and abhorrence for men who commercialize the vice of children."

Gardone, Italy, June 9—Gabriel D'Annunzio, the poet-soldier, is ill at his villa here. A medical bulletin issued this evening reported a considerable rise in the patient's temperature, and described his affliction as "a strong attack of influenza, which up to this moment is taking its regular course, without complications."

Favors Wider Use Of Branch Banking

Reasons Given by Vice Governor Platt of the Federal Reserve Board.

Washington, D. C., June 9.—(AP)—The issue of branch banking as against banking in small units was drawn here today by Vice Governor Platt, of the Federal Reserve Board, who advocated wider use of branch banking for what he said was its "fundamental safety" to depositors and communities.

In an address prepared for delivery before the National Association of Credit men, Mr. Platt argued that greater use of branch banking would restrict banking failures which he declared had been more frequent among the small institutions. Legal curbs around operation of branches he said had proved "unfortunate" in countless instances especially in rural communities.

"The great number of small bank failures," the speaker declared, "accounts for the failure of business to respond as it should have responded to the favorable influences that have been evident for the past ten months. These small bank failures are still occurring at the rate of six or eight a week, and there have been 274 of them since the first of January down to and including May 15.

"We must have larger banks, banks large enough to afford good management and large enough to spread their risks over a variety of industries and over a considerable territory. Unless we are to subject many people living in small communities or in rather thinly settled agricultural territory to great inconvenience, this means at least some branch banking. The attempt to provide banking facilities to small communities, and particularly to communities where the dominant industry is agriculture, by means of small independent banks has proved a failure, as at every previous period of agricultural depression.

"The effort to safeguard the deposits of the people in these small banks by means of guarantee of deposits, undertaken by several states after the panic of 1907, has also proved a failure. The only remedy left is branch banking—not necessarily on any very large scale as in Canada, but on a scale large enough to serve people adequately and safely.""

Mr. Platt asserted that in recent years every business of any consequence has been compelled to carry accounts in New York, Chicago, Boston, Philadelphia, Kansas City or other banking centers, the explanation being given that the "home town" banks were not large enough to provide the financial assistance needed. The growth of agricultural co-operative associations into organizations of immense size, he said, has forced them, also, to go to the big banking houses where business is national.

Against these, the speaker described small home institutions which put "too large a proportion of its eggs in one basket," being forced by circumstances to make all of their loans to one or two industries and thereby becoming dependent upon them. Thus, he added, a business failure is likely to produce a bank failure as well.

The larger percentage of recent failures, Mr. Platt said, was among state institutions and he believed that it was evident from this that larger banking would materially reduce the number of crashes. National banks, generally, he said, are larger and consequently have been more able to weather financial storms. It should be evident from this, he added, that the national banking laws should be amended so that none could be organized with a capital under $50,000 as compared with the present minimum of $25,000.

Reverting to the relationship of agriculture and small unit banking, Mr. Platt asserted that the 753 bank failures in 1924 had come at a time when the agriculture industry, with which most of them did business, was on the road to recovery.

INDICTED FOR KILLING WATERBURY POLICEMAN

Waterbury, Conn., June 9.—(AP)—Ernest Bercier, charged with killing Patrolman William J. Stokes when the latter entered his apartment on May 7 to quell a family disagreement was indicted today for murder in the second degree by a grand jury which had sat almost through the whole day. On motion of State's Attorney Lawrence L. Lewis, Bercier was put at once to plea before Judge L. P. Waldo Marvin, and pleaded not guilty, electing jury trial. Attorney Jesse Devine, counsel for the accussed, at once moved that the trial be postponed until the September criminal term, his request being granted.

MAY POSTPONE FLIGHT OF THE LOS ANGELES

Washington, June 9.—(AP)—Recommendation that the projected second flight of the Los Angeles to Minnesota be postponed or cancelled, was made to the navy department today in a telegram from Captain George W Steele, Jr., commander of the airship.

Pending receipt of a letter from Captain Steele explaining his recommendation, Secretary Wilbur said no decision would be reached with respect to changing the orders issued yesterday that the craft leave Lakehurst at the earliest possible moment for Minnesota.

FATALITY FROM POURING GASOLINE INTO STOVE

Curling, N. F., June 9.—(AP)—One man is dead and another is in a hospital seriously burned as a result of an explosion and fire which wiped out a small boarding house in Cornerbrook. The explosion occurred when a maid poured gasoline into a stove in place of kerosene. One boarder named McIsaac, died of burns, a second, named Ledrew, was seriously injured. The maid was blown out of the house by the explosion. Seven other boarders fled in their night clothes.

NEBRASKA TO PARTICIPATE IN DEFENSE PLANS JULY 4

Lincoln, Neb., June 9.—(AP)—Governor Adam McMullen, in a letter to Dwight F. Davis, acting secretary of war expressed "hearty approval" of the participation of Nebraska in the defense day plans of July 4. Nebraska, under the governorship of Charles W. Bryan, was one of three states last year that declined to participate in the defense day plans September 13.

Two Wellesley High School Students Shot

Reported That Priscilla Amidon and Sterling Mills Had Pledged Suicide.

Wellesley Farms, June 9.—(AP)—Priscilla Amidon, a student in the Wellesley Junior High school, died in the Newton hospital tonight from revolver wounds received in what the police believed might be a suicide pact. Sterling Mills, a student in the senior high school was in the same hospital in a serious condition with a bullet wound in the head.

The boy, about 18 years old, was found lying wounded by the side of Glen road, near here, late today, and told the policeman who discovered him that a girl was dying in the nearby woods, whence he had apparently dragged himself. The police declared that he later admitted shooting the girl "because I had to." Miss Amidon, known to her friends as "Pussy," was found with two or more wounds in the head 100 yards from the roadside with a revolver by her side. Its ownership early tonight had not been established.

According to a schoolmate "Pussy" told her this morning in the school assembly hall that "this is the last day I shall be in this hall." The Mills boy did not attend school today, but was seen by classmates walking toward the junior high school, a mile from the senior school, at 2 o'clock this afternoon. He is said to have told the friends who greeted him that he had a "date" with "Pussy."

It was reported that the boy and girl had left notes telling of a suicide pact, and a search for the missives was begun.

ACTRESS WAS ACCUSED OF APPLYING ART IN COURT

Hartford, Conn., June 9—Mrs. Virginia E. Zimmer, actress, suing Dr. Howard G. Stevens of New Milford for $25,000 damages for alleges malpractice in attending her after she fell from a loaded hay wagon and dislocated her neck, was charged with pursuing her profession on the witness stand by J. P. Addis, counsel for the defendant in United States district here today. In his closing argument Lawyer Addis, appealing to the jury said: "The plaintiff, alleging inability to move her neck without also moving her body, has been acting throughout the trial. She has never forsaken the pursuit of her profession except for a moment. But for that moment you, gentlemen of the jury, could not fail to see that she did turn her head from side to side, without moving her body."

Both Dr. Stevens the defendant, and Mrs. Zimmer took the stand today. Mrs. Zimmer, through her counsel, claims permanent injury causing the abandonment of her profession, through the criminal negligence of her physician, Dr. Stevens, in his failure to diagnose the case and to have her injured neck X-rayed. Dr. Stevens on the stand, admitted that he did not know what was the exact nature of the actress's ailment but denied negligence and less than the "ordinary skill required of a country doctor."

Judge Thomas adjourned court at 4 o'clock to be re-opened at 9 o'clock tomorrow morning when the jury will retire for a decision.

ARSON RINGS CAUSING A LOSS OF $160,000,000 ANNUALLY

Washington, June 9.—(AP)—Arson rings, headed by "unscrupulous politicians and businessmen," are operating in practically every city in the country and are causing an indirect loss to business annually of $160,000,000 T. Alfred Flemming, supervisor of conservation of the national board of fire underwriters, asserted in an address today before the convention of the National Association of Credit Men.

Deaths resulting from incendiary fires in the United States average 15,000 a year, Mr. Flemming said. In the end, he added, the consumer has to pay the loss from such fires because business firms naturally add to their prices the resulting higher premium rates for insurance.

Secretary Hoover, Vice Governor Platt of the federal reserve board and Senator Fess of Ohio also were speakers.

RIOT AT KU KLUX KLAN MEETING AT CLINTON, MASS.

Clinton, Mass., June 9—Twenty five men are under arrest as a result of a riot at midnight tonight on the outskirts of the town following a meeting of the Ku Klux Klan at Berlin. Many are reported cut and bruised, automobiles of the Klansmen have been extensively damaged and there still is much excitement in the town. Twenty state policemen assisted the police in quelling the rioting.

The disorder was one of the worst ever in this district and was caused when a parade of more than 300 Klan machines returning from the Berlin meeting were met by a crowd of more than 400 anti-Klansmen. Twenty state troopers commanded by Lieut. Ray Kimball, were escorting the Klan machines from Berlin when the procession was suddenly interrupted by a flying shower of bricks and stones.

As occupants of the Klan machines alighted the crowd of antis surged forward and in a short time numerous fist fights were in progress while the state troopers vainly strove to keep order.

CONTEST OVER FOREMOST HYMN OF JEWISH RACE

New York, June 9—"Eili Eili," called the "foremost hymn of the Jewish race" was declared to be probably of American origin today by Judge John C. Knox in federal district court, but Jacob Koppell Sanders' suit claiming authorship and seeking to restrain others from publishing it was dismissed.

Sanders, 70-year-old musician, filed suit against Joseph P. Kats, music publisher, for infringement of copyright. Claiming he wrote the celebrated Jewish lament 35 years ago, Abraham Menin, Kats' attorney, played the air in the court room during the lengthy trial to show it was an ancient Russian-Jewish folk song.

The plaintiff testified that he wrote the song for a Jewish Biblical play in 1894.

In a written opinion today, the court decidedm Sandler had forfeited any claim to exclusive publishing rights by failure to have the composition copyrighted immediately after he wrote it.

MAY CREATE A NEW FACTOR IN EUROPEAN RELATIONSHIP

In Anglo-French Reply to Germany's Overtures For Pact Guaranteeing Germany's Western Front Great Britain Would Guard Germany and France Against Attack by Each Other—Pact Would End Britain's Policy of Isolation—Proposal Would Guarantee French, Belgian and German Frontiers.

London, June 9.—(AP)—Official papers explaining the Anglo-French accord in replying to Germany's overtures for a pact guaranteeing Germany's western frontiers will not be presented to parliament, Mr. Baldwin, the prime minister, explained in the house of commons today, until the British foreign secretary, Austen Chamberlain, returns to London about the end of next week. An authoritative statement given out tonight, however, indicates fully the nature of the proposed pact, which should Germany accept, as deemed likely by the British government, will institute an entirely new factor in European relationship.

In the first place, Great Britain will abandon her policy of isolation and become virtually a member of a four power alliance—for it is assumed that Italy will join—to preserve the peace of Europe and guarantee the frontiers of France, Belgium and Germany as established under the Versailles treaty, against violation from any side and will employ the whole of her defensive forces for this purpose.

The pact will be bi-literal, Great Britain undertaking to guarantees the frontiers against unprovoked attack by either France or Germany. But there is an important proviso. The whole pact will be under the aegis of the League of Nations, which Germany must join, and any action taken will be under the league covenant.

Apparently both Great Britain and France had to make concessions. France wanted the right to send troops across the Rhineland to help Poland in the event of war. Great Britain objected to this, and seemingly a compromise had been found, under which the pact guarantees Germany equally with France, and no action can be taken in the event of hostilities in either western or eastern Europe except under the covenant of the league.

The pact which Mr. Chamberlain negotiated will be certain to meet strong criticism in the House of Commons, because many will contend that it involves Great Britain too deeply in possible European entanglements.

ITALY FOR FRANCO-BRITISH-BELGIAN PACT WITH GERMANY

Geneva, June 9.—(AP)—The subject of security took a new angle at Geneva today, when Italy went on record as favoring the Franco-British-Belgian pact, with Germany. Italy is temporarily excluded from this, but her spokesmen voiced the hope that she would be permitted to participation in a pact if extended and applied to all German frontiers.

The indications are that the entire problem of regional accords will be threshed out in September before the assembly of the League of Nations, when the Geneva protocol will be examined again.

The Italian position, as expounded by Signor Scialoja, former minister of foreign affairs, is that if Germany will enter the League of Nations, Italy like the others will find that the general security which the covenant offers has been strengthened by Germany's adhesion. Hence he contended, whether Italy becomes a signator of the pact does not look up as vital for Italy, which might, however, conclude a special regional agreement with Germany.

Signor Scialoja praised Great Britain's intervention in the present pact negotiations with Germany as helpful and conciliatory and calculated to increase the prospect of solidification of European peace.

The general impression in Geneva tonight is that with Great Britain definitely committed to help maintain peace in western Europe and the peace of all Europe in so far as it can be regulated by the covenant of the league and the expected arbitration treaties, the general situation is distinctly brighter. Signor Scialoja summed this up by saying that it would be difficult for Germany not to entertain the allies' offer, because it was the best that could be expected at the present time.

MACMILLAN ARCTIC PLANES HAVE HAD FINAL TEST

Philadelphia, June 9.—(AP)—With enthusiasm equalling that boys going to a circus, the naval fliers finished the last test flight of the Macmillan Arctic airplanes here today, preparatory to their leaving for Boston tomorrow. The first leg of the journey, which will eventually carry the three big amphibian planes up to the ice-bound rim of civilization will be started at 1:30 p. m., daylight saving time tomorow from the Philadelphia navy yard. The planes are expected to be in Boston by 5 o'clock.

Flight Commander Lieutenant R. E. Byrd admitted today he was thoroughly enjoying the anticipations of the trip and expected to equal in thrills all of his hopes.

There is little doubt Roald Amundsen and his party of fliers are safe and will be found, Lieutenant Byrd asserted today. A bad landing that so damaged the Amundsen-Ellsworth planes they were unable to rise, Lieutenant Byrd said, has in all probability sent them trudging back to civilization. If they are not heard of before the Macmillan amphibians take off from their base on the Polar Sea about August 1, he thinks they will be sighted by the Americans soon afterward.

In the course of flying it is possible the Americans will pass over the North Pole, the flight commander said, although, he added, "there is no excitement in finding a spot that has already been discovered."

The planes and their crews are:

NA-1—Lieutenant Commander R. E. Byrd, navigator; Chief machinist Mate Floyd Bennett, pilot.

NA-2—Lieutenant M. A. Schur, pilot; Machinist's Mate N. C. Nold, mechanic.

NA-3—Chief Boatswain E. E. Reber, pilot; A. Rocheville, machinist mate, first class, mechanic.

DARROW ENGAGED FOR THE EVOLUTION TRIAL

New York, June 9.—(AP)—The ability of Clarence Darrow, Chicago lawyer, to dramatize court action, as well as his legal accomplishments, today led to his selection as one of the defense counsel in the trial of John T. Scopes, Dayton, Tenn., high school teacher, next month for violation of the Tennessee evolution law.

Forrest Bailey, of the American Civil Liberties union, which is organizing the defense forces, announced Mr. Darrow's selection today. He made no secret of the fact that the defense desires to make the trial so dramatic as to focus the attention of the nation upon the little Tennessee town.

Before Mr. Darrow arrived today, the Civil Liberties union had been divided as to the wisdom of retaining him as counsel, as some members thought his views so liberal that his defense might not be fully comprehended by the country at large. At a meeting this afternoon, however, Mr. Darrow took a prominent part in considering the best defense for the accused teacher and opposition to his selection was removed.

New Haven, Conn., June 9—The $75,000 alienation of affections suit brought by Mrs. Ruth Norton Boothe against her brother in law Steven Boothe, prominent resident of Stepney, opened in superior court before Judge Leonard J. Nickerson here today.

When court adjourned a jury had been selected, the case had been outlined to them, and the testimony of Mrs. Boothe had begun.

Mrs. Boothe, who lives with her mother in Cheshire is suing for $75,000 for the alleged alienation of her husband's affections. Professor George E. Bers of the Yale law school, former compensation commissioner for the third district, and Attorney Carl Mears appeared for Mrs. Boothe while Attorney Benjamin Slade of this city had Attorneys Bartlett, Keeter, Cohn and Schnee of Bridgeport, appeared for her brother in law.

Mrs. Boothe on the witness stand told of her marriage in the winter of 1921 and of their wedding trip, after which they returned to the Boothe home in Stepney. It was then, according to the witness that Steven Boothe became jealous and the process of alienation of the affections of her husband started. Mrs. Boothe said that when she returned to the Boothe home she found that Steven Boothe was the house keeper and that when she tried to do the work around the place in her own way, he would interfere. She testified that he ordered her to have nothing to do with the neighbors.

HAYS ASKS GOVERNOR TRUMBULL TO VETO BILL

Hartford, June 9.—(AP)—Former Postmaster General Will H. Hays president of the Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Inc., has requested Governor Trumbull to veto the bill adopted by the recent session of the legislature which puts a tax on moving picture films exhibited in Connecticut and empowers Tax Commissioner Blodgett to prohibit the showing of films which he considered immoral or likely to stir up religious or race feeling.

Mr. Hays called Governor Trumbull on the telephone from New York and requested a hearing before the governor takes final action on the legislation. The governor fixed tomorrow afternoon at 1 o'clock for the hearing. It is not certain that Hays himself will attend, but Hays informed the executive that a delegation of producers and distributors would present arguments to him looking to the veto of the bill. Hays' opinion is that the tax of $10 a film of 1,000 feet and 50 cents for each additional feet of film would be confiscatory and force the theatres in the smaller towns of the state out of business.

Seeds 500 Years Old

Lotus seeds, dormant since 1425, are to produce blooms in Chicago within a few months. The seeds were found in a hard, membranous husk in a bed of peat in the Gobi Desert by Prof. Ogha, who gave them to Dr. A. C. Shull, a botanist of the University of Chicago. Dr. Shull will penetrate the covering of the seeds with sulphuric acid. After soaking the seeds for two hours, the seeds will be planted and permitted to grow.

The happiest day in the lives of some men is the day before their marriage.

JEWETT CITY

Fifty enthusiastic members of the Jewett City Chamber of Commerce attended the meeting called in reference to the Fourth of July celebration Monday evening. Various plans and methods were discussed, after which President Benjamin Schlieffer adjourned the meeting, and Warden Matthew J. Geary, chairman of the Community Fourth of July celebration committee, called a meeting to order. Much has been done by the various committees, interest is showing a good boom, and a grand, great time is assured. Treasurer Richard J. Dudkowski was elected secretary of the organization, and the names of Andrew McNicol and Abraham Zegeer, were added to the publicity committee. There is to be a meeting next Monday evening at which all committees will report to the main committee: Warden Matthew J. Geary, Alex McNicol, Edmond Jodoin, Deputy Sheriff John T. Dolan and First Selectman Maxcy Seymour. A tentative plan for the day's celebration, was presented by Mr. Dolan, which will probably be ratified and adopted. The opening feature of the day will be the antique and horrible parade at 8 a. m. The main parade will be at 2 p. m., which promises to be some show. There will be tugs of war, aquatic sports, with swimming, boat races and diving contests at the Ashland Casino park. The jumping stunts and different sprinting races will be held in the streets. A plan is on foot to try and get up a hose laying contest for several fire companies. The idea being to consume the least possible time, in a run over a stated distance to a designated hydrant, there to connect up and get a stream of water through the nozzle. There may be the attractive new feature of block dancing on one of the borough's smooth and little-travelled streets. The celebration to wind up with a grand fireworks display set off at some point, likely Ashland park, selected by the committee.

The Congregational Missionary society will hold its meeting Thursday afternoon in the church parlors.

George Gill has the newest pet yet. Coming over from Versailles the other night he saw the little chap sitting up in the road. It is a baby barred owl and he stands just 4 inches high in his bare feet. He sleeps in his master's coat pocket, eats bits of raw meat and will sit up on one's finger and look about with his big yellow eyes and have a good time gene[illegible]

John Farrell and Alex (Scotty) Powers, employes of the borough, were hurt at Burleson's sand bank in Sylvandale, Tuesday morning. The big truck was being backed into the pit when it slipped off its plank track and caught the two men, jamming them against the big sand chute. Both were taken to Dr. J. H. McLaughlin's. Scotty's injury was a badly crushed foot. Farrell, the worst injured of the two, had one leg crushed and deep cuts in one hand. The degree of seriousness of his injured leg was not fully determined Tuesday night.

John E. Phillips, Mr. and Mrs. G. H. Prior, Fred S. Campbell, Mrs. A. M. Brown and Miss Ariana Cook were in Hartford, Monday, to attend the funeral of Mrs. Charles Edward Prior. The music was by the Temple Male Quartette. The services were conducted by Rev. Frank Haggard and Rev. Richard McLaughlin. Burial was in Cedar Hill cemetery. Mr. Prior plans to close his home on North Beacon street and spend the summer with his son, Charles Edward Prior, Jr., of Bridgeport.

Rev. and Mrs. J. P. Richardson have left their home in Pachaug and moved to Dorchester, Mass., to live with their son. Mr. Richardson has closed a pastorate extending over a period of seven pleasant and successful years, all of which have been filled with pastor's work and church events that leave nothing but the recollection of a well-spent epoch in a long life given to the Christian ministry. Ill health made the closing of his labors imperative and when he and his good wife went away the parting was from friends of the sort worth while. All through his pastorate, Mr. Richardson received the able and efficient support of his accomplished wife.

At the meeting of Jewett City chapter, American Red Cross, executive board, held Monday evening, it was voted to take part in the Fourth of July parade, and the members of the board will make the arrangements. As headquarters asks that the Ninth Annual Roll Call chairman be appointed at this time, Mrs. E. H. Hiscox was appointed to that office. It was voted to accept the quota of twenty-five or more Christmas bags to be made and filled to send to sailors in far-away ports. Different organizations will be asked to fill the bags, as gifts to the men. The expense is very small and a list of the articles is sent by headquarters. Many thankful letters are received each year from the sailors since the Red Cross chapters adopted this custom. The Red Cross Courier is to be sent by the chapter as a gift to each of the church pastors. Two framed notices of a Travelers' Aid official, who is Miss Catherine Barnett, from the Red Cross chapter, are to be placed in public places in town. The district nurse, Miss Alice Brennan, has been invited to meet with the Red Cross executive board and as the local chapter contributes towards her salary, her monthly reports are forwarded to headquarters.

LEBANON

A very pretty home wedding took place Saturday afternoon at 2 o'clock on the lawn at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry M. Gray of Lebanon Center when their daughter Miss Delia L. Gray was united in marriage with Wallace Peckham Blakeslee, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Byron Blakeslee. The marriage ceremony was performed by Rev. Stanley Sellick, pastor of the First Congregational church of Lebanon, the single ring service being used.

The bridal couple stood beneath a floral arch of syringas, snowballs and purple iris and were attended by Miss Vera MacInness of Norwich, as bridesmaid, and Frank Parsons of Waterbury as best man. The wedding march was played by Miss Marjorie Gray of Mansfield, a cousin of the bride.

The bride was charming in a dress of white crepe with long bridal veil draped with white roses. She carried a shower bouquet of white brides roses. The bridesmaid's dress was pink crepe and she carried pink roses. Immediately after the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents. Relatives and friends to the number of seventy-five were present from Springfield, Mass., Providence, R. I., Waterbury, Norwich, Willimantic, New London, Mansfield, Lebanon and other places.

The bride received many very handsome gifts including silver, china, cut glass, linen and fifty dollars in gold.

During the afternoon Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee left by auto for a camping trip to the Adirondacks, and other places. After their return they will occupy newly furnished rooms at the home of the bride's parents in Lebanon. Both Mr. and Mrs. Blakeslee are popular young people with a host of friends who wish them much happiness on their matrimonial venture.

Airplane Pilots Train

Along the Mexican border between Monclova and Piedras Negras bandits have a habit of trying to get across the Rio Grande, and it is necessary for the Mexican government to pilot steam trains by airplane lookout. Elmer Leighton is the airman instructed with the job, and he precedes all trains quite a distance to spot bandits in the chaparral. Recently he took his hopeymoon trip with Miss Clemencia Contreros, his bride, in order to keep up his unbroken record of piloting every train between the two stations.

City Worships in One Church

Jordan is the Biblical name of a community near Miles City, Mont., where the "jazz age" has made little or no inroad. In fact, in this town of 300, more than 250 attend the one community church. The religious interest in the community developed after a series of revival meetings. The community church is a place of worship for members of many different creeds.

Twenty thousand gallons of gasoline a minute, every hour of the 24, is the estimated rate of demand for the United States for 1925, according to DeWitt Foster, director of the American Research Foundation.

DANIELSON

At her home on Winter street Tuesday afternoon 1:30, private funeral services for Mrs. Helen How Leavens Berry, wife of George A. Berry, were conducted by Rev. Leonard Richards of St. Alban's church. Burial was in Westfield cemetery. The bearers were Attorney E. L. Darbie, Postmaster Edwin H. Keach, Walter E. Kies and Alfred L. Reed. A. F. Wood was in charge of the funeral arrangements.

Decorations of the state armory for the Eastern Connecticut Mills association textile products exhibit were completed Tuesday afternoon. The setting for the exhibit is as splendid as for a formal concert and ball. There are decorations of national colors and draperies in profusion and the booths are a delight to the eye.

Today and tomorrow the exhibitors will be engaged in setting up their displays in the space alloted to them. The exhibit will be complete and readiness to open Thursday evening at the appointed hour. The advance notices, however enthusiastic, are hardly up to what one may expect at this exhibit. It is to be the greatest thing of the kind held in this corner of the state and is practically certain to attract thousands of visitors.

An orchestra will play, the exhibits will be worth going miles to see and —here is something of a secret—there will be various souvenirs well worth having. The opening of the exhibit will be marked by special features, about which more will be set forth in this column Thursday morning.

Danielson has the prospect of experiencing a big week. It will entertain a great throng and will be happy in so doing.

More than 100 campers have already enrolled for Camp Woodstock and new registrations are coming in every day. The camp is equipped to accommodate 130 boys at one time. Applications will be given consideration in the order in which they are received at the County Y. M. C. A. office.

The new camp dining hall is nearing completion and the new sleeping lodges will be ready for occupancy for the opening of Camp. Pupils enthusiasts will be glad to learn that two new tennis courts are being provided with excellent playing surfaces. A new water and sewerage system is being installed which will insure the health and sanitation of the Camp. The new athletic field is under construction and will consist of a baseball diamond surrounded by 1-8 mile running track with a hundred yard straight-away on one side. These and many other new and excellent features will greet Woodstockites upon their arrival at Camp this year.

The Putnam Patriot Cup is again being offered as the highest award for all-around efficiency and development in Camp life.

The following Windham County leaders and campers have enrolled to date:

From Dayville, Mervin Chase and Walter Weeks.

From Danielson, Elliot Kelley and Lyman Leon.

From Mechanicsville, R. Daniel Chubbuck.

Those who were present at the second County Quarterly Poultry Meeting pronounced it as an exceptionally instructive meeting.

After looking over the attached program you will agree that the discussions that will take place at the meeting in the Brooklyn Grange Hall, next Friday, June 12th, will be exceedingly valuable to those in attendance.

Mr. Jones' discussion on economical culling of the laying flock and range sanitation are timely. Culling should begin now and it should neither be half done or over done and range sanitation gives results in health of chicks.

The discussion on the essential qualities of day-old chicks is a subject that interests every poultryman. The speakers will make this discussion a very valuable one. This year's day-old chick experience is fresh in the minds of the poultrymen, some have had trouble and others may have trouble next year.

Mr. Nolan of Providence, R. I., is an expert egg candler and his discussion on what is found in candling eggs will be worth coming a long ways to hear. The County Agent will take this opportunity to discuss a possible business program for Windham County poultrymen. The Question Box will allow everyone to ask questions.

Come and swap experiences. Bring along your lunch and your friends who are interested in poultry and make it a valuable and helpful meeting," says County Agent Frank L. Davis.

The program of the Third Quarterly County Poultry Meeting.

Conducted by the Windham County Farmers' Association, Poultry Division; is as follows:

10 A. M.—Economical Culling of the Laying Stock from now on. R. E. Jones, Poultry Specialist, Storrs.

10:45 A. M.—Essential Qualities in Old Chicks. Dr. J. D. Clark, Abington. E. Newton Searles, Pomfret Center. Kingsley L. Brown, Windham.

11:30 A. M.—A Business Program for Poultrymen in this Section. Frank L. Davis, County Agent, Putnam.

12 M.—Box Lunch.

1 P. M.—What is found in candling eggs. Mr. Nolan, egg candler for the Eastern Connecticut Poultry Producers, Inc.

PUTNAM

There is unusual interest here in Putnam over the plea for clemency made before the state board of pardons Monday by Charles Berzuc, serving a sentence of from three to four years in state's prison for violation of the liquor laws.

Berzuc was one of the leaders among the Polish citizens and his conviction followed a sensational two days' jury trial before Judge Newell Jennings of the Superior court.

At the time this sentence was imposed it was the most severe that had been dealt out in the state to a liquor law violator. In addition to the prison sentence there was a fine of $1,500.

Berzuc appeared personally before the pardon board and asked for release on the grounds that the penalty was excessive and that his freedom would permit him to pay the fine. His plea was not granted.

In the last week of December there were eighteen people arrested here nearly all of them Polish charged with violation of the liquor laws, the evidence having been secured by "spotters" employed by the state. At his trial in the city court Berzuc denied all the statements made by the two Hartford detectives and was supported by other witnesses. His attorneys denounced the state's witnesses as liars, drunkards and spies. The large audience applauded these denunciations to such an extent that Judge Geissler threatened to clear the court room. Berzuc was found guilty on two counts and a fine of $500 each and a given sentence of thirty days in jail on each count. He appealed to the superior court and was tried two weeks later, electing that his case be heard by a jury, Attorneys Charles L. Torrey of this city and George Sheehan of Providence defended him. It was brought out that he had been convicted twice before of violating the liquor laws but he denied every material statement made by the state's detectives.

One of the witnesses put on by the state told the state's attorney two days prior to the trial that he had bought liquor of Berzuc. When put on the stand he repudiated the statement and said that when he made it he was not under oath. He was serving a sentence in Brooklyn jail for drunkenness and it was shown by the state that Berzuc visited the prison the day after this man had been in the state's attorney's office and that he, Berzuc, had talked to him.

After being out an hour the jury brought in a verdict of guilty on three counts and Judge Jennings imposed a sentence of not less than one nor more than two years' imprisonment on the first count and a sentence of one year on each of the other counts, which were not run concurrently. He also assessed a fine of $500 on each count.

Mrs. Berzuc the defendant's wife was also charged with selling illegally. She entered a plea of guilty as did the sixteen others charged with similar offenses and a prison sentence was imposed in each case but the executions of it suspended for six months and all placed in charge of a probationary officer.

In the city court Berzuc's sentence was sixty days in jail and a fine of $1,000. In superior court it was from three to four years in state's prison and a fine of $1,500. The severity of it has had a very salutary effect, the selling of "alcohol splits" having materially decreased.

Clerk Edgar M. Warner of the Windham County superior court has sent the following notice to all members of the bar.

COLCHESTER

We recently heard of a Connecticut town where 60 babies died in two years. It is a small town of perhaps 3,000 souls. It is not an unusual town. Its people are intelligent. Its doctors are skillful. Its nurses are careful and capable. But one thing has been lacking. No doctor and no nurse can prevent sickness after you are sick. This town where 50 babies died in two years has laid plans to open a Well Child Conference. Why? A physician or a well Child Conference can prevent sickness and possibly death, by having an opportunity to see children before they are sick. An examination before you are ill may disclose something just beginning. Its far reaching effect is felt not only in a healthier, happier childhood, but also in a stronger, finer manhood. The Well Child Conference in Colchester is held on the second Thursday afternoon of every month, from 2 to 4 p. m. in Grange hall. The Conference this month will be on June 11th.

Mr. and Mrs. George Miller of Hartford, were calling on friends in town Monday.

Palace Theater

Enthusiasm is being manifested in each and every performance of the Augustin Stock Company in the world's greatest mystery play, The Cat and the Canary, which they are presenting all this current week at the Palace theater. Interest in this remarkable play is already at a highpoint from the way that audiences are acclaiming it. The Cat and the Canary has every quality that appeals to playgoers,— abundant comedy, loads of action, a pretty love story and it furnishes a jolly evening of starts, thrills, and clammy creeps set off by laughter. The Cat and Canary is superbly presented and it stands as the best play ever offered in this city at popular prices. The play is a visual treat in all respects. It is essentially a laugh medium, and still there are many of those tense moments that make you lean forward in your seats; these little thrills that send a shiver down your spinal column; bound together they furnish one of the most unusual and pleasing entertainments that anyone could wish to see. All the members are giving excellent performances in their various roles and it is interpretations of this sort that are winning hundreds of friends daily for the members of the Augustin Stock Company. There is a popular matinee today at 2:30 with seats selling for 25c. The nights performances start at 8:10 P. M. and you are advised to secure your seats early. Reservations can be secure by calling 1645.

Broadway Theater

Starting tomorrow there will be five fine acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville at the Broadway theater.

Heading the vaudeville program is a miniature singing and dancing revue of real delight. It is called Juvenile Frolics of 1925, featuring Sammy Krevoff, champion pirouettist of the world, with Dorothy Hirshkind, Bernice Hirsh, Maxine Shequitz and Minerva Baskiva.

Welcome Home, a James Cruze-Paramount production which comes to the Broadway theater for a run of three days on Thursday, is a page from home life as everybody knows it, with a heart-tugging appeal that has seldom, if ever, been equalled on the screen. It is a homely story of a likeable old man— a widower—who goes to the city to live with his married son.

Featured in the leading roles of the production are Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Luke Cosgrave. The picture was adapted for the screen by Walter Woods and F. McGrew Willis from a stage play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman.

Cosgrave, the old gent in Hollywood, also directed by Cruze, makes a regular pest of himself in Welcome Home. His arrival at his children's home in the city is the signal for a general upset. He does not realize that his mode of life is entirely different from theirs and he plays havoc with all the carefully laid plans of the younger people.

Laughs are in order whenever Welcome Home is on view.

There's a cast of well known names appearing in support of the principals.

THE NORSE CENTENNIAL

Conspicuous in the northwest are those of Scandinavian descent. It was a century ago that the first of the immigrants who came to this country went west and they have in the meantime grown up with and materially aided in the development of that part of the country. There are today well over a million of such sturdy, faithful and dependable people in this country and it was to address the centennial arranged for the observance of the Norse centennial that President Coolidge went to Minnesota.

The chief executive paid deserved tribute to the contributions which the Norwegians have made to this country, referring to the fact that they were part of the many who had come here for the purpose of getting such benefits as they could and at the same time giving what was within their power, he made the most of the opportunity to set worth the influence they could wield for national strength and good citizenship.

As an example to others through what has been done here, the president asked such significant questions as, "Powerful to help this people or a high ideal in time of supreme trial, why may we not hope that the same influence will at length reach men and women wherever they are found on earth? If fraternity and cooperation are possible on the scale of this continent among people so widely diverse, why not on a scale of a world?"

From the fact that the Scandinavians have continued to come here and remain here it is evident that they have followed it. They have done much for the land of their adoption even as they have obtained large advantages. The benefit has thus been mutual and as it should be.

This centennial was appropriately held in the northwest to which the Norse immigrants went a long time ago and where they have made vast contributions to the agricultural development.

THE GITLOW CASE

By its decision in the Gitlow case the United States supreme court makes it plain that free speech is not being abridged, but that it is possible to so abuse that right as to impose upon government the duty of protecting itself.

In the state of New York there was a law adopted which made it possible to prosecute Benjamin Gitlow for inciting to riot and encouraging violence against government. Gitlow was tried and convicted and it is upon an appeal from such action that the matter was carried to the highest court in the land which now upholds the New York state law.

Gitlow's was only one of many radical and menacing outbursts. He represents a type that is working to undermine government by violence, and even though two members of the supreme court hold that his utterances did not involve "immediate danger" it is to be realized that unless the accumulative result of such activity stopped its effects are certain to grow more rapidly, while the task of enforcement and suppression is certainly more easily accomplished before the situation gets to the point of being immediately dangerous.

The supreme court has said that a state has the right to protect itself against overthrow by violence. It is within the right of those who seek changes in government to accomplish it through the prescribed and legitimate channels. It is possible to vent opinions, to conduct political activities and to urge changes, but when it comes to preaching and urging the use of arms and violence in bringing about political changes it goes beyond the right of free speech. That represents an abuse that cannot be tolerated. There may be those who would have free speech stretched to the point of covering such activities. That is a distorted view of Americanism and American rights. It is a dangerous view. The supreme court has done no more than it was expected that it would in upholding the New York state law, but it is well that it has been set forth for future guidance.

SEARCHING FOR AMUNDSEN

With the starting of the Norwegian relief vessel which goes in search of Amundsen steps are being taken to end the anxiety that surrounds the location and welfare of Amundsen and his party.

This vessel will follow insofar as it is possible the course that Amundsen and party were expected to take. It will skirt the edge of the ice field and the planes which will be carried will be used for making excursions over the ice in an endeavor to get some trace of the missing men.

Whether it will be successful no one can say. It must be regarded in much the same light that Secretary Wilbur Cross upon the suggestion of sending one of the dirigibles into the arctic regions to search for the explorers. He considers such an effort as no more than a wild goose chase, and certainly have to admire many details for the [illegible] expedition to work of prevails that something has happened to the aviator explorers. This persists despite the claims of other explorers that they are probably safe and making their way to the nearest inhabited point and that it may be a year before they can be heard from. The helplessness of the situation cannot fail to appeal and yet there is an unwillingness to sit by and do nothing. It is always anticipated under such circumstances that rescuers might find them after a short search, and certainly any effort that might be made would be justifiable in case aid could be extended to those who may have been injured and are in need of other assistance than they can command. The hope will be general, even as it was when Amundsen set out, that success will attend the undertaking.

According to the plans of this rescue party there will be a large part of the arctic that cannot be visited but there will be satisfaction of knowing, even if they are not located, that an effort was made and that there is reasonable certainty that they were not to be found within the limits to which the search is restricted.

DAWES' SENATORIAL REFORM

As the result of a survey that has been made among the senators it is declared that Vice President Dawes will lack a sufficient number of members in the upper house of congress to bring about the change in the rules which he has advocated. This prompts some to feel that this will be a severe blow to the vice president.

There is no doubt but what he would be much pleased if the senate was willing to declare for a change of procedure, but to say that he is or will be disappointed over the poll that has been taken is assuming a good deal. The vice president has not minimized the fight that he entered. He did not urge the changes in rules to suit his whim and he did not point the advisability of it out to the senate because he thought they would jump for it like a hungry fish for the bait. He fully understood the senate's opposition to such a move but he also understood the demand for it which exists throughout the country and it was because of that that he decided to carry the matter to the country.

He hasn't been pleading with senators. He has been setting forth the situation under which they do business to their constituents. He hasn't expected that a matter of three months would bring the senate to its senses. He is prepared for a long drill, but he hasn't wavered and it isn't part of his makeup to become discouraged, not at least so early. It is through a long steady pull and the appeal to the people who elect the senators that he expects to gain results. Thus it might be much better if there was a sounding of the public instead of a sounding of the senators as to whether the Dawes senatorial reform is going to eventually go through.

WATCHING CHINA

Just what the real situation is in China at the present time is a bit hard to understand. There are conflicting reports and they come from a country where more or less uncertainty can be expected much of the time.

It is certain that there are at least three seats of trouble at present and it is well understood what the international situation is in regard to China. If there could be a great civil war started it would provide the opening for those who look upon that country with covetous eyes.

Whenever trouble in China has been threatened suspicion has for a long time been directed toward Japan. China has been both warm and cool toward its island neighbor, but just now there are influences which bring China and the Moscow government rather close. There have been treaties arranged between the soviet government and China and also between the soviet government and Japan.

Under existing conditions with trouble underway in several places in China it is possible for the imagination to run wild. What is actually threatened and what might develop can be recognized as being far apart. It is even open to inference that Japan and Russia might come to grips over China. This would hardly be expected between nations which had just entered into treaty relations but there is always much uncertainty regarding the situation in the far east.

It is to be sincerely hoped for the good of China and the peace of the world that the situation in China can be brought under adjustment without any great difficulties that will involve outside nations. Till it is that part of the globe is bound to get the close attention of the rest of the countries.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The thermometer is ready and willing to go in either direction.

Have you and your neighbors been having much to say in regard to the weather.

Soldiers of fortune must now be a bit uncertain whether to head for China or Morocco.

The man on the corner says: Some are making an awful struggle trying to be bathing beauties.

The hot wave doesn't offer any discouragement to those who do business at the seashore resorts.

Can it be said of Amundsen, "Leave him alone and he will come home and bring the pole behind him?"

Many will say Amen to the preference expressed by the motor vehicle registrar of Massachusetts for "silence and less speed to blast and mad dash."

Now there is a chance to talk about what has been in the way of hot weather. It will be some time before the first week in June is forgotten.

The coast guard has captured the fastest rum boat which has been sought for years. If it is put up at auction how long will it be before it is back at the old game again?

When a horse gets down there are times when it is no easy task to get him up but when the dirigibles get up there are days when it takes time and money to get them down.

Instead of attending a score or so commencements to get as many degrees President Coolidge has elected to stay at Washington and tend to business. Thus to country comes first.

THE EXCUSE HABIT

"You see, it's this way," began the Chicago citizen who had just received a cordial invitation to come out to Languishing Heights to dinner and spend the night. "I—"

"Try no further," interrupted the genial man who had extended the invitation. "It's a shame to waste your breath and energy finishing when I can do it so much better for you, without half trying. I have heard it so many times.

"I have discovered all sorts of curious things about human beings since I moved out to the Heights and one is that most of 'em are absolutely set against changing their habits and customs, just as set as the Medes and Persians were! When a man has become accustomed to locking up his desk at 5 o'clock and catching a train going south it throws horrible consternation into him to think of catching one going west, as he would have to do if he came to visit me.

"As I told Mallen, all he had to do was to walk the same distance to the train to my place and, when he reached it, sit down exactly as he sat down in a train headed southward, but somehow he couldn't see it.

"I forget exactly what excuse he made but he began just the same as you did. They all do.

"One man once confessed to me that every time he went to visit in the suburbs and came dashing down in the early morn his pretty hostess invariably met him and said coyly, 'Oh, isn't it a joke on me, but what do you think! The card club lasted so long yesterday that I totally forgot to get any coffee and so there isn't any, but you can drink a cup of tea just as well, can't you! And it is too bad there isn't a scrap of bread for toast except Jim's health bread—but it's really awfully good for one and next time I'll certainly remember to have supplies in!' So we've made a point of having plenty of coffee always on hand and my wife makes bully breakfast muffins and rolls.

"And we don't have little Johnny stand up after dinner and recite Casablanca on the burning deck for our guests, either, or show his fine school marks and tell what the teacher said about him.

"And it's too early to say, 'Oh, you must come out and see the garden, Mr. Umptydink.' You wouldn't have to smile painfully, murmur that you are crazy to view it and spend the next hour slapping mosquitoes and looking at what ought to be radishes and cabbages and things but never are because of bugs, blight and acts of providence. We have not the slightest intention of saying brightly after dinner that now you are going to have a treat—we are going to take you to see the play the high school seniors are giving for the benefit of the something fund with an amateur orchestra and everything.

"I expect your old college chum is going to be in town Wednesday evening making it manifestly impossible for you to come. Or else you expect your great aunt's husband's second cousin to pass away about that time and want to be where you can be reached easily. Or maybe you are taking invoice or think your wife has promised you will play cards with the people across the hall—"

"What I was trying to say," broke in desperately the Chicago man who had been cordially invited, "was that we did have an engagement but I am sure we can break it and well be tickled to death to come!"

"Fine!" said the genial host. "Only I hope nothing that I have said has influenced your decision, you know! I want folks to feel perfectly free to do just as they choose!"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

The Oregon Law

Mr. Editor:

When a deed is done for freedom,
Through the earth's broad aching breast
Runs a thrill of joy prophetic,
Trembling on from east to west."

I quote these lines as expressive of the truth about all major human influences as well as about freedom. One of the noblest examples of the American principle of freedom and liberty—an incident which places the American Catholics in a position to feel grateful to the guardians of the constitution—is the action of the United States supreme court in defeating the attempt of an organized bunch to legislate the parochial schools out of existence in the state of Oregon. It is more than evident that the Oregon law was inspired by the Klan.

Here is what one of the great metropolitan journals has to say—"No decision of the United States supreme court in many a day has been of such importance as that which holds the Oregon compulsory public school law invalid. It is an assertion on behalf of the fundamental law of the land, not merely of freedom of education but in the last analysis of freedom of thought, freedom of religion, freedom of conscience. The Oregon law was a product of Ku Klux bigotry and intolerance. It was aimed especially at the Roman Catholic schools and to reach them it had to include the suppression of all religious denominational schools and of all schools of whatever character. * * * It set up for the state an exclusive monopoly in education of all children at the most impressionable age. It took from the parents and gave over to the state the better part of the children's time in the formative years and left not a chance for parents to express their wishes in the matter."

This organization (the K. K. K.) boasting all the time of its Americanism will certainly derive a lesson by perusing the statement delivered by Justice McReynolds and will perhaps to a certain extent tend to make them mind their own business in what concerns peoples' religious beliefs.

ARTHUR OUIMET

Taftville, June 9, 1925.

A Word or Two on the Tennessee Question

Mr. Editor: As we understand it, the cause to be tried in the courts of Tennessee is not whether the theory named evolution is true or false, or whether a citizen is at liberty to think it is or is not.

The question is whether, when the state debars from the curriculum of its schools, the teaching of a certain tenet, a tutor employed and paid by the state is justified in ignoring its authority, because, forsooth, it disagrees with his personal opinion.

Evolution, as a workable hypothesis of the universal existence of things as we behold them, does not, should not, belong in the discussion of the Tennessean court at all; nor can the truth of that theory be affected by any opinion or verdict of that court or state.

Indeed, the word "truth" as used in the scriptures is not a definition of things material and temporal, but of things spiritual and emotional, soul conceptions, and not those relating to plants and animals, and the material creation in general. The word truth as Jesus used it when he witnessed a good confession before Pontius Pilate, saying that he came to bear witness to the truth, and Pilate replied "What is truth?" dismissed the court, and mingled with the throng.

It is plain that Pilate missed the intent of the Saviour's use of the word truth, as many do even today. The freedom which this truth gives to us is beautifully explained by the Apostle, as of Jesus "Blotting out the handwriting of ordinances that was against use, which was contrary to us, nailing it to his cross; and having spoiled principalities and powers he made a show of them openly, triumphing over them."

However obscure may be this definition of truth, still we are sure enough that evolution is yet in the realm of supposition and speculation. When it has reached the point of verification, it will then be time enough for its advocates to insist on its adoption by others beside themselves. The onus probandi rests with those introducing the novelty. While opinions in regard to the existence of the material world do not affect our spiritual aptitudes, we may properly await the material proofs to end the speculations. But for the state, any state, to inculcate as truth what is merely speculative, is surely immature ethics and there is yet much real scientific truth to be learned that can be put into the practical life of students.

JOHN TROLAND

Norwich, Conn., June 9, 1925.

A Correction.

Mr. Editor: In regards to the article printed in The Bulletin in regard to the parade of May 30th, I beg to state it misrepresented the colors I was bearing, also the uniform, and I would ask you to rectify same. It stated I was a Canadian soldier, while I am a French soldier (Blue Devil), belonging to the 1915 class of mobilization, also bearer of the formagere of the Croix de Guerre with palm. And the colors I carried were the genuine French colors instead of Canadian.

Owing to my being the only Blue Devil having returned to the United States in the neighboring towns for miles around it is very easy for anyone to misrepresent the uniform and colors, therefore I wish to have same corrected by The Bulletin.

HORACE GARNIER.

Wauregan, June 8, 1925.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

Mrs. W. A. Felton, of Carteraville, Ga., long known at the "grand old woman of Georgia," today reaches the age of fourscore and ten. Three years ago Mrs. Felton became a national figure when she was appointed to the United States senate, being the first of her sex to attain that distinction. The appointment came from the hands of Governor Hardwick and was for the unexpired term of Senator Thomas E. Watson, deceased. Mrs. Felton journeyed to Washington, took the oath of office and made a brief address amid the applause of senators and spectators, closing her senatorial career after an actual service of 22 hours and 25 minutes. Mrs. Felton is a native of Georgia and has been active in politics in that state for nearly half a century. Despite her ninety years she continues to take a keen interest in business and in public affairs.

Put a Lid on the Auto.

Three year old Gerald has solved the auto accident problem. He was holding his two months old sister while his mother drove the car. The sun shone in his face and, child like, raising his hand to protect his eyes, baby began to slip from his lap. His mother grabbed for the baby and the auto ran into the ditch and upset. The children went through the windshield. The baby landed safely but Gerald was badly cut by broken glass. A week later as they were about to go in the auto again Gerald said: "Mamma, can't we put a lid on this auto?"

Can Only Whittle.

The young man from the city was doing his best to show interest in the many worries of his host on the farm. He was there for a short vacation and thought he might cheer the farmer by sympathizing with him in his annual gamble against unfavorable conditions for raising crops and at the same time visualize better times ahead. He had asked about the oats and learned that the season was too dry. He learned that corn was way behind and other crops were suffering from the lack of rain.

Finding that his conversation was piling more gloom on the lot of the farmer, the young man from the city changed the subject to the economical aspects of agriculture, learning first that farmers were too independent of nature to make a success of co-operative farming.

"What is it then that the farmer now can make the most money doing?" asked the young man.

"Whittling," was the solemn response.

From Small Beginnings

Hans Holst the Great Danish Poet

Let me write the songs of a nation, and I care not who makes its laws," said a wise man many years ago; for he recognized the power of song in national life. The writing of a single song has made reputation in the past and it will do so in the future. The writers of Home, Sweet Home, The Old Oaken Bucket and similar poems would have been forgotten had it not been for one great song from each author. The writer of any great song immortalizes himself, but the writer of a patriotic song achieves especial rank among the immortals. For that reason Hans Holst, the Dane, holds somewhat the position that Francis Scott Key holds in the United States.

He grew up among the poorest of the poor, but under the guardianship of a devoted mother, he learned to read and to write, and from his earliest days showed marked interest in books. He supported himself as well as he could, and read and practised writing. Then there came a day in 1828 when the news flew about the streets of Copenhagen: "The King is dead! Frederick, the good King, is no more!" Sadness fell over the city and every one spoke of the vanity of human wishes, of the certainty of death. All this strongly moved Hans Holst, the aspiring young poet, and he sat down and wrote feverishly and with deep emotion a poem on the death of the King. It struck the popular fancy, and leaped its writer into fame. From then on Hans Holst was a noted poet. Ten years later he put forward a collection of poems of ringing patriotism, and gained recognition as the leading Danish poet.

The rest of his life, until his death at 82, he devoted to literary work, writing for the Royal theater, revising old plays, supervising the production of new plays, translating Shakespeare into Danish, writing theatrical sketches, writing long stories and novels, and in general devoting himself heart and soul to literature. One day in his old age Hans Holst was talking with a group of young men who aspired some day to hold as high a place in popular affection as did the gray old poet who had written so many patriotic poems. One of the young men asked Holst "What was it, what one thing, that did most to help you?" Hans Holst looked at the younger man and said slowly, "I loved my country—and therefore my country loved me."

Mrs. Stephen A. Clark.

(Contributed)

On the afternoon of June 4th, Sarah Baker, beloved wife of Stephen Albert Clark, passed peacefully away at her home in Central Village, to that land where Sabbaths will have no end.

She was surrounded by those near and dear to her, who did all in their power to minister to her comfort till the last. During the weeks of ill health, her suffering was borne with the same rare patience and Christian courage which had marked her whole life.

She was born in Plainfield, seventy-one years ago, the daughter of the late Balama and Sybil Baker, of Canterbury.

Early in life she became a member of the Baptist church in Packer, which she loved and esteemed too highly ever to withdraw her membership.

Forty-nine years ago she was united in marriage with Stephen Albert Clark, of Packerville, nearly all of their married life being spent in Central Village. Always devoted to her family, neighbors and friends, ever ready and willing to lend a helping hand to others, she will be missed from the community and the home circle, where she ever proved a loyal wife and mother.

She leaves to mourn her loss beside her husband, one son, Howard A. Clark, of Norwich; also three sisters and two brothers, Mrs. Olive McDonald, of Plainfield; Mrs. Fannie Rood, of Moosup; Miss Alice Baker, of Canterbury; Levi Baker, of Central Village, and Edward Baker, of Canterbury; also several nieces and nephews. Their comforting thought should be that she has only passed on to the inner mysteries and bright mansions of heaven and heard the Master's "Well Done."

The funeral was held in the Central Village Congregational church Saturday, June 6th, at 1 in the afternoon, with many relatives and friends attending. Rev. C. S. Nightingale, pastor of the Baptist church of Moosup, officiated and spoke very touchingly. Mrs. Charles Bragg and Mrs. Whitehead sang two selections, "O Love That Will Not Let Me Go," and "Abide With Me." There were many beautiful floral forms, showing the high esteem in which she was held.

The body was conveyed to Evergreen cemetery, Central Village, where the committal service was read by Rev. Mr. Nightingale, four nephews of the deceased acting as bearers, William Clark, of Plainfield; Louis De Grenier, of Norwich, and Charles and George Parker, of Brooklyn, Conn.

Miss Emily F. Denison

In the death of Miss Emily Frances Denison, which occurred Monday morning at the Home Memorial hospital, New London following a lingering illness, Mystic loses one of its most highly regarded residents.

Miss Denison was born in the Denison homestead in Broadway, Jan. 3, 1859, being one of the twin daughters born to Isaac W. and Eunice Burrows Denison. Her twin sister, Eliza F. Denison, died at the age of 25 years, which was a loss from which Miss Denison never fully recovered, the ties of affection which existed between the sisters being unusually strong.

On the maternal side, Miss Denison was a direct descendant of Robert Burrows, one of the first and most prominent settlers of the town of Groton, and on the paternal side she was a direct descendant of Capt. George Denison and his wife, Lady Ann Bordodell. Probably no one in the village was as familiar with family history as Miss Denison. She had a wonderful memory and her knowledge of local traditions was—exceptional, while her fund of interesting genealogical lore was inexhaustible and a great delight to all who knew her. Her skill as a genealogist had extended beyond the confines of her home town and it was a great pleasure to her to assist in every possible way those who sought to trace their ancestry.

Miss Denison was a member of the Union Baptist church, having united with the church in March, 1877. On April 26, 1896, she became a member of the Fanny Ledyard chapter, Daughters of the American Revolution, and was an active and influential member, being interested in all that pertained to its welfare, having held the office of registrar at the time of her death. She was also a member of the Monday club a literary organization, organized many years ago by her sister, the late Miss Sarah Denison.

Miss Denison had a justifiable pride in, and a strong love for her family history and during the past year, even when handicapped by ill health, she organized the Denison Burying Ground association and raised a fund of money, the interest on which will be sufficient to make permanent the care of the Denison Burying ground.

One of Miss Denison's strongest characteristics was her love of all that was beautiful, being a great lover of flowers and birds and all the glories of nature. She was of gracious and dignified mien and charming personality, and a most delightful hostess, while her keen sense of humor and her ability to paint vivid word pictures with consummate skill made her a raconteur of rare ability. She possessed to a remarkable degree the gift of making friends and was of a loyal and thoughtful temperament, ever ready to do a kindness whenever opportunity offered.

She is survived by two sisters, Miss Lavinia Denison, with whom she resided in the Denison homestead on Broadway, and Mrs. Hannah B. D. Meservey of East Bridgewater, Mass., and a brother, Frederic Denison, of Mystic, as well as several nieces and nephews.

Usher at Wedding

Bruce F. Rogers of this city was an usher, Saturday afternoon at the wedding of Miss Sonja Schollin-Borg and Frank S. Hunt of Peabody, Mass., which took place at the bride's home in East Chelmsford, Mass.

The cememony was performed by Rev. P. E. Nordgren, pastor of the Lutheran Church in Lowell, and took place on the lawn, where the bridal party stood beneath an arbor formed of rose-colored peonies, larkspur and greenery, reached by an aisle bordered by the same flowers, peonies and larkspur.

Returned From Hartford.

Miss Margaret Mahoney returned Monday evening to her home on Scotland road following a visit of a few days at the home of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Lucy of Asylum avenue, Hartford, formerly of Norwich.

CITY MEETING VOTES APPROPRIATIONS WHICH MAKE CITY TAX 24 MILLS

After voting all the regular appropriations recommended by the finance committee of the court of common council last month, the annual city meeting Tuesday evening in the town hall turned around and voted down salary increases for the firemen and policemen, the $18,500 item for the macadamising of Prospect street, the $15,000 item for a new fire station on the West Side, the $1,500 item for the improvement of Rockwell street and indefinitely postponed action on the $4,700 item for the macadamising of Slater avenue.

The regular appropriations voted called for a city tax of 20 3-4 mills and the "extras" which were voted added 3 1-4 mills more, which makes a city tax of 24 mills, which is 1 1-4 mills more than last year's tax rate.

H. H. Gallup strongly opposed paying the tax collector compensation at the rate of 1 per cent of the tax collected, urging that the rate be set at 3-4 of 1 per cent. Mr. Gallup's move to cut the tax collector's salary was defeated by an aye and nay vote and by a vote of 226 to 176 the meeting fixed the collector's salary at 1 per cent; the same as last year.

Mayor Waters Makes Request

Mayor Milo R. Waters called the meeting to order at 8 o'clock. After City Clerk Weston C. Pullen had read the call for the meeting, May Waters made a request that speakers "stick to the question" and "avoid personalities" and also requested that no one make a motion to indefinitely postpone until the matter before the meeting had had a chance for a fair discussion.

Regular Estimates Voted

The regular estimates, as recommended by the finance committee of the court of common council last month, for the running expense of the city for the fiscal year ending May 15, 1926, were then taken up item by item. ### Extras Are Voted

The so called "extras" were then taken up for action. They included the proposed salary increases for the firemen and policemen, Main and Union street and other street improvements, several appropriations for sewers and the $15,000 appropriation for a new fire station on the West Side. Six of the sixteen "extras" went down to defeat, the negative vote being overwhelming in each case. The "extras" as voted are as follows:

|---|---|
| Completion of North St. and Pratt St. sewer | $ 3,500.00 |
| Concrete Main Street from Market Street to Bridge off Washington Square | 13,500.00 |
| Union St. macadam | 12,500.00 |
| Spring Street macadam High street to Mechanic St. | 4,500.00 |
| Sewer in Orchard St. 200 feet | 1,400.00 |
| Sewer from end of Geer Avenue Sewer in Geer Ave. to Summit St. to Carpenter St. | 2,500.00 |
| Sewer in Mowry Ave., Roosevelt Ave. to No. 45 Mowry Ave. | 1,800.00 |
| Sewer in Oakridge St. | 2,500.00 |
| Drain in Carroll Ave. | 2,000.00 |
| Concrete pavement between Preston Bridge and bridge over N. Y., N. H. & H. R. R. | 900.00 |

The first "extra" taken up was the $3,500 item for the completion of the North street and Pratt street sewer. Alderman Henry Gebrath moved that the appropriation be voted. He stated to the meeting that the appropriation ought to go through as the sewer ought to be completed. It went through without an opposing vote.

Mayor Waters then brought before the meeting "extra" number 2, an appropriation of $6,000 to provide for an increase in pay for the members of the Norwich police force. After the item had been read and a motion to accept had been made there was a moment of silence as the mayor asked the usual question, if anyone wished to be heard on the matter. No one expressed a desire to speak either for or against the proposed police raise and when the mayor put the question the appropriation was voted down by an overwhelming majority. The $7,500 item to provide for an increase in pay for the members of the fire department met the same fate and the motion to adopt the appropriation was declared lost.

Main and Prospect Streets

A question arose on the size of the $18,500 appropriation for the Main street hill improvement as compared with the $18,500 appropriation asked for Prospect street, and which came up later in the meeting. Mr. Keeley temporarily held up action on the matter, as he inquired as to the measurements of Main street hill as compared with the measurements of Prospect street.

City Engineer Shepard B. Palmer, in answering the question, said it was a question between concrete on Main street and macadam on Prospect street. One costs 55 cents a square foot and the other $2.50 a square yard. The Main street improvement is more expensive.

H. H. Gallup said he was in favor of good roads but he thought this street might be handled as some other streets in the city have been handled. He expressed the opinion that asphalt spread over the cobblestones, as was done on lower Broadway would do, and would save ripping up the street and concreting it, and would cost less.

Mayor Waters said he had taken this matter up with the same people who did the work on lower Broadway and that they had informed him that asphalt if laid over cobblestone streets with trolley tracks running through them would crumble next to the tracks.

The appropriation of $18,500, which will provide for the concreting of Main street from Market street to the bridge just the other side of Washington square then went through without further opposition, there being but one lone "no."

Union Street Macadam.

"Extra" No. 5, an item of $12,500 to provide for the macadamizing of Union street was next on the list.

"In advocating the improvement of Union street, I feel it will be of great benefit to the city and its inhabitants," said James P. Sheridan. He said he was very much interested in the securing of parking spaces for machines and in the routing of machines through the city streets. Cars leaving Franklin square, going towards Chelsea Parade and return use Broadway, said Mr. Sheridan. He called attention to the thousands of machines that go up and down Broadway and spoke of the danger to the children attending the Broadway school, which is situated on Broadway hill. Mr. Sheridan said it is a dangerous hill to drive on, owing to the crown that is in the street. It was built, not for automobiles, but for horses and wagons. On a wet day a man driving down Broadway sets his brakes and suddenly finds himself on someone's property. Union street is just as wide as Broadway, at its widest point, it is less steep and is an ideal street for down travel, leaving the up travel for Broadway hill. The time is coming when Broadway will be "one way." I see the need for this improvement, so don't let us pass up this street tonight. It is the ideal parallel road for a route to the city from the north.

The appropriation was unanimously voted.

Prospect Street Defeated.

The meeting then turned its attention to the next "extra," an appropriation of $18,500 for a macadam road on Prospect street from Central avenue to Sixth street.

First Selectman William S. Murray asked what the difference in cost would be between a tarvia bound and a water bound improvement on that street.

City Engineer Palmer said that by using a water bound highway the cost could be cut down about $3,500.

Mr. Murray expressed the opinion that a water bound road would serve on that part of Prospect street and offered an amendment to the original motion making the appropriation $15,000 to provide for a water bound road. Mr. Murray's amendment cut down the appropriation $3,500.

John E. Fanning said he was born on Prospect street and was familiar with the street. I think the street is in fine condition, he said. I think this is one occasion where we can vote this down entirely. It is not a necessity, but a luxury.

The amendment was then put to vote by the mayor and was declared lost.

For Spring Street Macadam.

The meeting then voted without any opposition a $4,500 item for the macadamizing of Spring street from High street to Mechanic street and went on to the consideration of a $1,400 appropriation for a 200-foot sewer in Orchard street.

Sewers Are Voted.

Mayor Waters, after reading the item, stated that there was a petition for and one against this appropriation. Four property owners had petitioned against the sewer.

H. H. Gallup said he is always in favor of sewers where they are needed. He said there was some opposition to the sewer but that he understood that those against the sewer have no houses on the street, only lots. Those who have houses there have to use cesspools. He expressed the hope that the sewer appropriation would be voted.

Alderman Gebrath said that the sewer would take care of some drainage water and that it would be a benefit not only to the residents but to the city at large.

Charles V. James spoke in favor of the appropriation. He said that for the benefit of the people who live there and have to use cesspools the appropriation should go through. It was then voted without opposition.

"Extra" No. 9 was an appropriation of $2,500 for a sewer from the end of Geer avenue sewer in Geer avenue to Summit street and in Summit street to Carpenter street.

John Woodmansee said he hoped the appropriation would go through. The property holders are willing to pay the assessments, he said, and the sewer is needed. The appropriation went through without opposition.

Items 10, 11, 12 and 13 went through in quick order, being voted one after the other without opposition, there being no discussion on any of the four appropriations. They call for $1,800 for a sewer in Mowry avenue, a sewer in Oakridge street, appropriation $2,500; $2,000 for a drain in Carroll avenue and $900 for a concrete pavement between the Preston bridge on Main street and the bridge over the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, this being but a small strip of highway.

Indefinitely Postponed.

An item of $4,700 for a macadam road on Slater avenue was indefinitely postponed. When this item was read by the mayor and a motion made to pass the appropriation, H. H. Gallup said it is nice to have macadam roads but that he thought repairs are all that are needed on Slater avenue at the present time. The money cost must be considered, he said. Mr. Gallup then moved to indefinitely postpone and the motion to postpone was adopted.

The proposed improvement on Rockwell street at a cost of $1,500 came up next. After the vote on the appropriation had been taken and the motion to adopt declared lost, Charles V. James, who evidently was planning to speak in favor of the appropriation, complained that the question had been put before there was time for discussion. He wanted to move for a reconsideration of the motion.

"Did you vote against it?" asked Mayor Waters.

"I did not," said Mr. James.

"A motion to reconsider will have to come from some one who voted against it," Mayor Waters informed Mr. James.

Mr. James said he felt that he ought to have a chance to speak on the appropriation, but he was ruled out of order by the mayor.

West Side Fire Station.

The final "extra" was the $15,000 appropriation for a new fire station on the West side. It went down to defeat by an overwhelming majority. After the item had been read off by the mayor a resolution was introduced authorizing the appropriation.

C. E. Carpenter was the only person who spoke in favor of it. He said that instead of spending money to repair the old station a new station should be located further up than the present one. He spoke of Chief Stanton visiting his factory and asking him if he was well insured. Mr. Carpenter said he would like to see the appropriation go through.

When the question was put there was a scattering half dozen votes for, quickly followed by a thunderous outburst of "noes," the appropriation being snowed under.

The following resolutions were then introduced by Corporation Counsel William H. Shields, Jr., and voted in quick order:

That the court of common council of the City of Norwich be and it is hereby authorized to make the appropriations requisite to pay the expenses of the city for the present fiscal year of the city ending May 15, 1926, in accordance with the estimates as approved at this meeting.

That the list of abatements of taxes made by the mayor and aldermen on the list of 1921 are hereby approved.

Resolutions were also passed authorizing the borrowing by the city of $100,000 for the use of the gas and electric department for expansion and extension of the business, distribution system and plant, and also for the city to borrow $225,000 to meet appropriations and expenses before the tax can be collected.

The city tax of 24 mills was laid, payable Oct. 10, 1925.

Tax Collector's Compensation.

When the resolution fixing the compensation of the tax collector at one per cent. of the tax collected by him, was introduced by Corporation Counsel Shields a motion was made that the clerk cast one ballot in favor.

H. H. Gallup offered an amendment cutting down the compensation to be paid the collector to three-quarters of one per cent., this being a 25 per cent. reduction. "I would be the last one to take away from any man a good, fair, liberal compensation," said Mr. Gallup. "The tax collector of Norwich is getting a very large return on the taxes collected. I believe 3-4 of 1 per cent. would give him a very liberal compensation. This would give him about three times what the tax collector in New London gets."

John J. Corkery said he was opposed to reducing the compensation of any man. "I don't think we are paying our city officials too much money." (Laughter). Mr. Corkery said there was no reason to compare the compensation of the local collector with that paid in any other city. He called attention to the fact that the collector has to pay for his clerical help, postage and has other expenses. "It isn't fair," said Mr. Corkery. "I hope the amendment will not prevail."

Mr. Woodmansee said: "There is no argument about this and hasn't been for years." He said there are lots of men that would be willing to do the work for half the compensation and do it just as well."

Mr. Gallup again spoke briefly in support of his amendment. He said he thought three-quarters of one per cent. would provide a liberal compensation.

When the vote was taken the amendment was declared lost. The vote on the original resolution was then called for. As the "ayes" and "nays" seemed to be about evenly divided there was some question as to the result so the mayor called for the vote again. The "noes" evidently wished to create the impression that they were in the majority for they yelled as loud as possible, and then questioned the mayor's decision when the mayor stated that the resolution had been adopted, fixing the compensation at one per cent.

Mayor Waters announced that if the vote was doubted he would ask that a vote be taken by passing from left to right in front of the desk. Cornelius J. Downes was called to the desk to assist the city clerk in keeping track of the vote and the voting was immediately started.

Mayor Waters read the result as follows:

Total votes cast—402.

For the resolution—226.

Against the resolution—176.

The resolution was declared adopted after which the meeting adjourned, having been in session an hour and a quarter.

EMIL M. FOX SELLS FRANKLIN ST. PROPERTY

Announcement was made Tuesday that Emil M. Fox, through the agency of James L. Case, has disposed of his property, two buildings, at No. 129 and No. 131, and No. 133 and No. 135 Franklin street to Jacob Slosberg.

The property comprises the old building known as Hodges stable and the building next door occupied by tenements and stores. The entire property has a frontage of 95 feet on Franklin street and runs back 240 feet to the City Cemetery. Mr. Fox purchased the property in 1913.

The new owner is planning to have the tenement building moved back and to replace the old, unsightly barn with a modern three pump gasoline station, which when completed will be leased to the Callahan Oil Company.

LAWN FETE AND SHOWER AT UNCAS-ON-THAMES

An enjoyable lawn fete at Uncas-on-Thames, combined with a shower for Miss Mae Geary, was held Tuesday evening on the lawn in front of the residence of Dr. Hugh B. Campbell, being the last of the staff parties until the fall season.

Lanterns and electric lights illumined the lawn where games were played until a slight fall of rain sent the merrymakers into the house where the games were continued and a mock marriage was carried out.

Dr. Campbell officiated in the ecclesiastical capacity and the bride was Miss Estella Owen, the groom George Thom. The bride was given away by Miles Williams and was attended by Mrs. Muriel Johnson as maid of honor and Miss Freda Fitzpatrick and Miss Mae O'Connell as bridesmaids. The flower girl was Miss Jean Linas and the page Miss May Strong. The best man was Jean Kieffer and the ushers Thomas Beagon and Alexander Guilfoyle.

Following the mock marriage came the tin shower for Miss Geary, stenographer at the institution, whose marriage to James Purdon, Jr., is to take place this month. In addition to the many shower gifts she received, she was presented a handsome dinner set and a silver bread tray by the staff.

Refreshments were served during the evening.

HEARING ON ELIMINATING CROSSING AT BISHOP'S

The public utilities commission resumed hearings Tuesday in Hartford on two propositions for the improvement of state highways which involve a combined expense of $412,000.

The hearing on the petition of Highway Commissioner John A. MacDonald for the elimination of the railroad crossing at Bishop's in the town of Plainfield occupied the forenoon. The expense of this undertaking, in case it was authorized, will be $87,000 to be apportioned by the public utilities commission, between the state and the New York, New Haven and Hartford Railroad company on a basis to be determined by the commission. The company opposed the project.

The other matter was heard in the afternoon and it called for the elimination of the crossing at Reynolds Bridge in the town of Thomaston. As in the former case the petition for the elimination was brought by the highway commissioner. The estimated cost is $324,000. It was opposed by the railroad company.

There are at the present time 1,458 licensed pharmacists in the state and 392 assistants. There are 677 drug stores in Connecticut.

ONE TEACHER RESIGNS, TWO ARE APPOINTED

Teacher changes were the most important items of business to come before the regular June meeting of the school board which was held Tuesday afternoon in Superintendent Graham's office at the court house.

Miss Nellie O'Connell, principal at Laurel Hill, presented her resignation which was accepted and two teacher appointments were made, Miss Sarah Walsh and Miss Lillian A. Murphy, both Norwich young women.

Bills were ordered paid and the committee reports were received.

The graduation exercises for the public schools of the town are to be held Thursday afternoon of next week.

A buffet lunch was served, consisting of cake, sandwiches, lemonade and fruit.

Twelve little friends were present and various games were enjoyed, Rose Peckham winning the prize in the peanut hunt and Beatrice Adams in pinning the missing point to the star. Pictures were taken of the group on the lawn. It was also the tenth birthday of one of the little guests, Berenice Percival. Both girls received many pretty gifts.

ACADEMY TEAM CLOSES SEASON TODAY AGAINST WESTERLY HIGH

For the last time this season, the Academy baseball team, champions of the Eastern Connecticut Interscholastic League and the only team that has beaten the state-wide reputed Bulkeley aggregation, will be seen in action. The players don their togs for the last time against Westerly, the only team in the league that has beaten them. The game is to be played at the campus and is scheduled to begin at 4 o'clock (D. S. T.)

Although the Westerly game can in no way affect the winning of the cup, it promises to be one of the fastest games played on the home field this year. The Red and White were in no way satisfied to lose to Westerly in the previous encounter and have been waiting for the chance that will present itself today.

The Rhode Islanders have also set their hearts on winning the game. They will do their best to win it, even if it does not mean the cup. It will be the honor that they will struggle for. It must be remembered how Westerly and the Academy played for twelve innings last year to decide who was to take the cup of the '24 season. Westerly won that heart-breaking contest and so nothing can please the home team more than to win the game and prove to Westerly that they are their masters in baseball.

The record of the home team this year has been a favorable one. They played seventeen games winning twelve and losing five. These five defeats are due to early season games played with LaSalle of Providence, Bulkeley and Hartford High. It is doubted whether those teams could repeat.

Coach Brigham plans to put everything of the best into the Westerly game. Therefore the fans will be pleased to know that "Lefty" Jarvis star of the Academy's pitching staff will perform on the mound for the Red and White. "Lefty's" record this year has been a fine one. In his number of wins is included the Bulkeley game. This is Jarvis' last game with the 1925 N. F. A. team and he plans to let every thing loose. He will feed them in varieties to Westerly and bewoe to them.

There should be a record breaking attendance present to witness the contest. It is the last chance that the fans get to see the home team in action. The fans of the town should turn out in full array and support for a last time that fine combination that represents Norwich. The fine attendance of the fans in the previous contests have made it possible for the management to schedule some fast teams and with the support of the fans of this year in mind the management should be able to offer even bigger attractions for the coming year.

The lineup for today's game will probably be as follows: Hinrichs c, Burke 1st, Tombari 2nd, Cimmy Cimoroski ss, Lee Carroll 3rd, Capt. McGowan lf, Smiling Johnny Greene cf, and Radio Ed Brewer rf. Your last chance to see them play!

GIANTS WIN TO EVEN COUNT WITH CHICAGO

Chicago, June 9—The Giants evened their count with the Cubs by winning today's game, 9 to 7. Jack Scott pitched for the Giants and had a bad inning. That was the second in which the Cubs scored four runs.

Scott yielded thirteen hits but was effective in the pinches, barring every inning but the second and registered eight strike outs. Home runs were made by Meusel, Terry, Southworth and Gonzales.

This was Golden Jubilee Day at the Cubs' Park and about 15,000 fans saw the ceremonies that preceded the game. Score:

CHAPMAN LOSES LAST GAME OF THE SEASON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 9.—In creating what is supposed to be a local record for the number of runs scored in succession and what is believed to be a baseball oddity, Deep River slaughtered Chapman Tech here this afternoon in the season's finale for the locals. Nine men scored for the visitors in succession without a single out in the eighth inning, and the procession which is an unusual one in baseball also broke a local record for total number of runs scored in succession. Chapman Tech was snowed under the avalanche of runs, never even threatening to press the visitors for first honors. The final score read 16 to 2 for Deep River.

Chapman Tech played sloathful baseball behind the twirling of Morris Brown. When the locals missed a grounder they pegged the ball wide to the bag and did whatever they could to help along the cause of the opposition. In one way the visitors appreciated the help of the Red and Black but in another they were perfectly capable to do things without any help whatsoever. They were in a hitting mood and slam-banged the offerings of the local ace for fourteen safe blows to all corners of the lot. There was some hefty clouting and it came when hits were needly badly to manufacture runs.

Carlson was steady. Tech could do nothing with his offerings and the attitude which they took made it more apparent that they did not care. They were sloathful in their movement and lost several opportunities to come through with runs by lack of judgment and failure to hold their heads up and play real baseball. All these mistakes counted heavily against the Red and Black and Deep River won the game hands down.

In the eighth inning beginning with Randall the first hitter, nine men from the visitors crossed the plate without an out intervening to break the procession. Randall up for the second time in this inning hit a fielder's choice and the ninth run of the frame came across the plate. The following two players for the visitors failed to reach first safely.

MacDonald the Chapman Tech backstop led the hitting partde with three hits out of four times at the plate, one being good for a triple and another for a double. Ingham, Coulten, O'Leary, Peckham and Adams for the winners each had two hits. The score:

BULKELEY TEAM PLAYS WILBY THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to he Bulletin.)

New London, June 9.—On the eve of the final appearance of seven members of the championship Bulkeley baseball team, a sort of informal gathering with a few anecdotes of the players who are to leave with the graduation exercises this week was held at the school auditorium this evening in connection with class night exercises. The seven players who are to depart are Captain Daniels, Sheflott, Mansfield, Barry, Parisi, Hutchison and Booth. On this (Wednesday) afternoon Bulkeley will conclude its present season opposing Wilby High of Waterbury in the valedictory performance for the state champions.

Wilby with a skillful bunch of ball players and a record which will make Bulkeley extend itself if the locals are to win comes here from the Brass City with an ominous view in mind and it is to hand the Orange and Black athletes a setback. But the locals expect to terminate its season in a blaze of glory and are expected to take the strong Wilby nine into camp. It will be a hard tussle at all costs and one of the banner crowds of the season is expected to view the last performance of a team which has made history which will not repeat itself for a long time to come.

For the final contest of the year Bulkeley will use Captain Daniels on the mound. Daniels with only one defeat up against him in thirty-one trys representing three years of toil on the mound has piled up an envious record. Except for the lone defeat which came in the game with Springfield Technical H ghlast year in the season's final, and which went ten innings before it was decided one way or the other, has a record which has not been equalled by any high school twirler in the state. This is no slouch of a feat, for all of the teams opposed by Bulkeley in that span of years were nines of ability. This year has been Daniels' banner year and he has hung up nine victories. All of these wins have been over the best in the state and the one hit performance against Morris High of New York city found the Bulkeley ace and captain at his best.

The team will lineup for the last time as follows: Barry 2b, Hutchison 3b, Sheflott c, Booth cf, Daniels p, Gaetano ss, Mansfield 1b, Montali lf, Parisi rf.

Bridgeport ..... 100 112 00x—5

WINDHAM TO PLAY STAFFORD THIS AFTERNOON

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Willimantic, June 9—A last minute change in the schedule arrangements brings Stafford High school to this city tomorrow afternoon instead of Thursday afternoon as was originally planned. Coach T. A. Callaghan was in communication with the authorities at Stafford this morning and he was informed that the Stafford nine could not possibly come here Thursday; so the game was scheduled for tomorrow.

The local mentor plans on sending "Lorrie" Haggerty to the hillock against Stafford. He will thus have J. Mieka available for the game against Washington High School of Meriden on the week-end. The Silver City lads are considered stronger than Stafford. When Windham met Stafford earlier in the season the locals were in the midst of a woeful slump but now that the defense has bolstered up to an extent the Crimson and Blue's chances to draw victory out of otherwise certain defeat are unusually bright.

A resume of the local season will show that Coach Callaghen's proteges have lost nine games and only won two. Their best showing was against Bulkeley High School of New London, the state champions being victorious 7 to 2. The victories came at the expense of Lyman Memorial High school of Lebanon and the Clerks, In New London, Memorial Day, the locals held a 1 to 0 lead over Chapman Tech but their chances of victory were defeated when a downpour of rain called a halt to activities in Chapman's half of the fifth.

JOHNNY GREENE PITCHES BRILLIANT BALL IN OPENING TWILIGHT GAME

Johnny Greene, Academy pitcher, hurled the Nuggets to a shut out victory over the East Ends in the opening game of the Norwich Twilight League last evening at Duwell field, the Nuggets winning 4 to 0. Greene pitched brilliant ball through the seven innings and although wild at times pitched airtight ball in the pinches.

The Twilight season was officially opened by Mayor Milo R. Weter who, after being escorted to the field by the East Side Drum corps and the two teams, threw over the first ball for a perfect strike. It was noticeable that the mayor's arm has improved since last season as the ball cut the heart of the plate and Umpire Tod Coleman was forced to call it a strike. Last year the mayor could only get it half way to the plate.

The game if taken as a sample of the games that can be expected this season shows that the Norwich baseball lovers are to be treated to some fast pastiming. The 1,000 fans that turned out to witness the opening game were indeed pleased at the brand of baseball played. They were especially elated over the way in which Johnny Greene pitched. Johnny pitched himself into the heart of every person on the grounds and he deserved all the praise which was given him. The famed nine of the opposing batters and allowed but two hits, both doubles, one by Hamil and the other by Tim Coughlin.

Johnny's support was almost perfect the only error being made by Red Lesseman on a hard hit ball but the error did not prove costly. Every man on the Nugget team played exceptionally fine baseball and Manager George Madden is highly pleased with the showing of his team. He says that if they play as they did last night throughout the season it will be a cinch that the Nuggets will be city champions.

Ken Fox led the attack for the Nuggets with three hits off the star hurler of last season's champions, Harry Mills. Mills' offerings were no puzzle to Fox and he clouted them as fast as Mills threw them over.

The East Ends threatened in the first inning when Hamil the first man up clouted one to left field for two bases. Jimmy Pedace filed out. Hamil stole third. Coughlin hit a sharp ball to Lesseman who threw to Hinrichs catching Hamil at the plate. Bill Austin walked and Mills forced Austin at second, Carlin making a pretty stop of Mills' hard-hit ball.

The Nuggets sewed up the game in their half of the first inning largely because of errors by "Wally" Durga, former Jamaica player. Leo Jarvis and Hinrich were easy infield outs. Lloyd Jarvis was hit by a pitched ball. He stoe selcond and likewise third and rode home on Lesseman's hit. Lesseman went to third on Fox's hit and scored when Riley made a poor peg to third, Fox going to third on the play. Fox scored when the East End catcher let one of Mills fast ones get away from him.

The Nuggets scored their fourth run in the fifth inning when Leo Jarvis hit to deep left for two bases. He scored when Jimmy Pedace who played center field pulled the old army game of sneaking in to the second bag and Mills threw to Pedace who let the ball rol lto deep center while Jarvis came in with a tally.

In the sixth inning with one out Tim Coughlin drove one into the left field swamp for two bases. Greene passed Old Bill Austin for the third time and then Mills was hit by a pitched ball filling the bases. It looks at this time as though the East Ends were due for a score. Riley hit to Burke and Coughlin was forced at the plate. Dyer fouled out to Burke ending the East End's best chance of scoring. In the seventh inning after passing Woodmansee, Greene fanned the next three batters. In the fifth inning with one out and two on Greene pitched himself out of the hole by fanning Leonard and Hamil.

OPENING TWILIGHT GAME AT TAFTVILLE TONIGHT

The Taftville A. A. opens its twilight season this evening at the Providence street grounds against the fast Yantic Mills team. This is the first game of the twilight season in Taftville and games will be played every Wednesday evening throughout the summer. Manager Troland has scheduled games with a number of teams in the nearby towns. Tonight's game will be fast as Yantic is bringing down a fast aggregation of ball players, including a number of the Masked Marvel players who made such a hit with the East Ends last season.

The Taftville team will line up as follows: Eccleston c; Lefty Dugas, Taftville's youthful pitching star, p; Adam Dugas 1b; Bob Cardle, ss; "Rabbit" authier, another youthful star at short; Leo Jarvis will be seen at third; Gaudette, lf; Yorrington, Ralle and Lloyd Jarvis are booked for other positions in the outfield. The game will be called at 6:15 sharp.

Tonights Game.

Tonights game will be between the Hallville team and the Eastern Connecticut Power Co. This game should prove to be as equally as interesting as Tuesday nights conflict as both teams are composed of fast players. The Hallville team will have Mulholland or Dilworth or Boyd behind the bat with either Gene Fuller or Spicer on the mound. Other players include Almquist and Sullivan, formerly of the Baltic Rivals. Cummings, Berberick and O'Connor.

The Power Co., team is more or less of a mystery other than the lineup includes players from Mystic, Plainfield and Taftville. The team will be under the direction of Big Ed Harris, which means that the team will be on its toes from the very first inning.

Tabs Shut Out Section Base

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 9—The Tabs played shutout ball behind the fine twirling of Dixon and the Temperance men broke into the win column in the City League, taking tonight's game from the Section Base by a 3 to 0 score.

Heavy hitting by Hanley, Tabs captain and Havens had something to do with the scoring of the winners. The Section Base played better ball today, showing an all around improvement in the playing.

ATHLETICS BREAK EVEN WITH DETROIT

Philadelphia, June 9—(A. P.)—Reversing proceedings of Monday's contest, Philadelphia earned an even split in the series with Detroit by winning today's game in the ninth inning after a home run by Ty Cobb tied the score in the eighth. The final score was 4-3 in favor of the Mackmen. Until the eighth session Slim Harris held the Cobbmen to five scattered hits but weakened. A single and two walks filled the bases for the Athletics in the ninth and Hale blasted a hit to left-field that would have been good for two bases but which only counted as a single. Score:

ST. MARY'S WINS THREAD CITY GRAMMAR SCHOOL TITLE

(Special to the Bulletin)

Willimantic, June 9.—The last game in the grammar school league was played here this afternoon. Yesterday the St. Mary's Parochial school team defeated its nearest contenders, the Natchaug grammar school, by a 16 to 6 score and thereby annexed the pennant, which entitles them to temporary possession of the Rotary silver loving cup. Prior to yesterday the Natchaugers were one game in arrear of the Parochial school league leaders and a victory for them would place them in a tie for first place, necessitating a playoff. Dubrueil was the Natchaugers' stumbling block, however, on the mound for St. Mary's, he allowed the opposing batters but one hit and drove in seven runs himself. Today the St. Joseph School team beat the Model school.

MARKET WAS UNSETTLED

New York, June 9—Resumption of a heavy demand for the oil shares checked the reactionary price movement in today's stock market. Early losses which ran from one to five points in many issues were materially reduced or cancelled, but losses again outnumbered gains at the close.

Fresh accumulation of the oils was inspired by reports that production in the Smackover field had fallen from 423,000 barrels on May 25 to 285,000 barrels on June 2, and by the prediction of J. J. Mitchell, a director of the Texas company, that 1925 would be one of the most prosperous years on record for the oil companies. Texas "company advanced more than a point to a new high record at 49 3-4 while Atlantic Refining, Freeport Texas, the Pan American issues, Pure Oil and Tidewater all showed net gains of a point or more.

Havana Electric was the outstanding individual feature, soaring 22 1-2 points to a record top at 184 1-2 on rumors of buying for control. Good buying also took place in the Electric Power and Light issues and Pacific Gas and Electric.

Steel shares held relatively steady with trading restricted pending the May tonnage report of the U. S. Steel Corpotation, which will be issued at noon tomorrow. Preliminary estimates of the tons for the month ranged from 350,000 to 350,000 tons. U. S. Steel common closed fractionally higher at 112 3-4. Gulf States Steel dropped 1 1-2 points to 80 and Crucible fell back 1 to 64 3-4. The others showed little change.

Pool operations were suspended in many issues for a greater part of the day, although operations for the rise successfully conducted in Ward Baking A, Gimbel Brothers, Julius Kayser, Chandler and Brooklyn Manhattan Transit all of which attained new peak prices for the year. Pressed Steel Car common and preferred, Chicago Yellow Cab and Brunswick Balke-Collender sank to new 1925 lows.

Nash Motors broke 17 1-3 points to 423 and then rallied to 428 and commercial Solvents dropped 10 1-4 points to 65.

Weakness also developed in advance Rumely preferred, LaClede Gas, Mathieson Alkali, Maxwell Motors issues, Union Bag and Paper and U. S. Cast Iron Pipe, all of which sold two to 3 1-3 points lower.

Call money held steady at 4 per cent. all day. Time money and commercial paper rates were unchanged.

A further recovery of nearly ten points in French francs, which sold around 4.95 cents, featured the higher foreign exchange markets. Demand sterling ruled firm around 4.85 3-4. Belgian francs rallied 12 1-2 points to 4.39 cents.

CURB MARKET

New York, June 9—Decidedly irregular price movements characterized today's curb market, with the general list heading upward toward the close under the leadership of the oil shares, buying of which was stimulated by reports of a substantial decrease in Smackover production. Gulf of Pennsylvania, Humble, Prairie Pope and Sun Oil each closed a point or so higher and most of the other active issues showed fractional improvement. Strength in the hard coal shares, apparently in expectation of a satisfactory wage agreement being reached next month, was the feature of the industrial group. Marked strength also was shown by American Rayon Products, Continental Banking preferred, Icaites, Keivinator, and Pathe Ex. Cuba Company, Cuban Tobacco certificchange, the net gains in which ran from one to 6 1-2 points.

Weakness cropped out in several public utilities, Adirondack Power, American Gas & Electric, Southeastern Power and Light and National Power & Light showing recessions of two to three points. General Gas & Electric showed outstanding strength, touching a record high at 150 and then slipping back to 148 1-2, where it was up 9 1-2 points on the day. Today's high was just double the year's low.

BOND MARKET

New York, June 9—Strength of United States and foreign government bonds today contrasted with the general weakness of domestic corporation issues, which turned reactionary on a renewal of profit-taking. Four of the Liberty and Treasury bonds and a half dozen foreign obligations sold at the year's highest levels.

Activity in the U. S. government group monopolized most of the attention in the day's market. Disappointed by the modest financing of only $125,000,000 announced by the treasury for June, potential investors in the new issue were forced to turn to listed bonds to meet their requirements, engaging in a scramble for the most attractive government securities.

Gains recorded by foreign bonds were limited, but Japanese 6 1-2s and several South American municipal issues were among those to reach 1925 top prices. The security agreement reached between France and Great Britain and the steady recovery of the franc bolstered up French obligations.

No new developments appeared to account for the selling of railroad liens and fractional recessions in this group were ascribed mainly to profit-taking. Price movements were considerably mixed, with moderate gains by Southern Pacific, Great Northern, Erie and Peoria & Eastern issues counteracted by the heaviness of St. Paul, Frisco and "Katy" bonds.

Sinclair and other oil company bonds maintained their recent gains fairly well, but rubber, steel and other industrial liens yielded to the pressure of realising sales.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 9.—(AP)—Wheat prices tended upward most of the time today, influenced by correct general assumption that the government crop report this afternoon would show a big curtailment of the estimated yield, both as compared a month ago and with last year as well. The wheat market closed unsettled, 5-8 to 1 1-4c net higher, July 1.66 5-8 to 1.66 3-4 and September 1.63 to 1.63 1-4. Corn finished at 1-2 to 2c gain, oats 2 1-4 to 2 7-8c up and provisions showing 17 to 37c advance.

Expectance was virtually unanimous that the government crop report to be issued after the close of trading would be bullish concerning wheat. This opinion prevailed, too, despite general knowledge that damage done by the recent hot wave came too late to be a factor in the government data. According to an authority, the severe weather since June 1, when the government information was gathered, has alone cost the country 40,000,000 bushels to 50,000,000 bushels of wheat. Especially in the late trading, however, price bulges were taken advantage of to realize profits for holders and to even up accounts so as to be prepared for any surprise in the government figures.

It turned out that the government report indicated a good deal smaller crop of winter wheat than most traders had looked for, but that the government estimate as to the size of the spring wheat crop was larger than had been generally expected. The government aggregate for both winter and spring wheat was below the average of the unofficial estimates here.

Increased reports of damage to the oats crop gave strength both to corn and oats. December oats established a new high price record for the season. Diminishing receipts were an additional factor as to corn.

Better demand for lard helped to hoist the provision market.

NEW YORK OFFICERS TO ARRIVE IN NEW LONDON THIS WEEK THURSDAY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 9.—City Manager William A. Holt let it be known this afternoon that his next move towards obtaining the services of a member of the New York police force to instill a greater degree of efficiency into the police department would occur this week and that on Thursday Lieutenants Putts and Sweeney of the New York department would come to New London and interview the city manager as to just what would be expected of either of the officers should one of them be selected to put new methods into operation among members of the local department. Lieutenants Putts and Sweeney will arrive here Thursday afternoon and will confer with the city manager. The following day the two officers will be escorted to the council chamber, Municipal building, where they will discuss the tentative methods they will employ should either of them be assigned to the task of bringing the local department to a higher grade of efficiency.

It is expected that within the coming week the officer that will be brought to New London will have been selected and that he will start work immediately thereafter.

An automobile truck, owned by the Bryant-Chapman company, Hartford, and driven by E. F. Peckham, East Hartford, collided with the beacon traffic signal, corner of Bank and Howard streets, Tuesday, the impact causing the beacon to be forced 15 feet out of position and also damaging the concrete base.

Mrs. Charles Enos and infant daughter, 171 Bayonet street; Eldridge Darrah, United States Coast Guard destroyer Jouett; Mrs. Richard Brown and infant son, Home street; Francis Gunderson, United States Coast Guard destroyer Fanning, and Louis Dart, 90 Pleasant street, patients at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, were discharged today.

While responding to an alarm of fire late last night the Niagara Engine company's apparatus and the Konomoc Hose company's pumper were damaged when the two machines came together on Main street, corner of Federal. A pleasure car, owned by Ralph A. Jacobson, 74 Pequonoc road, Groton, that was parked alongside the curb just north of Church street, was side-swiped by the Niagara apparatus in the attempt of Driver William Graham to avoid a crash. The Konomoc Hose company's apparatus, a Seagrave, sustained the brunt of the damage, for one running board and a mudguard were ripped away. The Niagara Engine company's LaFrance received a demolished mudguard and Jacobson's car was disfigured.

The fire was at the residence of Joseph Ricatto, 190 Bayonet street, a blaze having been discovered beneath the veranda and an alarm was rung in from Box 161, corner of Bayonet and New streets. As the Niagara Engine company was passing through Main street and was about to pass Church street, the Konomoc machine, operated by Earl Rose, emerged from the latter street and before either driver could guide the big machines to safety they came together with terrific force, the Niagara apparatus being forced to the right side of the highway and against the parked automobile of Jacobson. None of the members of either the Konomoc or Niagara companies were injured.

The fire did not cause great damage, although it had made its way to the cellar of the house by the time that the firemen reached there. A quantity of chemicals was sufficient to extinguish the blaze and the damage was confined to the veranda and cellar.

How the fire originated is not known, but Ricatto declares that a quantity of rags that were stored beneath the veranda were intentionally ignited by a person unknown to him.

The fire department was called out shortly before noon today for a fire that gave indication of causing serious damage because of the inflammable material stored in the structure, a gasoline filling station, corner of Main and Church streets, of which William Young is the proprietor. The fire was quickly extinguished and damage was slight.

The blaze occurred when an employe of the station was working on the engine of the automobile, which was parked near the oilshed and where a pail of oil was nearby. It is believed that someone carelessly tossed a lighted cigarette into the pail of oil for, without warning, the oil became ablaze and communicated to the engine of the machine. An alarm was sent in from Box 25, corner of Main and Federal streets, and with the arrival of the department the fire was quickly subdued.

John Viera, 15, the youth who was operating the automobile that crashed into the Buick coupe, owned and operated by Attorney Thomas E. Troland, Hillside avenue, at the corner of Montauk and Gardner avenues, last night, was arraigned in the police court this forenoon on the charges of taking an automobile without the permission of the owner, operating an automobile without having a license to do so and reckless driving. The case was continued indefinitely and the youth placed in charge of Probation Officer Richard W. Mansfield.

At the home of Attorney Troland today it was stated that he was feeling as well as could be expected as a result of the cuts and bruises he sustained, and at Home Memorial hospital where Mrs. Caroline Epp, 74, Mr. Troland's colored cook, who was a passenger in the car, it was stated that the victim was resting comfortably. Mrs. Epp sustained a deep laceration of the head and was considerably weakened because of loss of blood.

Complaint was made to the police last night because of Robert J. Kennedy, 971 Bank street, causing the contents of a cesspool on his property to be deposited in the highway. Patrolman Braxton Hill was sent to the Kennedy home and ordered the latter to refrain from any further removal of the contents from the cesspool except by more sanitary methods.

A woman residing on Fourth street complained to the police late this afternoon that a letter from her husband which contained a check for $45 and which was delivered at her home during the woman's absence had been stolen and that she suspected one or more boys of stealing it. Motorcycle Omcer George McCaskey was assigned to the case, but when he interrogated the suspected youths, all denied knowledge of the whereabouts of the letter, although one admitted having seen it between the leaves of a book, where another deposited it. The check bears the endorsement of the husband and the banks will be notified against the negotiation of the check by anyone other than the wife of the endorser.

Jeremiah Donovan, son of Mr. and Mrs. Daniel D. Donovan, 260 Connecticut avenue, underwent an operation at Lawrence Memorial Associated hospital late this afternoon for appendicitis. Tonight the patient was reported as resting as comfortably as could be expected.

Mrs. Robert Moore, New Orleans, arrived in New London this evening and went to her summer home, Parkway, where she will remain until fall.

Robert C. Rice, playground supervisor, complained to the police late this afternoon that some time since Sunday and this forenoon the clubhouse at Caulkins park was broken into and plunder consisting of two baseballs, two bats, catcher's mitt, chest protector and catcher's mask were stolen. While the police were attempting to ascertain the identity of the supposed thief Rice notified the authorities that the plunder had been recovered and that he did not desire any prosecutions to follow, being willing to withdraw his complaint.

John Caulkins, 120 Riverview avenue, and Joseph Monkawasher, 57 Waller street, patients at Home Memorial hospital, were dismissed today.

Sol Agranovitch, Norwich, has sold the two-family dwelling house, 1-3 Pierce street, to Mrs. Frances Drew.

Joe Ricatto, residing at 190 Bayonet street, didn't find the manufacture of liquor a profitable business though he did not have any overhead charges to meet nor did he have a wage bill to meet. His distillery was in his cellar and there he manufactured gin and wine till misfortune disclosed his business and he was hailed before the police court and was fined $300, costs attached to the fine. Judge Prince was pretty good to him at that for he suspended the execution of a jail sentance of six months. That made Joseph smile, very naturally, Joe was all right in his business till fire was discovered under his verandah and an alarm called out the department. Joe declared that some enemy put rags under his verandah and then set them afire. He has no idea who the enemy is, but that fellow was the cause of Joe being put out of business beside sustaining a loss from the flames. The equipment of the Ricatto distillery was so complete that Prosecutor Hollanderasky said he was prepared for a wholesale business. He had a score of glass jars each holding a gallon of gin, a lot of coloring matter and quantities of cider and wine. The police nosed in when the fire was discovered and Joe nosed out, but he did not get beyond suspicion and detection. Joe was fortified with the necessary funds to pay a third of a thousand dollars for his folly, so that his business must have been a bit lucrative. It is not likely that the payment he made today represented all the money his business had returned him either. He had the money in the savings bank and there he withdrew what money he wanted. Joe is a laborer and a hard worker, but he evidently was well paid for what he did.

Roger Halstead Tinker, the driver of an automobile, while operating his machine, yesterday ran into a boy and injured the youngster so that he is in the hospital. The boy will be there several days yet and to await the out come of the injuries sustained the case was continued till the 23d inst.

John H. Grout, a sailor at the submarine base, has recently acquired an automobile. He brought it from Vermont and was making use of it last night when the fire alarm called the department to Bayonet street. Of course John joined the merry procession that followed the fire apparatus, but he encountered Fire Marshall Shipman and the latter thought John was driving recklessly so he called him to the attention of an officer. The latter asked to see the license that gave John the privilege of operating the auto. John didn't have such a document so he was arrested. He said his car was registered in Vermont, but he couldn't show that was no lie, was true by producing the registration. He was fined $2. That was a light penalty for the sailor and he managed to pay it.

Bert De Vault, out of jail a single day after a stay of three months for an attack upon one Catherupo Bruno at a drinking party, was sent back today when he could not pay a fine of $10 for intoxication.

S. Velos, a peddler, became so excited in traffic at Main and States street that he couldn't understand what was wanted of him when a traffic officer guided him out of a tangle. He was arrested but the court decided that Velos was not a wilful violator of the traffic ordinance and suspended judgment in his case.

The funeral of Miss Mary I. Terson was held this morning at 9 o'clock at St. Mary's Star of the Sea church and was attended by a large concourse of mourners. A solemn high mass of requiem was celebrated by Rev. Alexander Wollschlaeger, assisted by Rev. Timothy M. Crowley as deacon and Rev. Raymond O'Callahan as sub-deacon. The bearers were Bertrand Foley, William Gilbert, Cornelius Twomey, William Keefe, George Smith and Walter Philbrick. Interment was in St. Mary's cemetery.

Louis Engepfeld, 70, residing several years at the Colonnade hotel, Pequot avenue, died this morning at Lawrence-Memorial Associated hospital, where he had been under treatment about a week. He was a civil engineer by occupation and for many years was employed by the federal government. Mr. Engspfeld is survived by his wife and a step-daughter, Mrs. J. P. T. Armstrong.

Annie M. Russell has sold to Sidney A. Brown and Ambrose Cassra a house and lot, 109 Crystal avenue and a second dwelling and small tract of land at 274 Huntington street.

Edward Helmovitch, Hartford, has sold to Samuel Rudnick, also Hartford, a house and lot at Midway place, Ocean Beach.

Annie M. Russell has sold a house and lot at 108 Crystal avenue, to Kierstead and Bronislaw Kozlisky.

THIRTY DAY SUSPENSION HANDED SELESNITSKY

(Special to The Bulletin.)

New London, June 9—City Manager William A. Holt today made known his finding as a result of the hearing that took place in his office last Saturday morning of charges made by Acting Lieutenant James D. Gaffney that Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky absented himself from his beat 45 minutes on the night of May 22nd. The decision of the city manager is that Selesnitsky have the alternative of being suspended 30 days or perform patrol duty two weeks without compensation and the officer has decided that he will take the full limit of the lay-off rather than perform duty and not receive compensation.

The communication of City Manager Holt to Captain Charles A. Pinney notifying him of the suspension of Selesnitsky, was as follows:

"You are hereby advised that as a result of a hearing in the case of Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky charged with absenting himself from his beat without authority, said Patrolman Carlos Selesnitsky is hereby suspended from office for a period of one month from date of this notice. However, in consideration of the season, which requires the use of all available officers, if Patrolman Selesnitsky shall agree to work without compensation for two weeks from date of this notice, the above suspension shall be considered as terminated at the end of such two weeks."

Officer Selesnitsky was found in the plant of the Columbia Leather Goods company, Garfield avenue by Acting Lieutenant Gaffney, following the patrolman having reported on duty after having taken his customary 30 minute lunch period.

NORTH STONINGTON MAN GUILTY OF LIQUOR SALE

John Kavendes of North Stonington, was found guilty by a jury in the common pleas court here Wednesday afternoon of the charge of making a sale of liquor on Feb. 13 to Eli Hart of East Hadlyme at the Kavendes farm in North Stonington. Trial of the case was begun last Thursday before Judge C. B. Waller and a jury. The arrest was made by State Policemen Fred Caron and Henry J. Albright.

The evidence and the arguments were concluded Tuesday afternoon and after about half an hour the jury returned its verdict.

Judge Waller sentenced Kavendes to pay a fine of $200 and also to six months in jail, suspending the jail sentence, but this is to become effective if liquor is found at his place before the next term of court.

The man is the sole support of his wife and his family of four small children. In giving the sentence with suspension of the jail sentence, Judge Waller remarked: "This is more than I ought to do for you for when you were on the witness stand you deliberately lied."

Whisky may improve with age, but age doesn't improve with whisky.

WESTERLY

C. A. Poore, superintendent of the Providence division of the New York, New Haven and Hartford railroad, with office in Providence, was a business caller on Westerly Station Agent Earl S. Bavier, Tuesday noon. In the afternoon Superintendent Poore attended the Washington county Pomona Grange No. 2, which met with Quonochontaug Grange at the grange hall on the Boston Post road, near Quonochontaug Beach.

Myron A. Tong, of Boston, federal radio inspector, passed the last week end in Westerly, where some time was spent in checking up the Westerly amateur wireless transmitting stations, 1 BVB Franklin street, Quarry Hill and 1 AAP, Shore road, near Weekapaug. The main purpose of the inspector's visit was to check up on the wave lengths of commercial stations and of the Long Island sound steamers. Westerly radio fans are reported to have had much trouble from the commercial stations, especially the Independent Wireless Telegraph company station at East Hampton, Long Island. The information obtained by the radio inspector was forwarded to the department at Washington, D. C., from which local radio operators anticipate much clearer reception.

The Review club of Westerly held a picnic last Monday at the home of one of its members, Mrs. Samuel H. Davis, at Weekapaug Beach, R. I.

Gradually the figures of the 1925 state census for Rhode Island are being collated and the results made known from time to time. On Tuesday the next town to the eastward of Westerly in Washington county, Charlestown, with a population of 1159, shows the great increase in five years of 469, or 52.7 per cent., according to tentative figures announced by Capt. George H. Webb, superintendent of the State Census.

Compared with the previous State census in 1915, however, the town shows a gain of only 238, which is 28.6 per cent.

Officials of the census bureau could not ascribe the cause for the apparent sudden jump in the town's population. While they would not state positively such was the case, they were inclined to feel that the Federal census of 1920 was not as accurate as it might have been. This enumeration was taken as of Jan. 1, 1920, when travelling over the cross roads and through the backwoods was not as convenient and comfortable as it was on April 15, the date of the census in 1915 and this year.

From 1890 to 1905 the population of Charlestown remained practically stable, there being a difference of but 44 persons. The Federal census showed that the town jumped from 959 in 1905, to 1077 in 1910. In 1915, the State census showed that it had dropped back to 901, a loss of 176. In 1920, a further decrease was found, the drop of 142 in the population being even greater than during the previous census period.

The process of putting into operation and organizing the new Westerly Hospital proceeds slowly. Miss Dorothy M. Tarbox of Westport, Me., assistant superintendent and director of the school of nursing at the new Westerly hospital, and Miss Cecil Wallace, of South Hadley Falls, Mass., historian and record clerk, have assumed their duties it was announced Tuesday by Miss Ethel M. Doherty, superintendent. She also announced that Miss Elizabeth A. Hartigan of Holyoke, Mass., has been chosen for bacteriologist and x-ray technician and would be here within a few days.

Miss Tarbox, the assistant superintendent and director of the school of nursing, has had varied and interesting experiences and comes highly recommended. She was graduated from the Massachusetts General hospital in 1915, and shortly after served for a year and a half at Base hospital, No. 6, in Bordeaux, France. This hospital was a war unit of the Massachusetts General.

Returning from France, she served in the New Haven hospital where she held various positions. She was instructor and assistant superintendent of the Connecticut Training school, and in addition was acting superintendent of it for two years before the Yale school had absorbed the Connecticut Training school, she remained as assistant director of nursing and practical instructor, a most important position.

She is highly recommended by M. C. Goodrich, dean of the Yale school of Nursing, and Dr. Rannieve, superintendent of the New Haven hospital.

She arrived here a week ago and is now at her office in the hospital, where she is ready to interview prospective applicants for the first students' class, which will be entered about Sept. 1.

Miss Hartigan, bacteriologist and X-ray technician, is a woman of broad experience and is especially qualified for the position. For ten years she has served at the Holyoke City hospital, after reaching her training in New York city.

The laboratory of the Westerly hospital is completely equipped with modern facilities and Miss Hartigan will be prepared to do all kinds of work along laboratory lines.

Miss Wallace, the historian and record clerk, will also act as assistant bookkeeper. She will be at the information desk in the reception hall of the hospital.

Peter Can't Believe

Eyes will often prove deceptive
To minds a little too receptive.
—Jumper the Hare.

You know that means that people sometimes see what they want to see. They really do. They actually make themselves see something that they have set their hearts on seeing. Mothers do this very often. This is why a mother always can see beauty in the homeliest of babies, provided that baby is hers.

Peter Rabbit followed his big cousin, Jumper the Hare, through the Green Forest until he was beginning to get a little tired. Then quite suddenly they came upon Mrs. Jumper, and close to her, nibbling at this and that tender young plant, were four little Jumpers.

"Cousin Peter came over to the Green Forest to tell me that he has six of the most beautiful babies that ever lived, born over in the dear Old Briar Patch two days ago. As they are the same age as our babies, I thought he would like to see ours. What do you think of them, Cousin Peter?" said Jumper.

"Where are your eyes? Don't you see those little scamps right here?"

Peter stared all around him. He was looking for an answer. "Where are they?" he asked after a bit.

"Where are they?" echoed Jumper. "Where are your eyes? Don't you see those little scamps right here?"

"Yes, I see those," replied Peter. "But where are the babies, the little, teeny, weeny, new-born babies?"

"Well, we haven't had any since day before yesterday," replied Mrs. Jumper. "There they are, hopping about as good, healthy babies should be doing. Don't you think Jumper and I have a fine-looking family?"

Peter stared very hard at Mrs. Jumper. Then he stared very hard at Jumper. Then he stared very hard at the four lively little Jumpers. "But my babies are helpless," he cried. "My babies haven't opened their eyes yet. My babies haven't any fur coats."

"Fancy!" exclaimed Mrs. Jumper. "Fancy a baby without a fur coat. I can't imagine such a thing. What homely little tikes they must be if they have no fur coats."

"No such thing," replied Peter. "They are the most beautiful babies in all the Great World, Mrs. Peter says so. Weren't your babies born without fur coats?"

"I should say not," replied Mrs. Jumper. "They were just as you see them now. Goodness, I wouldn't know what to do with babies as helpless as all that. Do you mean to say, Peter Rabbit, that your babies can't help themselves at all?"

Peter was obliged to confess that this was the case. All the time he kept his eyes on those four little hares. He just couldn't believe that they were only two days old, the very same age as his own babies. He couldn't believe it and he didn't want to believe it, because he realized now how foolish his boasting of his handsome babies must have seemed to Jumper. Of course there was no comparison between those little squirming, helpless baby Rabbits and these pretty, lively baby Hares, although they were the same age. Peter just couldn't keep his eyes off these youngsters. Mrs. Jumper noticed this.

"Well," said she, "how do these babies compare with yours?"

"Now, my dear, you shouldn't ask Peter such a question as that," interrupted Jumper.

"It's all right," said Peter, "It's perfectly all right, Mrs. Jumper. If my babies ever get to be as pretty and as cunning as these babies of yours, I shall be perfectly satisfied. My goodness, I hope they'll hurry up and get some fur coats. I wouldn't have believed that a fur coat could make quite such a difference."

MYSTIC

A business meeting of the Union Baptist church, notice of which had been given for two Sundays, was held Monday evening with a good attendance. It was conducted harmoniously and every one was in a good mood and it went through with out any delay. In March a meeting was called and a committee appointed to solicit pledges to remodel and repair the church. Their report was accepted and voted for them to be retained. The amount pledged is $12,250, to date. Mr. Zahn of Norwich was present to explain about the plans. Deacon Allen made a motion that they go ahead and make repairs not to exceed $20,000. He said it had been talked of long enough and no wit should be done. It was carried. The principal change will be bringing the organ down from the gallery which will cost $2,400 to take it down repair and set it up. Mrs. Costa will have charge of that work. A part of the gallery will be removed and the other part made into class rooms. It is necessary to rebuild a portion of the north foundation and to place for a new heating system sometime later and that calls for a new chimney. The contract for painting the outside has been made and work has been started. The staging is up to paint the spire and the figures and hands on the town clock removed. The cutting down of the hill and building the face wall has changed the outside appearance and makes it look as if the church is truly on Zions hill and when you climb the 23 steps to enter you realize it for a fact.

Think what it means to be everlastingly free from the dull, throbbing headaches, sallow skin and perpetual tiredness which are constipation's toll. But let Mrs. Bevis tell you her inspiring story:

Words can't express my gratitude for Kellogg's ALL-BRAN. For 12 years I suffered with constipation, always taking medicine, had dull headaches, and never felt well. For the past 12 months I've eaten ALL-BRAN and haven't taken any more medicine. I've never felt so well in my life. I feel ten years younger. No more headaches or medicine.

Safeguard the Crops

You cannot afford to trust the results of many months' labor to the uncertainty of an old inflammable building. Concrete barns and silos protect you against loss by fire by preventing it.

The cost of permanent, fireproof and verminproof farm structures is low, too, for Portland Cement is the cheapest of all materials undergoing a manufacturing process.

Ask your building material dealer the advantages of using Atlas Portland Cement in construction work.

KALEIDOSCOPE

In Switzerland employers of women who have household duties must, at the request of a woman worker, grant a halfholiday Saturday afternoons.

A combination of cork and concrete for building houses is the latest innovation being tried in England. It is asserted that the combination insulates the houses, both against cold and noise.

Scientific investigation in the habits of fishes has shown that many of them are by no means helpless when out of water. There is, for instance, a tropical fish known as the climbing perch, which has the curious habit of scrambling, by means of its fins, up stones, roots and even the trunks of trees, in search of the insects on which it feeds.

The fishing population of the North sea is more than 50,000, and many of these men on the large trawlers do not see land for weeks on end. Their catches are sent to port by steam carriers, and their lives would be very monotonous were it not for the ships that visit them with provisions.

William and Louis Ferdinand, sons of the former crown prince of Germany, recently passed their high school final examinations, and are now ready to enter some university. The sons of royal blood in other days always went to the University of Bonn, but today Bonn is in the occupied area, and it is taken for granted that no Hohenzollern will venture into territory held by foreign troops. Hence the question of the university to be selected for these young men still is open.

Twenty-four thousand miles of highways, enough to circle the earth, are scheduled for construction during the 1925 season by the various state highway departments, according to information obtained by the bureau of public roads of the United States department of agriculture. The state departments also plan to maintain a total of 217,794 miles of road. Approximately $400,000,000 will be available for construction and $85,000,000 for maintenance by the state highway departments. It is difficult to estimate the operations of the counties, but indications are that they will spend approximately $463,000,000 for construction and maintenance. The estimated total expenditure for the year is therefore $1,000,000,000. The [illegible] plan to [illegible] of [illegible] miles of ly 100 degrees. Schools, offices and factories have in some cases been closed as a relief measure. The hens have likewise suffered as evidenced by the fact that during the week one Rhode Island Red three Leghorns and three Wyandottes, a total of seven in all, succumbed to the heat. Not only this but egg production although relatively higher than for the corresponding year, nevertheless fell off five per cent. as compared with the previous week. There seemed to be no satisfactory way to meet this situation, for obviously the hens can't quit the job and sleep in parks or spend their time in swimming.

During the thirty-first week of the contest Keewaydin Farm's pen of Barred Rocks from Darien, Conn., were head and shoulders above all contenders with a total of 61 eggs for the week. Harriet Smith's pen of the same breed from Newburyport, Mass., and White Leghorns entered by Wall-Bet Poultry Farm from Chester, Conn., tied for second place with 54 eggs each. White Leghorns entered by Hilltop Farm at Suffield, Conn., made third place for the week with a tally of 53 eggs. Two other pens of Leghorns owned by Charles E. Butler from Darien, Conn., and Rapp's Leghorn Farm at Atlantic Highlands, N. J., tied for fourth place with 52 eggs. The total lay for all pens was 5197 or a yield of 53 per cent. Barred Rocks as a class did a little better than 60 per cent., White Leghorns were around 58 per cent. while White Rocks, White Wyandottes and Rhode Island Reds were all in the forties.
The leading pens in each of the principal varieties are as follows:

REPORT ON STATE'S WORK IN ENTOMOLOGY

Many residents and property owners throughout the state are curious to learn why khaki-clad men go about looking at trees and scratching or penciling on the bark of each a peculiar mark or hieroglyphic. These men are scouts hunting for gipsy moth egg-masses and some are employed by the federal bureau of entomology and others by the state of Connecticut. The mark on a tree serves to identify the man who examined it, and he is held responsible if any egg-clusters escape his notice.

A detailed report of this work has just been issued by the agricultural experiment station, New Haven, in the 24th report of the state entomologist. Other control work required by the state, such as the inspection of nursery stock, apiaries, and the control of the European corn borer, is reported upon, together with the results of the various investigations of the department. This report is by W. E. Britton, state entomologist, and covers the work of the department for the year 1924. Some of the articles are by Messrs. Walden, Zappe, Garman, Friend, Ashworth and Botsford, assistant entomologists. It is Bulletin No. 263 of the station, and after supplying the station mailing lists, will be sent gratis to those who apply for it. It is a pamphlet of 124 pages, 9 text figures, 26 plates, and is furnished with index and table of contents.

DIRECTS VERDICT FOR DEFENDANT IN SUIT OVER PINEHURST CUSTOMER

After motion for non-suit had been denied in the superior court here Tuesday by Judge Isaac Wolfe in the suit of Archa W. Coit, real estate agent of this city, against Judge Arthur F. Libby as executor of the estate of Mrs. Gertrude Hakes Gales for a commission of $1,800 for finding a customer for $60,000 for the Pinehurst property at 154 Washington street, testimony for the defendants was introduced and when this had been finished Attorney Arthur M. Brown, the counsel for Mr. Libby, moved to have the court direct a verdict for the defendant.

Attorney Brown argued that there was no question of fact for the jury to pass upon and that as a matter of law the plaintiff was not entitled to a verdict. He claimed that the agreement was that no commission was to be paid until the transaction was closed, which meant the cleaning up of the sale; also that the sale to the intending purchaser, Henry E. Russell of New London, was subject to the approval of the probate court and Mrs. Sarah Treat of California, but the probate court did not give approval and no sale was made.

Attorney G. C. Morgan, who was associated with Abel P. Tannar as counsel for the plaintiff, answered the arguments of Mr. Brown, after which Judge Wolfe stated that the only question in the case seemed to be: Has Coit provided a customer ready and willing and able to buy on the terms of the seller? Mr. Libby had a perfect right, he said, to place in the contract of sale the proviso about the approval of the probate court and Mrs. Treat. There was no question but that the probate court had not approved the sale, although there might be some question as to whether Mrs. Treat had waived her approval or not. The judge said that he would be frank to state that if the jury found for the plaintiff, the court would set it aside.

Judge Wolfe then had the jury called back into the court room, where he addressed them and directed them to return a verdict for the defendant, informing them that there was no question of fact for them to rule upon and that under the law the defendant was entitled to a verdict.

The twelve men retired to the jury room and soon returned with the verdict for the defendant which was reported by Foreman John R. Bowman.

Mr. Coit brought suit on the claim that a 3 per cent commission on $60,000 was due him for securing Henry E. Russell, a retired millionaire of New London and New York, as a buyer for the property. This was on Aug. 5, 1924, when Mr. Russell paid $1,000 down and agreed to pay the balance of $59,000 on or before Sept. 15, 1924 and take possession on October 1. A written agreement to sell and buy was entered into by Mr. Russell and Judge Libby, which contained the clause that the executor agreed to sell "subject to the approval of the probate court for the district of Norwich and also subject to the approval of Mrs. Sarah Treat of Pasadena, Cal."

On Aug. 6 the prospective purchaser Mr. Russell, withdrew, the defendant claimed. The $1,000 deposit he had made was forfeited.

In the trial of the case, Mr. Coit and Probate Judge Nelson J. Ayling were the only witnesses called to the stand for the plaintiff's side of the case and Judge Libby was the only witness for the defense.

On the stand Mr. Coit testified that upon hearing "Pinehurst" was on the market, he started to negotiate with Judge Libby, the executor to handle the sale of the property. Several days later the executor sent the broker a detailed description of the property. The property was appraised at $75,000.

On Aug. 5, 1924, the realtor secured a prospective buyer, Henry E. Russell of New London, whose wealth was not questioned by either side. On that day he, with his wife, came to Norwich to look over the property. Stopping at Judge Libby's office, the executor, realtor and the prospective buyer, with his wife, visited the property which was looked over by all. The first offer made was $50,000 for the premises, which did not include the personal property, with the provision also that Mr. Russell would pay the commission price. This offer was turned down. Then an offer of $55,000 was made, as Mr. Russell seemed exceedingly pleased with the place. Later Mr. Coit said, Mr. Libby told him, that Mr. Russell had raised his price to $60,000, which seemed a very good price.

Mr. Coit, with Mr. Libby, Mrs. Coit and a friend, went to New London, to consummate the sale, after which a dinner party was to be had. A contract was drawn up at the Russell home, whereupon Mr. Russell paid $1,000 to bind the bargain, the remaining $59,000 to be paid on or before Sept. 15, 1924. A few days later it was learned, the witness testified, that the sale was not consummated, as Mrs. Russell and her husband had changed their minds about buying the place, with the result that the sale was dropped.

A letter introduced under date of Sept. 13, 1924, sent to Judge Libby by Archa Coit, was read, which contained information that Mr. Coit expected his commission Sept. 15.

The only reason advanced by Mr. Coit on the stand why Mr. Libby did not press the contract against Mr. Russell was the fact that Mr. Russell had retained as his counsel in the matter Attorney Frank L. McGuire of New London, and Attorney McGuire, the witness claimed, could get around the matter somehow, so that it would be drawn out for five years, and would cost the Gale estate about $50,000, and Judge Libby did not wish to do this. The upkeep of the estate was about $7,000 per year, it was testified.

Judge Wolfe, after hearing the motion for non-suit argued by Attorney Arthur M. Brown, denied the motion, and trial was resumed.

Judge Nelson J. Ayling of the probate court of Norwich testified that he had not approved the contract of sale made by Judge Libby between Mr. Russell and Judge Libby.

Judge Libby took the stand for the defense in the afternoon. He told of the drawing up of the contract with the Russells, and of the Russells visiting "Pinehurst."

A letter introduced as evidence from Mr. Russell to Judge Libby, read that Mr. Russell asked for the return of the $1,000, as he wished to withdraw the contract. It was later brought out that the $1,000 was forfeited. The property has not yet been sold, according to the executor. Judge Libby told of sending a letter with contract inside to Mrs. Treat of California, and a reply was sent telling him to do what he thought best.

In regard to getting the approval of the probate court, Judge Ayling told him (Libby), that it was only the beginning of the settlement of the estate, and the price of $60,000 was under the inventory price, and as far as the inventory price goes, it was way below the real value of the place. Judge Libby told him that for his part he didn't approve of the contract, and has never given his approval of a sale.

Judge Libby told of one afternoon on Aug. 8 or 9, 1924, when Coit told him that he was sorry the deal fell through and asked about giving him (Coit) $500. Judge Libby stated that he was not giving away $500.

In regard to forcing the Russells to keep their contract, Judge Libby stated that he held a consultation with Attorney Arthur M. Brown, who advised him to let the matter drop, which he did. Coit then announced that he would sue, and Judge Libby told him to go ahead, which he did. Coit told him this after he had consulted New London counsel.

The jurors chosen for the case were Arad Manning, Albie L. Hale, John R. Bowman, and Robert J. Fullerton, Norwich; Henry Hart, Irving W. Foote and James Butler, Preston; Willis Morgan, Griswold; Herbert L. Maine, North Stonington; Thomas Newman, Franklin; William R. Darling, Voluntown, and Michael A. Griffin.

HERO MEDAL AWARDED TO CENTRAL VILLAGE MAN

Hero medals have been awarded by the committee on award of medals of the Connecticut Humane Society to Brennan Swicklas of Pequabuck and Thomas Weaver of Central Village for conspicuous bravery in the rescue of children from drowning.

Brennan Swicklas, 16 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Andrew Swicklas of Pequabuck, saved from drowning George Odette, 3 years old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Odette, near neighbors to the Swicklas family. On Sunday, March 22, the child fell into the sluice-way of a stream where the water is nine feet deep near a mill above the dam in Pequabuck, and was sinking for the third time while a crowd nearby were devising means to rescue him, when Swicklas dove in and got him to the shore. Dr. Robbins of Bristol was called and, with the use of a pulmotor, revived him. Mr. Swicklas was when a high school boy, fond of athletics and commenting on the rescue said, "Why, the kid fell into the water and I pulled him out, and that's all there is to it. What else was there to do? He was a little kid and lived upstairs and I always knew him. He couldn't help himself when he fell in. Why shouldn't I get him out?"

Thomas Weaver, while working along the right of way of the Connecticut Company November 21, 1924, in the late afternoon noticed that several children skating on a pond some distance away had fallen through the ice, and he went to their rescue.

On account of the thinness of the ice and the sticky, muddy bottom of the pond it was with some difficulty that he succeeded in getting two of the children to the shore. He did not know until later that a third child he had not seen had been drawn under the ice and was drowned. After the rescue Weaver was attended by a physician at the state police barracks in Danielson, where he was put to bed and kept until the next day, and for sometime after his plunge in the pond he was unable to follow regularly his employment with the trolley company for which he worked for many years.

The report was signed by Charles Hopkins Clark, Wilbur F. Gordy and Colonel Francis Parsons of the committee on awards of medals.

CAMPAIGN TO STOP PROMISCUOUS BILL POSTING

A determined effort to put a stop to the promiscuous posting of advertising signs and billboards within the limits of Connecticut highways has been ordered by the state highway department and the state police department. Such signs have been found to be a menace to the safety of travel upon the highways and with the adoption by the General Assembly of a law increasing the penalties for violations, immediate steps have been taken to rid the state of signs, posters, billboards and other methods of free advertising which, when affixed to trees, poles, rocks or other structures adjoining the highways, interfere with the vision of motorists, especially on curves, and increase the danger of accidents.

The penalty for violations of the act, which is Section 39 of the new codification of highway laws, is $50 fine or imprisonment of not more than six month or both.

Within the last few days a wholesale increase in the erection of signs of all dimensions has been brought to light, especially in Litchfield County and along the shore roads, where a large number of hotels and roadside inn signs have been attached to trees adjoining the highways.

The policy of the state in the matter will be to remove all signs that are erected in violation of the law, and prosecutions will follow the persistent use of such advertising means.

Following is a new law fixing a heavy penalty for this offense:

"Advertising within highway limits. Any person who shall deposit, throw, affix or maintain any paper or advertisement within the limits of any public highway, or on private premises or property, without the consent of the owner of such premises or property, unless the same shall be left at the door of the residence or place of business of the occupant of such premises or property; or who shall post, erect, construct or maintain within the limits of any public highway any advertising sign or any bill board or advertisement; or who shall affix to or maintain upon any tree, rock or structure within the limits of a public highway any paper or advertisement other than notices posted in accordance with the provisions of the general statutes; or who shall affix to or maintain upon the property of another without his consent; any word, letter, character or device intended to advertise any sale of any article, shall be fined not more than fifty dollars or imprisoned not more than six months or both.

CARE OF THE HORSE IN HOT WEATHER

A warm day doubles complaints at the office of the Connecticut Humane Society regarding horses. In spite of the fact that motor traffic has driven many horses off the street, there are still hundreds of horses in Norwich whose comfort is to be reckoned with during such hot days as have been experienced. An overloaded team, or a horse left unnecessarily standing in the hot sun, fast or over-driving are the nature of most of the complaints about horses, and many kindly disposed persons are taking in dogs to give them a drink, which according to the agents of the humane society is not only a kindly thing to do, but frequently wards off sickness in dogs during the heated term.

Hot-Weather Rules

1. Load lightly, and drive slowly.
2. Stop in the shade if possible.
3. Water your horse as often as possible. So long as a horse is working, water in small quantities will not hurt him. But let him drink only a few swallows if he is going to stand still. Do not fail to water him at night after he has eaten his hay.
4. When he comes in after work, sponge off the harness marks and sweat, his eyes, his nose and mouth, and the dock. Wash his feet but not his legs.
5. If the thermometer is 75 degrees or higher, wipe him all over with a damp sponge, using vinegar water if possible. Do not wash the horse at night.
6. Saturday night, give a bran mash, lukewarm; and add a tablespoonful of saltpetre.
7. Do not use a horse-hat, unless it is a canopy-top hat. The ordinary bell-shaped hat does more harm than good.
8. A sponge on top of the head, or even a cloth, is good if kept wet. If dry, it is worse than nothing.
9. If the horse is overcome by heat, get him into the shade, remove harness and bridle, wash out his mouth, sponge him all over, shower his legs, and give him two ounces of aromatic spirits of ammonia, or two ounces of sweet spirits of nitre, in a pint of water; or give him a pint of coffee warm. Cool his head at once, using cold water, or if necessary, chopped ice, wrapped in a cloth.
10. If the horse is off his feed, try him with two quarts of oats mixed with bran, and a little water; and add a little salt or sugar. Or give him oatmeal gruel or barley water to drink.
11. Watch your horse. If he stops sweating suddenly, or if he breathes short and quick, or if his ears droop, or if he stands with his legs braced sideways, he is in danger of a heat or sun stroke and needs attention at once.
12. If it is so hot that the horse sweats in the stable at night, tie him outside, with bedding under him. Unless he cools off during the night, he cannot well stand the next day's heat.

SHIPPING AT SHANGHAI IS BEING CRIPPLED BY STRIKE

Twenty British and Two Japanese Steamers Are Tied Up —China Merchants' Steamship Company Has Suspended Sailings Indefinitely—Other Companies Are Instructing Their Vessels Not to Return to Shanghai—Americans Are Included in Denunciation Contained on Handbills Distributed by Strikers.

Shanghai, June 10.—(AP)—The China Merchants' Steamship company, Chinese owned, has suspended its sailings indefinitely. Some other steamship companies are instructing their vessels now at outside ports not to return to Shanghai at present.

Shanghai, June 10.—(AP)—Two Americans were the principal defense witnesses today at the trial of seventeen Chinese concerned in the rioting outside the Louza police station in Nanking road on May 30 which led to the shooting of Chinese by the police.

The police station was stormed Chinese students attempting to rescue convicted strikers.

At the opening of the hearing before the mixed court, the American assessor announced he would admit documents containing Bolshevik literature seized by the police at Shanghai university which he did not admit as evidence yesterday. Police Inspector E. W. Everson, the official who ordered his men to "shoot to kill," said the crowd of students was uncontrollable three minutes before he gave the order to fire.

Sidney R. Anderson, a Methodist missionary, declared crowds blocked the streets, apparently with the object of expressing sympathy for the imprisoned students. Anderson stated he believed the police absolutely were unjustified in firing.

Doctor J. W. Cline, a Methodist missionary and ex-president of Soochow university, corroborated Anderson's statement.

HEAVY LOSSES INFLICTED ON CANTONESE TROOPS

London, June 10—A despatch to the Daily Express from Hong Kong dated today, says the Cantonese troops on Tuesday night, made a determined effort to cross the Canton River and drive out the Yunnanese troops but were repulsed with severe losses.

Many bodies were floating down the river today.

AMERICANS INCLUDED IN STRIKERS' DENUNCIATIONS

Shanghai, June 10.—(AP)—Americans today were included in the denunciations contained in handbills distributed by Chinese strike leaders endeavoring to carry on a general strike here.

Outbreaks and demonstrations at Peking, as reported in Chinese circles, served to inspire strike agitators to redouble efforts. The strike movement, however, with the exception of the shipping strike, appears disintegrating.

A new strike handbill, which appeared tonight, included American employers among those for whom patriotic Chinese were not to work, and said:

"We shall die if we do not act immediately. We are willing to fight unto death if we must be without yielding."

Twenty-two steamers—twenty British and two Japanese now are tied up here, stranded by the waterside strike. Many other ships are temporarily eliminating Shanghai as a port of call or anchoring at the mouth of the Yangtse river and lightering their cargoes to shore. The strike, however, is not considered large enough to affect trans-Pacific liners.

RIFFIANS ATTACK FRENCH ALONG A SIXTY-MILE FRONT

Fes, French Morocco, June 10.—(AP)—Abd-El-Krim, the rebel chieftain, apparently desires to provide M. Painleve, the French premier, with an adequate reception on his arrival in the fighting zone in Morocco. The official communication issued by the French tonight says Abd-El-Krim is now attacking the French along a 60-mile front.

While the communication announces that the attacks of the tribesmen have been repulsed, it admits that "several small posts had to be abandoned." Among these places were Aouecour and Achrkane, blockhouses north of El Bibane.

The communication adds that "other enemy elements crossed the Guergha river east of Kelna Des Sless," and that another Moorish offensive was started in the direction of Ouessan, in which "very important enemy contingents were engaged."

Riffians and Yebelas succeeded in crossing between French outposts into French territory. Many of them were disguised as harvesters. They carried sickles and scythes. The communication says this is the harvest time in the region but the large number of innocent looking field workmen aroused suspicion. French airplanes were sent scouting and discovered more than 200 supposed peaceful farm hands trading their farming implements for rifles and assembling in the valley in readiness to attack a small French outpost. The gathering was dispersed by the French planes.

400 Rebels Killed.

Melilla, Spanish Morocco, June 10.—(AP)—Native reports reaching here say that more than 400 rebels have been killed in fighting near Marinisa. French airplanes assisted in the operations.

SEVERAL TRUCK LOADS OF HOME BREW SEIZED

Danbury, June 1—(A. P.)—Coroner John J. Phelan conducted an inquest today into the death of Anthony Murin who was fatally injured in an automobile accident June 1 when a machine operated by Paul Yuhaslik collided with a trolley car. Yuhaslik and other witnesses admitted that they had secured home brew from the Sokol union, a club here, and as a result of their testimony the club was raided by the police tonight. Several truck loans of home brew were seized and three officers of the union were ordered to appear in court tomorrow.

STAMFORD MAN COMMITTED SUICIDE BY SHOOTING

Stamford, Conn., June 10 (A. P.)—Robert J. Richer, 52, committed suicide at his home here this afternoon by shooting himself in the right temple with an old-fashioned .32 calibre revolver. His daughter who occupies an upstair apartment heard the shot and rushed down stairs to find her father dead in bed with the revolver in his hand. After his wife died about five days ago, he is said to have become despondent brooding over her death. For many years Mr. Richer was employed at Yale and Towne manufacturing company. Besides his daughter, he leaves one son.

SALTS TEXTILE WEAVERS TO RETURN TO WORK

Bridgeport, Conn., June 10—(A. P.)—The weavers of the Salts Textile company here, who have been out on strike for a week, will return to work tomorrow morning. A settlement, the conditions of which were not made public, was made between the workers and the company today.

Walter Butterwicz, Jr., seven years old son of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Butterwicz, of New Haven, was fatally injured when he was struck by an automobile driven by A. M. Stephenson of

COW PULLED OUT OF WELL BY A FLIVVER

Bridgeport, June 10—(A. P.)—For the first time in many days, two fire departments failed to respond to a call for help, but it was not a call for another fire, but from water; and the needy party was a cow, owned by Anthony Gall of Church Hill street, Fairfield, the cow having fallen into a well after locking horns with another of its kind.

Chief Daniel E. Johnson of Bridgeport, assistant chief George F. Beardslee, and Captain John T. Kane of Engine company 11 on Fairfield Ave., near Ash Creek were all appealed to by the owner and his friends, but all three, after referring to the musty rule book, saw no way in which they could assist an out of town cow from a well.

But the owner did not give up and called on the Fairfield department, most members of which however refused to assist the cow, declaring it was not in their line, of duty.

Finally a faithful and time honored flivver was enlisted and a chain thrown around the cows four legs and head, then with the assistance of several dozen neighbors and friends the relief party started the rescue and the cow was finally pulled out of the well, almost choked to death but still alive. It is thought the animal will recover.

DEBATED QUESTION WHO OWNS THE NORTH POLE

Ottawa, June 10—(A. P.)—The question of who owns the North Pole was raised in the House of Commons today when Charles Stewart, Minister of the Interior, was outlining Canada's claims for the Northern Archipelago.

W. G. McQuarrie drew Mr. Stewart's attention to claims of the United States as reported in news dispatches. "I see they claim the North Pole," he said, "are we going to let them have it?"

Mr. Stewart said he had no remark to make about claims of the United States. He said that Canada claimed the islands North of the Canadian coast between longitude 60 and 142. He presumed, he said, that the United States would claim any islands North of Alaska. "We don't claim the North Pole," he said, "we claim up to it."

He said that the land claimed by Canada formed a great triangle with the mainland as the base and the North Pole as the apex.

ACCUSED MAN APUPEARED IN COURT INTOXICATED

Bridgeport, Conn., June 10 (A. P.)—Judge Frederick W. Huxford and a jury waited two and a half hours in criminal court of common pleas here today, ready to continue a hearing of liquor law violation charges against Ignatz Kaptena of Stamford.

During the long wait, Kaptena made an unseaworthy way into the county building, drunk. His counsel paced him up and down a corridor under the mistaken impression they could exercise him into a sufficiently sober condition to face the court and jury.

Then the decision was reached to abandon the jury trial and Kaptena pleaded guilty to keeping liquor with intent to sell. He was fined $200 and sentenced to jail for 45 days.

JOHN COOLIDGE GUEST OF GOVERNOR TRUMBULL

Hartford, Conn., June 10.—(AP)—John Coolidge, son of President Coolidge and Mrs. Coolidge was the guest of Governor Trumbull and his family at a dinner at the Shuttle Meadow club, New Britain tonight. He has been spending the past several days at the governor's mansion in Plainville.

Carpet weaving is the principal industry of the Kerman district, Persia, and during 1924 so many foreign purchasers arrived that few carpets remained in the bazars. Numerous orders from American firms furnished employment for all available weavers. The wool production was good, although there was a shortage at the end of the year, caused by the increase in export manufacturing.

CABLED PARAGRAPHS

To Hold Conference in Morocco.

Madrid, June 10.—(AP)—The military directorate announced tonight that General Primo de Rivera, head of the directorate, will confer with Paul Painleve, the French premier, at Rabat, Morocco, on Friday.

Gabriel D'Annunzio Improved

Gardone, Italy, June 10—The condition of Gabriel D'Annunzio, the poet-soldier, was reported tonight as considerably improved. The attack of influenza from which he is suffering, a medical bulletin says, is following a regular course.

JURY SELECTED FOR TRIAL OF SHEPHERD

Chicago, June 10.—(AP)—The jury which will try William Darling Shepherd for the alleged murder of his millionaire foster son, William Nelson McClintock, who he is accused of having fed typhoid germs, was completed late today after twenty-four days, during which two regular and seven special venires of 100 men each were examined.

Completion of the tedious task came with unexpected suddenness. Nearly a dozen men had been examined for the last juror, when Charles Edelstein, a street car motorman, was called.

Edelstein was the only man of several hundred who had been called who said he had not read about the case. His replies met the demands of George E. Gorman, the first assistant state's attorney, and a panel consisting of him and three others passed by the prosecution was tendered to the defense.

Without asking a question, William Scott Stewart, chief of defense counsel, turned to Judge Thomas J. Lynch and said:

"Swear the jury; we are satisfied." The outlining of the state's case was put off until tomorrow morning.

Preceding it, however, Stewart will make several motions and tonight the first session of the actual trial promised to be a wordy legal battle.

GERARD TELLS OF WORK WITH DEM. NAT. COMMITTEE

New York, June 10.—(AP)—James W. Gerard, former ambassador to Germany, today appeared in the supreme court and told of his activities as treasurer of the democratic national committee in connection with the suit against the committee by Van Patten, Inc., an advertising agency, for $44,000. Earlier in the day Mr. Gerard was exonerated of charges of contempt of court growig out of his failure to answer summonses naming him as a defendant. He explained he had never been served with the formal summons.

Mr. Gerard said in court that he had been elected treasurer of the committee, but never had been a member of it. He said he was not held to account for any money expended for advertising or any other purpose, but that he merely paid out funds according to the orders of the committee heads.

Mr. Gerard reiterated he was not a party to the suit filed by Chairman Clem Shaver against the agency and added he had taken steps to see that his name was dropped from that litigation.

No date was set for a further hearing.

THREE MEN KILLED AT GRADE CROSSING IN R. I.

Blackstone, Mass., June 10.—(AP)—Three men two of whom remained unidentified tonight, were killed late today when an automobile truck crashed into a New York, New Haven and Hartford passenger train at a country crossing near Mill River Junction in Bellington. Leon D. Thibault of Woonsocket, R. I., a tinsmith, is the one known victim. The bodies of the others were taken to undertaking rooms in Franklin to await identification.

The train, bound from Boston to Waterbury, Conn., was traveling at a moderate speed, according to members of its crew and passengers when the truck crashed into it. The machine was demolished and two of the three men riding in it were killed instantly. Thibault died soon after the collision. The train was delayed 34 minutes.

The bodies were turned over to the Bellington police and later taken to Franklin. Medical Examiner John H. Wyman of Medway was conducting an examination tonight.

P. O. DEPT INTERESTED IN STATE PICTURE TAX BILL

Hartford, Conn., June 10.—(AP)—The postoffice department at Washington took an active interest today in the motion picture tax bill pending before Governor Trumbull, according to announcement tonight by Benedict M. Holden, representing the state association of motion picture exhibitors. He said he had been advised by telephone from New York that First Assistant Postmaster General Bartlett had wired the governor late in the afternoon that he had been informed the proposed new law would require postal employees delivering films to exhibitors in Connecticut to see that the state tax was paid.

George Lee, general traffic manager of the American Express company, will arrive in Hartford tomorrow morning Mr. Holden said, to appear at the governor's hearing in the afternoon, in opposition to the bill on the ground that it would require express delivery men to pay the tax to the state whenever films were sent into the state by express.

BRYAN RETICENT ON THE TENN. EVOLUTION CASE

Miami, Fla., June 10.—"I do not care to discuss the plans of the other side."

Other than this, William Jennings Bryan would make no comment on his return here today from Leesburg, Fla., on the announcement that Bainbridge Colby, also a secretary of state in the Wilson cabinet, could join Clarence Arrow on the side of the defense in the trial of John T. Scopes, on a charge of violating the Tennessee anti-evolution law.

"From the number and prominence of the counsel for the defense, they realize the importance of the case—the magnitude of the issue involved, but we will be ready for them," he said.

MOSES WOULD REPEAL CONTRADICTORY LAWS

New York, June 10.—(AP)—Increasing disrespect for the law should be combatted, not so much by law enforcement as by abolition of the many contradictory laws which hamper American citizenship, said Senator George H. Moses of New Hampshire, addressing the New York board of trade, today.

"Americans today find themselves governed by so many contradictory and ridiculous laws that all law has been brought into disrepute," he said.

One MacMillan Plane Was Forced to Land

Struck by Squall While in Flight From Philadelphia to Squantum, Mass. — Two Completed Journey.

Squantum, Mass., June 10.—(AP)—Two of the amphibian planes to be used on the MacMillan Arctic expedition landed at the naval reserve flying base here shortly after 5 o'clock after a flight from Philadelphia. The third plane, the NA-2, was not in sight as the others landed safely on the water near the dock.

Lieutenant Commander Richard E. Byrd, in charge of the planes, said that 20 minutes after leaving Philadelphia the NA-3 had turned back. He did not know the nature of the trouble. Radio reports received here said that the missing plane had made a second start from Philadelphia at 2:20 o'clock eastern daylight saving time.

Commander Byrd and his companions were greeted on arrival by representatives of the third naval district and naval reserve and by Dr. Gilberty Grosvenor, president of the National Geographic society.

At 7:30 o'clock the pilot of the NA-3 reported that the plane had been compelled to land at Sagamore because of a heavy squall and that it would probably not continue its flight until tomorrow.

A TEMPORARY LEASE OF MUSCLE SHOALS DISAPPROVED

Washington, June, 10.—(AP)—Proposals of the war department for a temporary lease of Muscle Shoals pending final disposition by congress were disapproved today by the president's special commission.

Acting Secretary Davis announced that the department would be governed by the commission's recommendation. Meanwhile, however, he has referred its communication to the chief of army engineers for a study and report.

The major reasons assigned by Chairman McKenzie for the decision of the commission were that a temporary lease might cause delay by congress in establishing a final policy with respect to the great Alabama plant, and that the company obtaining a temporary lease could so "dig in" in the ground by erecting buildings and facilities that it would have the advantage if congress finally should determine on a permanent private lease.

The commission's decision with respect to temporary leasing of the project was unanimous. It was reached after a study of a number of replies to an inquiry sent out some months ago to members of congress and others interested in the question.

Power facilities at Muscle Shoals will not be completed as early as had been anticipated some months ago, but members of the commission expect the plant to be ready for operation when congress meets in December. This, they think, will tend to expedite congressional determination of a Muscle Shoals policy, looking either to government operation or to private leasing.

TENN. EVOLUTION TEACHER BECAME VOLUNTARY "GOAT"

New York, June 10—John T. Scopes, young Tennessee high school teacher, brought to sudden fame by being made defendant in a suit charging him with violation of the anti-evolution law, of his state stood tonight evidently ill at ease before 100 persons at the Civic Club and stammered a brief explanation of his stand.

He said that the case was a "fight for freedom of thought, not a fight to test only constitutionality of the law or whether John T. Scopes is a criminal." He said that he had been "shoved into the case" but that he became a voluntary "goat."

Mr. Scopes said the question of evolution is not a Tennessee question only. The people in that state were not worked up over it, he said, and few gave much consideration to it until outside influence was brought to bear and the intolerance of the law attracted nation wide attention.

Mr. Scopes said that the case had its origin in a "soda water session in Robinson's drug store on Main street in Dayton, Tenn., where all the world's questions are settled and where any politician could get some real 'dope' on any question he might have before him."

Mr. Scopes said he told "the drug store philosophers" that he thought every school teacher in Tennessee who was teaching evolution was violating the law and finally he agreed to allow a test case to be made over his own teachings in the Dayton schools.

STEEL WORKER FATALY INJURED IN NEW HAVEN

New Britain, Conn., June 10.—(AP)—Julius Putnam of New Haven, a steel worker, was fatally injured here this afternoon when he fell from a sixty foot staging while at work on the addition being erected at the Smalley school. He was taken to the New Britain General hospital where he died an hour later. Dr. John Turney, acting medical examiner said death was due to shock and from possible internal injuries. The man suffered several fractured ribs and severe lacerations.

EYE WITNESS TESTIFIES IN DOROTHY PERKINS CASE

New York, June 10.—(AP)—Solo eye witness to the shooting, Harry Brown today testified at the murder trial of Dorothy Perkins that she confessed to firing the shot that ended the life of her suitor, Thomas Templeton.

Unshaken through the long cross-examination of the defense, Brown held to his testimony of the events of St. Valentine's night, which ended when Dorothy is alleged to have fallen across the body of Templeton, crying, "I killed him, but I didn't mean it."

MISSOURI OPPOSED TO DEFENSE TEST JULY 4

Washington, June 10.—(AP)—Opposition to a defense test on July 4 was telegraphed today to Secretary Davis by Governor Baker, of Missouri, addressing the New York board of trade, today.

"Americans today find themselves governed by so many contradictory and ridiculous laws that all law has been brought into disrepute," he said. "The outlining of the state's case was put off until tomorrow morning.

Preceding it, however, Stewart will make several motions and tonight the first session of the actual trial promised to be a wordy legal battle.

Plasterers' Strike Involves $75,000,000

Leading New York Contractors Indicate Appeal May be Made to While House to Avert Disaster.

New York, June 10.—(AP)—A plasterers' strike affecting a $75,000,000 steel construction by the George A. Fuller company, Thompson Starrett company and the Long Island Engineering and Construction company in Chicago, Detroit, Washington, Toronto and New York was announced today by the officials of the International Plasterers' union.

The strike was called, according to International President Edward L. McGivern, because of the refusal of the contractors to sign an agreement excluding the bricklayers from sharing jurisdiction in those cities on plastering jobs.

The walk-out is expected to bring to a head a long-standing under-union controversy between the plasterers and bricklayers. The labor department at Washington was understood to be already engaged in attempts at arbitration.

Leading contractors here said tonight if the situation developed as now indicated appeal would be made to the White House to avert wide disaster to the building trade.

TO PROHIBIT POISON GAS OR BACTERIA IN WAR

Geneva, June 10—Without a dissenting voice the international conference on the control of trade in arms and munitions tonight adopted the text of a special protocol prohibiting the use of poison gas or bacteria in time of war for which the American delegation is sponsor. This obviates the necessity of President Coolidge calling a special conference at Washington, as he was reported ready to do if it was found impossible to obtain results at Geneva.

The protocol will be opened for signature the same day as the convention on arms traffic and will remain open until September 30, 1926. Ratifications will be sent to the French government and the protocol will be operative for each signatory from the date of ratification, and from that moment each power will be bound as regards other powers which have already ratified it.

After a long debate the conference, with the object of strengthening the convention, voted to restore armored cars, which the military committee had decided to exclude. They will figure in the first category of arms traffic and will be subject to the widest publicity and control.

Concerning airplanes, the conference decided that, within a half year after delivery, all nations must publish a list of exportations of both aircraft and motors, to include the number exported and countries to which they were forwarded.

BELGIUM WON BALLOON RACE FOR GORDON BENNETT CUP

Brussels, June 10.—(AP)—Belgium has won the first renewal of the Gordon Bennett cup race for lighter than air craft. This fact became definitely known tonight when news reached Brussels of the landing of M. Veenstra, piloting the Belgian bag Prince Leopold, at Cape Torinans, Spain, after having traversed more than 800 miles. Torinana is on the Atlantic coast about 50 miles from Corunna.

Previously Veenstra had not been heard from since the race started near here on Sunday afternoon. The announcement that he had landed was welcomed by the Aero club of Belgium, because it has precluded the necessity of making a ruling whether Wade T. Van Orman, the American aeronaut who piloted the Goodyear III but who fell into the sea off Ushant light, after having flown 441 miles, should be disqualified. Van Orman was picked up by the steamer Vaterland, and there was some question as to whether or not this did not eliminate him from the race, although he had gone farther than the other pilots who had reported. He led Ernest De Muyter, Belgium's champion, who flew 422 miles.

Although Belgium is the winner of the race, the heavy expense of staging the Gordon Bennett event for four consecutive years may cause the shifting of the race to some other country next year. It is considered likely that should the United States put in a bid for the privilege of holding the race in 1926, it will be accepted.

OTTO KAHN TO STUDY HIGH SOCIETY CRIME MYSTERIES

New York, June 10—Roger Wolff Kahn, the 17-year-old son of Otto H. Kahn, international banker, who spends his evening as leader of a jazz orchestra, announced tonight he has decided to give his daylight hours to the solution of "high society crime mysteries."

The revelation was made at a dinner in the Hotel Biltmore where young Kahn entertained Lieutenant Dennis Mahoney, president of the New York Detective's Association and about a dozen other members of the police force. It was also revealed that young Mr. Kahn has been made an honorary member of the police department with the rank of detective.

MANGLED BODY FOUND SIDE OF RAILROAD TRACKS

Windsor, Conn., June 10—Mangled beyond recognition a body found by the side of the railroad tracks this morning at Windsor Heights, near station thirteen and one half, was identified as Benjamin J. Cassidy of 405 Capitol avenue, Hartford, an assembler at the Underwood Typewriter company. No means of identification was found save a manufacturer's mark on a wooden leg, the Garvie Artificial Limb company of Hartford, and a man sent for from this company established Cassidy's identification.

CAILLAUX FOR SETTLEMENT OF THE INTER-ALLIED DEBTS

French Minister of Finance Informs Finance Committee of the Chamber of Deputies That Specific Negotiations Should be Entered Into — Object is to Seek Loan in United States When Financial Condition is Stabilized.

Paris, June 10—The necessity of settling the problem of inter-allied debts was the point on which M. Caillaux, minister of finance, insisted when he appeared before the finance committee of the chamber of deputies today.

Specific engagements with the interested powers ought to be entered into, he declared, and among the eventual measures which he was considering, when once France's financial situation had been brought back to a healthy condition, was the issue of a foreign loan, particularly in the United States.

EUROPEAN SECURITY TALK IS LESS REASSURING

Geneva, June 10.—(AP)—European security talk took a sensational angle today when Austen Chamberlain, British secretary of foreign affairs, made a diplomatic, but stinging, attack on the publication of misleading statements about the proposed allied note to Germany. It appears that M. Briand, French foreign minister, and Mr. Chamberlain agreed not to divulge the contents of the note until it was delivered to Germany, however, some accounts of its contents, alleged to be one-sided and misleading, have appeared in print in some countries.

Mr. Chamberlain's communique insisted that no advantage was to be gained in commenting on the communication before its delivery, and announced that the text would be published in a day or two. The continued exchange of views between great Britain and France followed the lines indicated in Mr. Chamberlain's speech at Geneva rejecting the protocol and his later exposition of the problem of European security in the house of commons.

The British spokesman said that the communique was not intended in any way to reflect upon M. Briand—who is already proceeding to Paris by automobile—or any member of the French or British delegation, but was merely designed to call attention to the distortions and rumors concerning the present status of the security negotiations.

While the British have refused details, it is understood they object to articles failing to point out that the proposed pact of security would be mutual so as to operate among all four powers, and to those neglecting to emphasize the importance of the role of arbitration in the peace arrangements which will be proposed by Germany.

COUNTY COMMISSIONERS APPEAL TO GOVERNOR

Hartford, Conn., June 10—Fourteen county commissioners, representing every county in the state, appealed to Governor Trumbull in an interview today to veto a bill which would allow sheriffs to make purchases and pay all expenses of jails without supervision of the commissioners, as at present. The commissioners declared the bill had come from the judiciary committee during the last of the session and that in their opinion may have been incorrectly passed, due to last minute haste. No public hearing was given they said, and the bill was lost sight of in both the senate and house as a measure to enable sheriffs to purchase jail supplies under the supervision of the commissioners.

The commissioners told the governor that all sheriffs who had been interviewed were up and down on the bill, that it would increase efficiency in county management and that there was no apparent reason for enacting the present law. They further declared that allowing the sheriff to spend county money would necessitate two sets of books, that friction might arise between the commissioners and sheriffs and that the bill put no restrictions on the amounts the sheriffs may spend.

The two branches of the county government now work in harmony, it was explained but should any disagreement arise difficulties might be presented in making up the annual budget, as under the bill, the sheriffs would not be accountable to any one for amounts spent, reports or budget estimates.

Sheriff Edward W. Dewey last night said that he heard of the bill for the first time yesterday, and was in favor of leaving the law at present with purchasing and paying powers with the commissioners.

TO TAKE ACTION TO PREVENT KLAN RIOTS

Clinton, Mass., June 10—With scores of Klansmen and anti-Klansmen nursing cuts and bruises and 37 men who are alleged to have participated in the rioting between the two factions early this morning released on bail pending their arraignment in district court on June 20, selectmen have decided to ask Governor Alvan T. Fuller to call a conference of state police officials, Berlin and Clinton police and town government heads for the purpose of discussing means of preventing a repetition of such rioting.

Selectmen regard the situation as so acute that Chairman Eugene McCarthy said tonight that immediate steps would have to be taken by the state officials to prevent further disturbances which might have serious results.

Toronto, June 10—The end of what leaders called "the bitterest combat the church in Canada has ever known," was reached today when 700,000 Methodists, Presbyterians and Congregationalists united to form the United Church of Canada.

At midnight, by act of parliament, the three separate denominations ceased to exist, although a Presbyterian group is continuing its fight against the fusion. ### 67-YEAR-OLD MAN ADMITS SHOOTING MAN FROM AMBUSH

Waterbury, Conn., June 10—Confronted with the 12 gauge shot gun he is said to have used in the shooting, James Gizzi, 67, late today confessed to murdering Donato K. Gaudiosi, 45, shot down from ambush within 200 yards of his home early Monday.

After he told police of his dream of the crime, Henry C. George, 14, who lives in the northern section of the city where the shooting took place, today, led police to a rock, 150 feet from where the body was found. The gun was found under the rock.

The gun was identified as that belonging to James Gizzi, 67, years old boarder in the Gaudiosi home, arrested charged with the murder shortly after the body was found. Confronted with the gun, police say Gizzi broke down and confessed the slaying. Ten minutes before he admitted the murder he had talked and laughed with detectives and maintained he had shot no one.

Gizzi owned two shotguns, the police said. One gun was found in his room shortly after the murder. Without disclosing their quest authorities have conducted a wide search of the woods and fields near the scene of the crime, hoping to find the second gun which Gizzi possessed. The shot found in the wounds of the dead man and shells found in a shack sometimes occupied by Gizzi correspond with the size of those used in the gun that led to the confession, police said.

HARRY K. THAW HAS RETURNED TO NEW YORK

New York, June 10—Harry K. Thaw returned to the bright lights of Broadway tonight, ordered a $2.50 table d'Hote dinner and spent the evening quietly sipping ice water with a bevy of chorus girls at a night club.

Mr. Thaw, attired in a gray business suit, carried on an animated conversation with one of the girls while the other conversed with his secretary and body guard who sat at the same table.

Occasionally one of the girls would leave and Mr. Thaw would graciously rise in the debonair manner that made him a Broadway favorite years ago.

When the night club filled up as the evening gave way to morning, only a few seemed to know Mr. Thaw was in their midst. Mr. Thaw was in the best of spirits. Although he was never boisterous he seemed to be enjoying himself immensely.

DANIELSON AND PUTNAM NEWS

DANIELSON

It has been said by one of the authorities on nsuch subjects that the textile products exhibit of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association that opens at the state armory in Danielson this (Thursday) evening will be the finest thing of the kind ever arranged in southern New England. This lice should mean a great deal to all of by eastern Connecticut's people, and it len probably will. The exhibitors are not out to make money. The show will record a financial loss to the majority of them. What they have had in mind and what they have achieved—beyond their fondest dreams, it may be said,—is a showing of what mills in eastern Connecticut and their allied industries are doing. A real treat awaits those who visit the exposition, make no mistake about this.

Warden Walter Anderson at the opening of the exposition will present a gold key, symbolical of the freedom of the borough of Danielson, to Norman Parkhurst, Danielson, president of Eastern Connecticut Mills association. Speaker N. L. Darbie of the Connecticut house of representatives, will be master of ceremonies for the evening. The principal address of the evening will be delivered by E. Kent Hubbard, president of the Manufacturers' Association of Connecticut. Other speakers—and they all will be brief—will be William A. Spratt, president of the Blackstone Valley Mills' association; Harry C. Meserve, of Boston, secretary of the National Association of Cotton Manufacturers, and Ezra Dixon, president of the Southern New England Textile club.

Every last detail of the exposition had received attention Wednesday and it will be 100 per cent. ready for this evening's opening.

The Wing Foot Serenaders orchestra will play at the exposition every evening and Saturday afternoon.

The following reports covering the activities of the Civic federation for the past year tell of the story of an organization's activities that mean a great deal to the unfortunate and afflicted of Danielson.

Twelve years of work by the Civic Federation is the record of its credit as we come to the last meeting of the year this June, 1925. That is indeed just a prosaic statement of fact, but as these years pass in review in the minds of those who have this work on their heart, this statement becomes more than a prosaic fact. In the work of the Federation day by day, month by month, there is an element that lifts it out of the commonplace, there must be the human touch warm, vital, close, which the world's large needs, and to which the people of this community, with the rest of mankind respond. Twelve years of work, not commonplace, but glorified.

As we review this year we realize that there has never been a time when by substantial financial support and appreciative recognition of its work the community has shown greater confidence in the Civic Federation.

The year closes with a gratifying balance in the treasury, and with an efficiency of service surpassed by no other organization of its kind in the State. It is well to note here the invaluabl ework of Mrs. A. H. Armington who has served the Federation as its treasurer, during these twelve years. The importance of her work cannot be over estimated.

There are at present 56 active members and 20 associate members. Nine meetings have been held, with an average attendance of only eight members, but through these few the work of the Federation has been ably administered.

The activities of the Federation have followed the same lines as in past years:—nursing, tuberculosis clinics, social service work and the work in the public schools. The details of all these will be given in the nurse's report, but a few facts are worth repetition.

1224 nursing visits have been made, nearly a hundred more than last year. 191 patients have been served of whom 183 were free patients. 10 children were taken by Miss Boomhower, last summer, to the throat clinic at the Day Kimball Hospital, and 9 others were treated largely as the result of the physical examination in the public schools of the town. This examination has included 1,000 children.

The small-pox epidemic during last summer made it necessary to omit the tuberculosis clinics in June and July, clinic is always omitted in August, but in spite of these omissions 119 patients were given free examination by Dr. Campbell during the year. Some of these were hospitalized, and some treated at home. This work alone justifies the existence of the Federation. In connection with this, it may be well to add that the Federation voted to support the bill asked the Legislature for an appropriation of money to increase the number of beds in the tuberculosis sanatoria of the State, and sent its nurse to represent it at the hearing of the bill.

It is because of the Christmas Seal sale that the tuberculosis work is made possible. Because the Federation is the agent of the State Tuberculosis Association in the selling of the Christmas Seals, it is entitled to have free the services of Dr. Campbell, one of the best qualified experts in the country. Mrs. James M. Paine, the chairman of the committee in charge of the sale at the holiday time, carried the work on most efficiently and $369.-13 was the net amount realized. From this fund it has been possible to supply milk to under-nourishing children in one of our schools.

The social service work has included monthly visit sto the Town Farm, and the distribution of articles o clothing and comfort for those in need.

That the Federation might keep in touch with the activities of similar organizations, Miss Boomhower has attended the Social Workers' Council held at the State Farm for Women, and visited the Seaside Sanatorium at Niantic. She with the president of the Federation attended the meeting of the Connecticut Chapter of the American Red Cross, held in Hartford, as the guests of the local Chapter. They also attended the meeting of the Public Health Association held at Willimantic, and a meeting of the Social Workers' Council of New London and Windham Counties in Putnam.

The Tag Day this year yielded $564.-442 the largest sum ever secured in this way. The officials at the Goodyear, the Dayville and at the Pace mill were most helpful in securing contributions.

Beside the amount already mentioned the Federation would acknowledge the gift of $100 from the Quinebaug Company, $50 from the Goodyear Company, $25 from the Pace Company, $96.50 from the Columbian Commandery No. 4 Knights Templars, Norwich, Connecticut, $200 from the Danielson Chapte rof the American Red Cross, $150, a special contribution from the Connecticut Tuberculosis Association, and $65 from the Good Samaritan Association.

This last amount is the income from the Mary Dexter bequest which has recently become available. This money and all money contributed by the Good Samaritan Association to the Federation must be spent to replenish the articles loaned for the use of patients.

The Federation would also thank the "Windham County Transcript" and the "Norwich Bulletin" for the service rendered in giving publicity to its activities, and in appreciative recognition of its work, and the officials of the Town for the privilizes accorded in the use of the room in the Town Hall Building.

Because of the measure of success in the past, the Federation looks forward with assurance to the future.

PUTNAM

Richard Medbury, two year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Raymond Medbury, was seriously if not fatally injured Tuesday evening when the rear wheel of a three-ton truck passed over his abdomen. At the Day Kimball hospital where he was immediately taken it was found that no bones were broken but it is feared that he is hurt internally.

The accident occurred in a peculiar way. Mr. Medbur yis head of the firm of Medbury & Trowbridge, ice dealers and the truck, which is used for ice delivery, was standing in his yard in the Gary district. The boy was playing on it and in some way managed to release the brakes and the truck started to move. The little fellow jumped off and fell in the path of a rear wheel which passed squarely over him. That he survived was astonishing, and physicians are hopeful that he has not sustained any serious, permanent injury.

ANNOUNCEMENTS

Broadway Theater

The Broadway theater management announces five acts of B. F. Keith vaudeville and a great Paramount feature for the last half of this week. The usual high class entertainment is assured.

Brooks and Smith are a clever team of colored entertainers who sing, talk and dance and call their offering Thunder and Lightning.

Stanton and Adams, two clever entertainers offer a comedy novelty entitled "Off For London."

The youthful players that will be seen in Juvenile Frolics of 1925 are really little artists. This is a miniature musical revue featuring the pirouette champion of the world, Semmy Kreyoff with Dorothy Hirsch, Beatrice Hirsch, Maxine Shequits and Minerva Boskina.

Side lights of life is offered by Mary Manson in Character Impressions.

Alvin and Alvin the European comics will close this fine bill with a bit of acrobatic comedy.

Welcome Home, the James Cruze Paramount production, which will be shown at the Broadway theater today is described as a story rich in humor of the sort that carries a heart-tug with it.

Lois Wilson, Warner Baxter and Luke Cosgrave, the old rheumatic of Hollywood, are featured in the principal roles of the picture, adapted for the screen by Walter Woods and F. McGrew Willis from a Broadway stage play by Edna Ferber and George S. Kaufman.

The story is one of an old man—a widower—who comes to the city to live with his married son and daughter-in-law and so upsets things that the wife tells the husband that either his father or she will have to leave at once—the two of them can't get along together under the same roof. So he leave it to Cruze to straighten everything out in a satisfactory, not to say, most pleasing fashion.

Appearing in support of the leading players are such well known names as Ben Hendricks, Margaret Morris, Josephine Crowell, Alele Watson and others.

A new Kinogram weekly will round out a perfect show.

Mauretania to Make Winter Cruise

The cunard line has announced the intention of sending the crack flyer "Mauretania" on another cruise of the Mediterranean next winter, sailing from New York on February 17th, 1926. The ports of call will be Madeira, Gibraltar, Algiers, Villefranche, Naples, Athens, Haifa (for Jerusalem) and Alexandra, (for Cairo and the Nile.) On the return from Egypt the ship will call at Naples and Villefranche for passengers who remained in Italy or Southern France. Leaving the Mediterranean the ship will go to Southampton, where she will join the regular service to New York. Stop-overs in Europe will be allowed, the ticket being good on the Berengaria, Aquitania or any of the new 29,000-ton steamers of the line.

The itinerary calls for a week in Egypt, which will give ample time to view the wonders that were old when the present world-civilisation began. Two days will be spent in the Holy Land. When the ship makes her return call at Naples, passengers may leave the ship for a tour of Europe and return to New York from Cherbourg, Southampton or Liverpool on any of the steamers of the Cunard line.

The duration of the cruise from New York until it reaches Southampton will be 33 days. Another week will be required for the return to New York for those who do not wish to remain longer in Europe.

Optional shore excursions will be arranged at all ports, including trips to Rome, Pompeii, Nile points and the sacred spots in Palestine, including the River Jordan.

The Mauretania is the world's fastest ship, holding all transatlantic records between Queenstown, Plymouth, Cherbourg, Southampton and New York.

Breed Theater

At last the perfect picture—really the picture without a flaw. Such is The Last Laugh, the U. F. A. production directed by F. W. Murnau, with Emil Jannings as star now being presented at the Breed theater under direction of Universal. This is the one picture which no critics, either in Europe or in New York, has suggested might be improved. Without exception they have said it is sufficient just as it is—that to alter it in the slightest degree would mar it.

Remarkable, revolutionary, in several ways is The Last Laugh, but human and dramatically appealing. It has no subtitles; it has no slap-stick, no cheap movie devices, yet hardened picture goers, critics and fans alike, sit through it spellbound, now laughing, now weeping. It is astonishing how many metropolitan critics have acknowledged proudly that The Last Laugh made them weep and also admitted that it caused them to laugh out loud.

Being devoid of the usual motion picture subterfuges, what is it that gives The Last Laugh its grip? Its humanness and its art. Both its star and its director know human nature and are masters of picture play technique. They go unerringly to the heart of the leading character and lay bare its soul. The character lives before you—it is the tragedy and comedy of actual life the spectators see. No play acting here—reality! It will be the talk of the entire country this season, just as it already is the talk of New York.

THE SECURITY COMPACT

Ever since the close of the war France has been emphasizing its need for security guarantees. Whenever it was sought to participate with other nations in the reduction of armament it has invariably raised the point that it was impossible because there was the necessity of guarding against the uncertainty which it always kept before it of Germany's conduct.

France wanted a security pact in which this country would be involved, so that if Germany should rush to war, as it did before, other countries would stand by their promises and back up France. That effort failed but France has not been discouraged in its desire to obtain such backing. Its suspicions have not been allayed and developments have brought matters to the point where the announced security has been obtained, and it is a pact which includes Germany.

The British stand ready to go to war in case of German aggression. It will act with France for the defense of the Rhine boundary. This four power pact as proposed must await the decision of Germany. But can that country really afford to turn it down?

This is a peace move which has great possibilities. Germany is being put in the position of being trusted, but with the knowledge of all that if it violates the rights of others by making war there will be an immediate unity on the part of the others to oppose it.

It has taken some time to bring about such a guarantee. It is the outcome of failures and persistency. Certain moves have been necessary to hasten the day but the purpose is commendable and the plan appears to be one that should serve to hasten the reestablishment of confidence among the peoples of Europe and get them away from the thoughts of a recurring war. Germany will be expected to refrain from warlike activities to the east as well as to the west and to become a full fledged member of the league of nations. Germany has not as yet given its approval. It will take plenty of time to consider it but in the end it seems improbable that it will be willing to create the impression that it considers other than a peaceful future.

FIGHTING RECKLESSNESS

As the result of one week's work by the New York state authorities in endeavoring to bring about a reduction of reckless auto driving, it is reported that 115 drivers' licenses were revoked and 280 were suspended. After reading such a report we have no doubt that the general reaction thereto will be "Isn't it about time?"

New York has waited for the lead of others states in this direction, and waited much longer than the conditions justified. It is therefore brought face to face with a greater problem than would have been the case had it tackled it sooner. It failed to recognize what was developing much longer than some of the smaller states did and it is only recently that it has established tests for those desiring to obtain automobile licenses.

There is nothing that gives encouragement to the reckless driver like the absence of restrictions. There's a certain number that pay too little respect to regulations but there are those who figure they are not going to do what they know to be right unless they are made to do it. They impose what most of the drivers would regard as needless regulation, and they cause the motor vehicle legislation to increase rapidly, but it is all necessary if the highways are going to be made safe or at least safer than they are.

The mere taking away or suspending of licenses may not eliminate recklessness among drivers. It should nevertheless bring about a big reduction in the amount of it and it is to be realized that there is the deterrent effect of knowing in advance that unless rules and regulations, and the rights of others, are respected the right to drive will be lost.

New York is a large state with many auto drivers, but the revocations and suspensions in one week indicate that conditions are not what they should be but that a move in the right direction is being made by the authorities. It's good effect will appear as the good work goes on.

CLEANING THE HARBORS

Pollution of streams is not a problem for Connecticut alone. Other states have it to wrestle with, or have been dealing with it.

At Newport, R. I., there is much complaint over the fact that the harbor is the dumping place of oil and filth. The Rhode Island shore has its dose of crude oil from tankers at times but the situation at Newport does not appear to be due to that state of affairs.

In looking over the situation and endeavoring to get some relief from it the attention of the state board for the purification of waters has been appealed to but it is found that the board which was named to abate the nuisance in Narragansett bay is without power to act because the problem seems to be one for Newport to deal with through local ordinances.

It might be suspected on first thought that the complained of condition in Newport harbor was due to the vessels located therein, or those passing by, such it would seem is not the case for with attention being directed to the fact that that city has no law forbidding the dumping of refuse oil in its sewers, especially from garaged, and under such conditions it is inevitable that the harbor should be oily and filthy, and such conditions can easily call forth complaint from bathing beaches and yachts.

The Rhode Island board for the purification of waters has no hesitancy in stating that the problem offers no insurmountable difficulty, that if it had authority it could quickly put a stop to the condition and therefore points out that the task is one which Newport should shoulder. When Newport complains about a condition for which it responsible it ought not to be a very difficult job for it to apply the remedy. Whether all of Newport's trouble is local or not it is evident that the municipal contribution to the undesirable conditions calls for early suppression if improvement is to be obtained. It cannot continue to dump the things it complains of in its own harbor and expect others to shoulder the blame.

WHERE UNITY WILL HELP

If we can judge by the fact that Premier Painleve has left for the Moroccan front, things are not going as well for the French in northern Africa as desired. Apparently it is necessary to adopt new methods in order to suppress the activities of the Riffians and bring the situation there to a speedier close.

The necessity of quickly suppressing the revolt, if it is going to be done can be fully appreciated, and while both Spain and France have been meeting with less success than expected the possibilities of a combined action with the Riffs in the middle would seem to be good for putting an end to the disorders in Morocco.

Thus there is much to be expected from the conference to be held in Madrid for the purpose of working out plans for combined naval and military operations.

The situation is really an international one. By international agreement Spain was made the protector of a certain part of Morocco. Its zone of control is in the northern part extending back from the coast. For a southern administrator in Morocco the international agreement of the powers settled upon France.

The Riffs have not been partial. They have opposed both of these protectors. They struck at Spain first and with so much success that the Spanish were driven to coastal points. Then came the rebound against the French which is now underway and which has met with a certain amount of success. At least they have met with no discouragement that has caused them to turn back and abandon efforts to drive the sultan's protectors from the country.

It is a case now of either yielding to the Riffian leader, who is of course a subject of the sultan, or of breaking up that revolt and putting Abd-el-Krim in his place. Whether France can do it alone without great effort and expense is a question. By joining hands with Spain the task will be lessened and the result quickened.

PROMPT DENIALS

On his return to this country Otto Kahn hastens to deny the statements attributed to him concerning the plan of this government for adjusting its war debts abroad. This completes the denials by the trio of prominent Americans who were quoted as commenting unfavorably upon the administration's plans. Others who have done the same thing are former Attorney General George W. Wickersham and former Ambassador James W. Gerard.

There isn't anything much worse than misquotation and misrepresentation. It was with surprise that they were claimed to have criticized this country's plan because of the prominence of the men and because of the fact that they were on foreign soil at the time and standing in the position of crying down the attitude of their own country. They made a bad impression at home and it could hardly have been regarded as the act of a good citizen by the other nations. Their denials were the logical result of the unenviable position in which they were placed. It was not only unfortunate to be misquoted but it is distressing, especially if what was claimed runs so completely contrary to personal feeling and the efforts that were made to avoid anything that might be regarded as criticism.

Mr. Kahn takes pains to point out that he was scrupulously careful not to speak in public concerning the debts and on one occasion took care to warn friends that too much dependence should not be placed upon reports coming from this country until there as a complete understanding of the facts.

It is well that complete denials have been made, and it can only be hoped that they will be table to overtake the misrepresented statements with which they were charged.

EDITORIAL NOTES

The city meeting seemed to be pretty much of one mind as to what was needed and what wasn't.

Thus far the June weddings do not appear to be breaking as many records as the weatherman.

Perhaps you can understand why there has been a hurry call for bathing suits so early in June.

The man on the corner says: Are you among those who are now complaining that it is too cool?

It is quite evident that the evolution case in Tennessee is going to resolve itself into Bryan vs. Darrow.

China has long had its troubles but it will be going from the frying pan into the fire if it embraces bolshevism.

Germany is told where it has failed to live up to the provisions of the Versailles treaty. Will it hasten to meet requirements?

The opinion is offered that if the federal judges are entitled to freedom from income tax on their salary the president should be also. Why not? But why shouldn't everyone, officeholders and all, pay their part of the tax?

FELICIA USES STRATEGY

When her husband was departing for his office Felicia said to him "Jack, dear, will you be so kind as to step into one of the florists near your building and have one of those lovely Claire Pernet roses sent out to Ethel Wynn? I can't leave Nancy girl to go downtown. She has a little cold, you know. But this is Ethel's birthday, and I do wish her to know that I haven't forgotten it."

"I'd better make a note of it." Jack pulled out his pencil, and Felicia thought what an obliging dear he was, but in the evening when he told her that he had not sent a Pernet rose, after all, she could not quite hide her disappointment.

"Well, you see, they didn't have any of them roses in the place where I went, and I thought anyway that a nice bunch of violets would really be more of a remembrance than just one rose. Don't you think so yourself?"

"Yes, maybe, in some circumstances, and it's all right. The only reason I cared was that in college we called Ethel our 'Yellow Rose of Texas,' because she was born in Texas, and ever since we were graduated I've sent her a yellow rose on her birthday. But it doesn't matter."

"I'm sorry, Felicia. If I'd only known, I wouldn't have made such a mistake. How would it do to send her a yellow rose tomorrow?"

"Tomorrow isn't her birthday," laughed Felicia, "and probably she'll be out all day displaying her lovely violets."

The next morning Jack paused after his good-by kiss to ask if there were any commissions. He said he could take time at noon for anything she wanted. "I wish to make the amends honorable," he remarked grimly.

"I should like to have this month's Household Bulletin," answered Felicia, and in the evening she asked if he had been able to get it. He stepped into the hall and returned with a large magazine which he proudly laid in her lap. It was not the Household Bulletin.

"I think this is the very best of all the household publications," he said. "See what bautiful illustrations it has."

"Yes, they are beautiful," agreed Felicia, turning the pages languidly. She decided not to tell him that she had particularly desired the Bulletin because she was following a special course of instruction in home kindergarten work.

It was about two weeks after this that Jack, who was out of town on business, wrote to her to get tickets for a certain play. "We can park Nancy girl somewhere and you and I can have a wild time for once."

Felicia's eyes twinkled mischievously as she read his gay letter, and when he asked anxiously on the afternoon of his return whether she had the tickets for that evening she said that of course she had. Then she handed him a little oblong envelope.

"Why, this isn't the play I wanted to see," he burst out. "I wanted to see 'The Battersea Boy.' Really, I don't care for——"

"But, Jack, dear, I think this play is better than 'The Battersea Boy,' so I got tickets for it," explained Felicia demurely.

"Well I don't see why you did that, when I expressly told you that we ought to see 'The Battersea Boy.' I don't understand your doing this at all, Felicia," he said gravely though gently.

"My dear," she explained, "no longer ago than last week when I suggested asking your father and mother to Sunday tea, you invited them to dinner. I wasn't prepared for a company dinner, but I did the best I could."

"I see the point," her husband admitted.

"Anyway," and here Felicia laughed, "these despised tickets are for tomorrow night, you may notice, and I got them for the Drakes. They are going to keep Nancy girl this evening while we see 'The Battersea Boy.' Here are the tickets for that."

"I begin to realize," said Felicia's husband, "that you, like most people, want what you want when you want it"—Chicago News.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Railroads and Bus Lines.

Mr. Editor: In your very interesting and sound comment of May 21st upon the regulation of interstate bus lines, a passing statement is made that the railroads are being taxed to pay for the roads on which these busses operate.

Facts available from a recent survey by John E. Walker, former tax adviser to the treasury, indicate that the rail lines contribute less than 4 per cent. of the funds constituting the highway program for 1923. Some $35,000,000 is shown to be a fair apportionment to highway uses out of a total of $330,000,000 taxes paid by the rail lines in that year.

In the same year, they secured from the carriage of finished motor vehicles and parts, and from road building materials, more than $400,000,000—8 per cent. of the total freight revenue. This did not include the new tonnage moving to rail heads over the improved roads.

Over and against this, it was found that for the following year of 1924, the total of special taxes paid by the motor vehicles was equal to 46 per cent. of the total highway bill and 92 per cent. of the estimated main state highway system construction and maintenance charges for the year. Including personal property taxes of $90,000,000, motor taxes were more than equal to the entire state highway construction and maintenance program.

In 29 states where segregation of data was made, it was found that trucks were 13 per cent. of the total vehicles registered, and paid 25 per cent. of the registration fees. Information was not available to show what ratio existed in gasoline taxes paid, but it is self evident that with greater use and less mileage per gallon the trucks paid very considerably more proportionately in gasoline taxes.

According to official sources, 31 states now have common carrier motor vehicle laws which provide for certificates of public convenience and necessity, issued by a state board or commission.

Professor H. B. Trumbower, bureau of public roads, speaking before the midwest transportation conference on May 28th, 1925, said:

"There is no close analogy between the interstate and national service performed by rail carriers and the service rendered by these common carrier busses and trucks operating over our highways. The fact that they cross a state line makes them interstate carriers. Nevertheless the field of their operation is still local in most cases, the same as intrastate carriers. In the state of Washington where common motor vehicle operations have been greatly developed the average length of the motor bus route is 25 miles and 76 per cent. of the motor bus routes are less than 40 miles in length; the average length of the motor truck route is but 20 miles. In New Hampshire the average length of the motor bus route is 10 miles; 91 per cent. of the bus routes are less than 15 miles in length. In Connecticut the motor bus routes average 16 miles. All this goes to show that the motor bus business is of local character and that where interstate operations are encountered they are also local operations which happen to cross state lines."

The same speaker stated that 15 states have not passed any legislation pertaining to the state regulation of common carrier motor busses and trucks, of which Massachusetts is one. It is apparent, therefore, that state regulation is the first step necessary and desirable in Massachusetts. In this respect, the editorial is justified, but the statement that rail lines are furnishing the highways, through taxes, does not seem warranted by the facts.

Very truly yours,
ALFRED REEVES.

From Small Beginnings

Jean Godin, the Humble Workman, Friend of Labor

Less than 100 years ago the name of Fourier was a great name in the United States. Many people, attracted by the philosophy of the Fourier school, endeavored to bring about the day when all men should be happy and prosperous by establishing colonies in various places. Thus at Brook Farm, in Massachusetts, at Phalanx, N. J., and in some 29 other places communities were established, where groups of people of like interests endeavored to carry on work in such a way that all would be prosperous, all would be contented and all would have an equal share in the joys of life.

Among the people who aided in establishing such communities was a Frenchman, Jean Godin, who gave no less than 100,000 francs to establish a Fourier community in Texas. None of these communities thrived for any long period of time, but there are still people who look back with happy memories to the days of their lives in one of the "phalanxes." Jean Godin was very much in earnest in his wish to bring about the time when earth should be a heaven for poverty and to hard work. Indeed, he had been little better than a tramp when he went throughout France, doing odd jobs and plying his trade. Being honest and industrious, he prospered.

If he had but known it, he might have urged all people to be like himself—very much in earnest and quite willing to work long and hard. Those two characteristics are in reality two of the keys to success. After some years of hard toil Jean Godin owned his own shop and had to employ others to help him. Without education, without help from others, he had become his own master well before he was 30. He saw to it that his shop did honest work always for every one.

Consequently, as the years went on, Jean Godin became a very rich man. The best of it is, he tried to spend his money for the good of others. He wrote books; he advocated plans for improvement of labor conditions; he gave money for the Texas colony; he gave his workmen pensions when they became unable to work longer; he educated them and their children; he paid wages when workmen were sick, or when they were injured, and when he died he left a great fortune to the interests of working people. "Why don't you spend your money on yourself?" some asked him once. "I do spend it on myself," he replied, "for when I help others, I am helping myself, too. Nature meant all men to live happily, and I can be happy only when others are happy." Jean Godin, the tramp, had become Jean Godin, the philantropist—one who loved his fellow man.

IN THE PUBLIC EYE

The Marquis Louis C. de Chambrun, who has been designated by the French government to represent it at the celebration about to take place in Boston in honor of the 150th anniversary of the battle of Bunker Hill, is a great grandson of General Lafayette, who one hundred years ago this month laid the cornerstone for the Bunker Hill Monument. The mother of the Marquis de Chambrun, who passed away in 1902, was the last surviving granddaughter of Lafayette. The Marquis is an officer in the French army and at one time was military attache of the French embassy at Washington. Recently he has been engaged in the French warfare against the Riff bandits in Morocco. He is a brother-in-law of Nicholas Longworth, speaker-elect of the United States house of representatives, and has the rights of an American citizen, even though of French origin, since the United States government conferred such rights upon all descendants of Lafayette soon after the Revolution.

Stories That Recall Others

Satan Leading On?

The well known minister had retired from the ministry because of age, but continued to attend church. He was a saintly man and one time he and his family entered the church just as the congregation was singing Holding the Fort.

It was at the verse which goes "see the mighty host advancing, satan leading on" that the entire family led by the father came in and was seated. The situation was so novel that there were many smiles in the congregation.

Sense of Touch.

A damage suit, resulting from an automobile accident, was in progress recently and the attorney for the defendant was cross examining some witnesses who had testified that they had seen the accident from a barn lot two blocks away. They all described the accident in detail. The last one to be called was an old man small in stature and quite gray.

The attorney asked: "Isn't it a fact that you have very poor eyesight?"

"Yes, sir, it is," he replied.

"Isn't it a fact that you can't see to read a paper?"

"Yes, sir, it is."

"And isn't it a fact that you can't see well enough to distinguish one piece of money from another?"

"Yes, sir, it is, but I can feel it mighty nicely," he replied excitedly.

BUSINESS BEDTIME STORIES

THE BABY HARES GO TO SCHOOL EARLY.

Early to school is the way to learn
And a place in the work of the world to earn.
—Old Mother Nature.

In all the Green Forest and on all the Green Meadows there are few little people who go to school as early as the children of Jumper the Hare. Yes, sir, that is a fact. You see, most babies are for a while too helpless to do anything at all but eat, sleep and grow. Most of these babies. If they are the babies of little people who have fur, are born in a hidden home where they are safe from the eyes of enemies who chance along.

But the baby Hares do not have any such home. They are not born in a hole down in the ground as are the baby Foxes and the baby Chucks and some other babies. They are born in a little nest made on the surface of the ground. It would not be safe for them to remain long in such a nest. So old Mother Nature has seen to it that they do not have to stay long in this home. They can move about when only a day old.

This being so they really have to go to school the very first day. Any one who learns anything may be said to go to school. The little Hares learned the things that it is important for Hares to know, and they begin this learning almost as soon as they draw their first breath.

Jumper didn't have much to do in teaching his four babies. He left that for Mrs. Jumper. The very first thing she taught them was to squat low and not move. She explained to them that until their legs were long enough and strong enough for them to depend on them to escape enemies, they must depend on not being seen. This they could do only by squatting and keeping perfectly still. Then they looked so much like their surroundings that the chance of being seen was very small.

The four little Jumpers learned by doing just what Mrs. Jumper did. If she hopped about, they hopped about. If she suddenly "froze," which means suddenly sat perfectly still, they did the same thing. It wasn't long before they noticed that she did this only when she heard some one coming, or heard some strange sound. So they learned that that was the thing to do. They were only a week old when Mrs. Jumper gave a little warning thump and squatted so still that not even a whisker moved. The four little Jumpers did the same thing, wondering what it was that mother was glaring at so very hard. Presently along came a very fine looking gentleman in red. He wore a very beautiful red coat. His face was sharp and he carried a wonderful tail. It was, of course, Reddy Fox. He was trotting along as if he had nothing particular on his mind.

Suddenly he stopped and began to sniff the air. His nose was pointed straight toward Mrs. Jumper, but it was clear that he didn't see her. However, Reddy doesn't have to see. All he has to do is to follow that wonderful nose of his. This is what he did now, and that nose led him right straight toward Mrs. Jumper. The little Jumpers saw this and they wondered what it was all about.

At last Reddy was so close to Mrs. Jumper that she dared wait no longer. With a mighty bound away she went. Away went Reddy after her. It was all so sudden that the two were gone before the little Jumpers could have moved if they had wanted to. But each one had learned a lesson. They didn't have to be told that mother was afraid of this fine-looking fellow in red. If mother was afraid, of course there was much greater reason for them to be afraid. They had learned who one of their enemies was. So already they were beginning to learn in the school of experience, which is the school in which all the little people who wear feathers and fur are trained.

VERDICT FOR $573.00 IN SUIT BY PASSENGER IN MOTORCYCLE

Frank Waszuk, 34, of this city won a verdict for $573.80 in the superior court here Wednesday afternoon in his suit against William J. Schoonman of New London for injuries he received when riding as a passenger in the motorcycle driven by Ignatius Zukowski on Mohegan Hill on the night of Sept. 7, 1924.

The jury returned its verdict about 5:40 after being out about an hour, following the charge by Judge Isaac Wolfe, which followed the arguments by Attorney Charles L. Stewart and Frank L. McGuire, counsel respectively for the plaintiff and defendant.

Waszuk sued for $1,000 damages, claiming that the automobile driven by Schoonman on the way up Mohegan hill cut out from behind another machine ahead of it and ran into the Zukowski motorcycle which was coming down the hill. Waszuk received a 7-inch wound in his scalp and was in the Backus hospital for nine days. He also suffered bruises to his knee and leg.

Testimony for the plaintiff was given by Dr. Clarence G. Thompson, Frank Waszuk, Otis S. Fairbanks and Ignatius Zukowski, the latter the driver of the machine which had New Jersey registration, but the driver had a Connecticut operator's license.

The plaintiff's attorney rested his case after the morning session of court and the defendant's side was heard in the afternoon. Irving T. Schubert, the state policeman who investigated the accident, William J. Schoonman, the defendant who was driving the automobile, and his daughter and son, Barbara and Leonard, who were in the car, were witnesses for the defendant.

The jury in the case consisted of William W. Ives, Harry H. Hill, Alvin L. Hale, Norwich; Henry Hart, Jesse O. Crary, James Butler, Preston, Willis Morgan, Merton H. Bartlett, John F. Gardiner, Griswold; Merton Bugbee, Lisbon; William B. Darling, Sprague; Michael A. Griffin, Voluntown.

Waszuk has a suit against Schoonman for $1,000 damages.

ACADEMY ORCHESTRA GIVES NOTABLY FINE CONCERT

The twentieth annual concert by the Academy orchestra, and one of the best in recent years, was given Wednesday evening at Slater hall before an audience of 800 which was generous in well deserved and enthusiastic applause for the players, under the direction of Frederick H. Cranston. The ensemble selections were rendered with fine spirit and understanding, the shadings and change of pace achieved with ease and smoothness and the balance well maintained at all times.

Assisting in the concert were Miss Ruth A. ### FELL OVER CLIFF FROM TOP OF LANTERN HILL

(Special to The Bulletin.)

Westerly, June 10—Alfred Stowell, 18, of Kingston, R. I., a senior at Stonington High school and the second baseman on the baseball team, fell from the top of Lantern Hill, Wednesday afternoon, a distance of about 35 feet on the pond-side of the hill, to the tracks of the narrow gauge railroad from the Silex mine. In his fall he carried a rock down with him, which broke his fall. He was badly bruised and cut on his face, side and back, sustaining a cut three inches long above his eye and a cut four inches long to the bone in his scalp and was unconscious when picked up. Bleeding profusely he was bandaged up and brought to the office of Dr. Michael H. Scanlon in Westerly by two of his companions in an automobile. Following the dressing of his wounds he was taken to the home of C. H. Cowan, 3rd, Stonington, one of his school chums, for the night. The accident happened about 3.30 o'clock, when the "S" club, a society made up of the different athletic teams of Stonington high school, numbering 25 or 30, was at Lantern hill for an afternoon outing.

ROTARY HAS EYES ON THE INTERCITY OUTING

Rotary plans for the next few weeks were discussed at the meeting of the Norwich Rotary club held on Wednesday noon at the Wauregan hotel. Chief among these events is the annual intercity outing to be held at Ashland Park, Jewett City, on July 16th. This affair which is sponsored this year by the Putnam club is expected to be the best ever as the Putnam boys are noted among the Eastern Connecticut clubs as royal entertainers.

The Putnam club has notified the Norwich club that the local club will be in charge of the sports programme for the day. President Weymouth appointed the following as a committee to take charge of the sports Charles J. Twist, chairman, Arthur M. Thompson, Joseph A. Curtis, L. M. Carpenter, Grosvenor Ely and Joseph C. Worth. The local ticket committee is Clarence A. Spear, Edward Jewett and Joseph C. Worth.

Announcement was made of the intercity meeting which will be held in Putnam this (Thursday) evening by Henry Lyon, secretary of the Putnam club. Mr. Lyon said that the district governor of the 31st district would be present and also Al Lavery former district governor of the 30th district. The programme committee has not announced the programme, but it was going to be a dandy.

Other speakers at the meeting were "Bill" Augustin, a former member of the Gloucester, Mass., club, now playing at the Palace theatre in this city with the Augustin Stock company. Bill spoke enthusiastically on Rotary and its meaning and incidentally told of the value of a stock company in the community which takes very little money out of town but spends at least 70 per cent. of its earnings right in the town where it is playing.

Rotarian Charles Stearns of the Albany club was present at the meeting and brought the greetings of Harry M. Clark, a former member of the Norwich club, to the local members. Mr. Stearns was instructed to convey to Harry the best wishes and regards of the club in which he formerly held membership.

There were brief remarks by Joseph C. Worth on his recent trip to Maine. Otto Ernst also spoke briefly.

The speaker of the day was John A. Ferguson who took for his topic Our Flag. Mr. Ferguson told of thousands of years ago the Greek and Roman legions followed an emblem in some form and how through history every nation and tribe has had some rallying standard. Our own flag came into existence in 1777 when on June 14th the Stars and Stripes were unfurled as the flag of the United States of America. Mr. Ferguson closed his talk with reading "The Making of the Flag" by Walter Clair Martin.

President Weymouth presided at the meeting and L. LaRue Bliven was the song leader. There were selections by the visiting Rotarians and guests and a trio number by Mayor Waters, E. Russell Smith and Alfred E. Lillibridge. Joseph N. Weymouth sang a solo as a penalty for being late. One of the features of the luncheon was the delightful left handed solo by Henry E. LaFontaine.

Dr. Hugh B. Campbell was named as delegate to the Cleveland convention next week.

The meeting closed with the singing of the Star Spangled Banner.

FIRST BAPTIST WOMEN HAVE MISSIONARY MEETING

The Womans Home and Foreign Mission Circle of the First Baptist church held its final meeting of the season Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. Charles R. Cross, No. 70 Maple street. The meeting opened at 4 o'clock with the singing of the hymn, My Faith Looks Up to Thee, and prayer by the president, Mrs. Frank Lathrop.

Mrs. Louis A. Wheeler gave a most interesting report of the Baptist Convention held in Hartford, in May, also of the meeting held in New London on May 18th and the meeting at the First Baptist church, Norwich, on May 26th, when Rev. Horace Sloat was the speaker. Mrs. E. LaRue Bliven reported on religious education of children. Miss Marion Lathrop was appointed chairman of the committee for the reading contest.

The committee selected for the anniversary of the Missionary Jubilee in 1927 comprises the following: Mrs. Louis Browning, Mrs. Frank D. Davis, Mrs. David Pulsifer, Mrs. Herbert Willey and Mrs. William Ambuen.

The meeting was then turned over to leader, Mrs. Frank D. Davis. The subject for discussion was Japanese and Chinese of America and a number of interesting papers were read by Mrs. Davis, Mrs. Cross, Mrs. Willey and Mrs. Browning. The meeting closed with prayer. The next meeting of the Circle will be held in September.

BROMLEY WIT RECALLED IN WALL STREET JOURNAL

The witty faculty of Isaac H. Bromley made its impression in New York newspaper life just as it did in Norwich when he was editor of The Bulletin.

In the By-The-Bye column of a recent issue of the Wall Street Journal a writer relates a typical instance of the Bromley wit as follows:

Isaac H. Bromley was one of Horace Greely's editors, and an author besides, in the list with John Hay and Edmund Clarence Stedman. Like Stedman, of the perspicacity of Connecticut, he liked to look upon the stock market when it sparkled. As one of the promptest contemporaries of Mr. Rockfeller, Mr. Bromley went in for oil. His profit was a feeling recollection.

"Well, now," he confided, "I can't tell you how it bothered me all the time I thought that stock was going to make me rich—to know what I should do with the money. I lay awake nights investing it. So many things offered and they all seemed so hazardous and insecure. Then I built houses, and they were always a vexation—I anticipated so much trouble with the plumbers. I must have lain awake in all two or three months trying to circumvent plumbers and make sure that the traps would all be in and the pipes wouldn't burst. Horses, too. Now, I was worried about horses; for, of course, no man rolling in wealth could get along with out horses, and I was almost certain I should get cheated, when I came to buy them, besides standing a smart chance to have a drunken coachman who would bother my life out of me and eventually set fire to the barn.

"Sometimes I thought I would buy a farm and have a sure thing on fresh eggs and sweet cream, but the more I thought of it, the more out of proportion it seemed to regulate my entire scheme of living on the basis of eggs and cream, and so I abandoned it for a house on Murray Hill and life in the city, with all its possibilities of attenuated milk, advanced eggs and robust butter. Then I gave up both schemes, and made up my mind to travel and slosh around. That involved homelessness and dyspepsia, and I dropped that.

"With all this wealth earning, I didn't know what to do with myself. One or two things, however, I was very clear about. For one, I would give several deserving citizens who were having a hard struggle, and hadn't been able to get in on the ground floor of a company that had spouting wells, a thousand dollars apiece just to see how they would act with so much money; and I should buy turkeys by the wagon load at Christmas time and distribute them to the worthy poor. I did get so far in this direction as to inquire of an itinerant poultry vendor what he'd take for his load, but the loathsome pagan put the end of his steel yards in his mouth, looked at me as though he thought I was drunk and deigned to answer.

"Well, all those things gave me so much trouble that like the man who was settling his brothers estate and was 'almost sorry sometimes that his brother had died,' I almost regretted getting in on the ground floor of my oil company and becoming so suddenly embarrassingly rich. It was really a great relief to me when the stock sort of flickered up and went out. It lifted so much care off my mind. I knew then exactly where it was.

"It's a great care, wealth is," opined Mr. Bromley. H. A.

SPEAKING AND SPELLING CONTESTS AT HARTFORD

The participants have prepared for the event by a series of elimination contests between schools in various towns, the several towns then being grouped to determine the "district" champion. The speakers will recite many of the best works of both American and English poets and authors and the factors on which the judges will base decision will be enunciation, gesture and the manner of interpreting the piece.

The spelling contest will follow the lines of the old time spelling bee. The last pupil to remain standing, after "spelling down" the others, will be declared the winner.

One of the state's own wards, Miss Anna Thurman of the New Haven county home, will be a participant in the spelling contest. She won this opportunity after defeating the children in the County home and also in many neighboring schools.

The names of those who will take part in the speaking contest, with the titles of their pieces follow:

ELKS WILL CONDUCT FLAG DAY EXERCISES

Norwich lodge of Elks, No. 430, will conduct the annual observance of Flag day on Sunday afternoon at 4 o'clock with exercises at which the public will be welcome and invitations have been extended to city and town officers and all patriotic organizations.

Swahn's band will give a concert, starting at 3 o'clock in opening the exercises. The orator for the day will be Rev. E. C. Dunbar, chaplain of R. O. Fletcher post, No. 4, American Legion; the History of the Flag will be given by Miss Werth and the Elks' tribute to the Flag by Herman A. Bruckner, a past commander of Fletcher post.

The committee in charge, of which P. E. R. Fitzgerald is chairman, has arranged to have a detachment from the submarine base present.

In his official notice to the Elks lodges upon Flag day, the grand exalted ruler, John G. Price, says:

The attention of the members of the order is again directed to the celebration of Flag day, one of the foremost holidays of the year. The beautiful ritual which has been prescribed by the order for this particular celebration in itself breathes a spirit of patriotism such as is reflected in all of the principles and tenets of the order. A public demonstration under the auspices of the various lodges of Elks on this all-important day could not help but arouse in the hearts and minds of the people of the various communities a greater and more intense reverence for the flag and be fruitful of most beneficial results.

This particular year of all years, marking as it does the one hundred and fiftieth anniversary of the beginning of that great series of patriotic efforts on the part of our forefathers who bore the brunt of the American Revolution, should be the occasion for an extraordinary effort on the part of the various lodges to recall the memories of the men of Lexington, Concord and Bunker Hill who gave so abundantly of their lives, limbs and treasures in order that the way might be opened for those who were to follow to enjoy the blessings and privileges of human life, which in their day were in the balance and threatened with destruction.

As we recall the sacrifices of our forebearers let us incorporate in our Flag day exercises some special tribute to them and exemplify in practical form the patriotic character of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks of the United States of America.

JAIL SENTENCE GIVEN FOR CRIMINAL NEGLIGENCE

William P. Riordan of 18 Laurel Hill avenue pleaded guilty in the superior court at Hartford Wednesday afternoon to the charge of criminal negligence and was given a sentence of four months in jail by Judge Banks. A similar charge against James A. Crawford of 118 Main street was nolled. Judge Creedon of Hartford appeared for Mr. Riordan and made a strong plea for leniency for the young man.

The charge against the two Norwich men followed the automobile accident last Thanksgiving eve on one of the "ten curves" on the Hartford-New London turnpike when their machine in which the two men were riding with Miss Alice Lyons and Miss Laura Bottinelli, both of New London, was wrecked by striking a rock and all four occupants were injured, Miss Lyons died with a fractured skull several days later at a Hartford hospital. The automobile was owned by young Crawford's mother.

ACADEMY CLOSES SEASON WITH VICTORY OVER WESTERLY HIGH

SPORTS

The Academy baseball team closed a rather successful season with a win over Westerly High by a 6-2 score Wednesday afternoon at the Academy campus. The game was close and exciting to the very end. Westerly had not traveled to Norwich to present the locals the game and they made the home aggregation play to win it. For four innings both teams played tight ball each team having no tally to its credit. Then in the fifth the Academy batters got busy and sent across three mere runs which proved enough to win.

The Rhode Islanders gave a good account of themselves even when forced to admit defeat. They displayed the defensive power, their good work robbing the local batters of some sure hits, but these were not bunched and spent for only two tallies.

In the very first inning Westerly drew blood. Salmeno, the first man to face Jarvis hit a single to center and stole second. He scored when Payne repeated with a single to right.

The Academy lads, made up in their half, also scoring a run. Art McGowan, safe on an error by Larsen, stole second and scored on Hinrich's screeching single to left.

Westerly could do no damage for the next seven innings while the Red and White made the fifth their big inning. Carroll, first batter, was retired and traveled in when Jarvis found one of Larsen's deliveries for three bases, the only three base hit of the game. Hinrichs hit a bingle to right and stole second. Larsen did not know whether to vacate or to stick it out. Cimmy came through with another bingle, scoring Hinrichs. Therefore, the Red and White could accomplish no more. However, they gave Westerly another score, in the sixth, when by means of three clean hits, two bases were filled. Larsen, luckily managed to pull together and get out of the hole.

In the eighth Westerly made a valiant try to tie the score, and although they scored one run, it was to no avail W. Dabrowski singled, went to second on an infield error and scored when Greene juggled the ball, hit by Larsen.

In the ninth, Westerly could do nothing and the visitors should have traveled to their home town convinced that they were beaten by a better team.

Jarvis pitched a nice game for the Academy, giving nine Rhode Islanders their three tries and sending them to the bench via the strikeout route. He also came through with the slickest fielding of the game, his three bagger to left.

The record of the home team this year was a creditable one. Out of the eighteen scheduled games, thirteen were won and five were lost, the locals losing to teams of fine reputations. Most of these came about in the early part of the season which also must be taken into consideration. The Red and White have won the Eastern Interscholastic cup and have had the honor of being the only team to have left the mighty Bulkeley aggregation on the tail end of the score. Not so bad a record, eh?

The outlook for the future Red and White teams are favorable. They will be losing only three men through graduation in Captain McGowan, Hinrichs and Carroll and with a team composed of pitchers of Jarvis and Greene's calibre and with six veterans they should win from all comers, including Bulkeley.

The past must give way for the future, so here's luck to the Red and White teams in the future. Score:

HALLVILLE PROVES TOO STRONG FOR POWER TEAM

In the second game of the Norwich Twilight League Wednesday evening, the Hallville baseball team defeated the Eastern Conn., Power Company nine by the score of 5 to 4. The game was loosely played, both teams making their share of misplays, the Eastern Conn., Power Co., leading their rivals in this respect by 11 to 6.

Both pitchers were in fine form, much better than the score of 5 to 4 indicates. Tommy Simcox, pitching for the Eastern Conn., Power Co., was steady throughout, holding his opponents to seven hits, while fanning nine men. Errors figured in the scoring of every run by the Hallville nine, and had his support been up to par, Tommy would have held his own with Mansfield, Hallville's star twirler. Mansfield was invincible for 4 innings, not allowing a hit during that inning of play, and was master of the situation during the entire game.

For the first two innings, neither team scored, Collin's single to center, being the only hit up to the third. In the third, however, Hallville broke into the scoring column when they crossed the plate three times, all three being due to errors. Collins led off with his second hit, a sharp line single to center field, stole second, and came in on an error by McCarthy on Almquist's grounder to short. Almquist, likewise stole second and when McCarthy mussed up Sullivan's roller, crossed the plate, Sullivan going to second. Sullivan scored the third run when Boyd threw wild over second base. This ended the scoring for the inning, but was resumed in the third, when Hallville scored two more runs followed by two more in the fifth. Hallville scored again in the fourth inning. Berberick opened this stanza with a free ticket to first, stole second and scored on a long double into the swamp in right field by O'Connor who later scored when Bogue dropped a throw to first.

It took Big Ed. Harris to start the Eastern Conn., Power Team to hitting. Harris, entered the game in the fifth inning, batting for Botham and nearly took Mansfield's hand off with a terrific line drive through the box. This was the first hit off Mansfield and ruined his chances for a no-hit game. Lord who had walked scored on this hit when Collins threw the ball wild over third. Harris was stranded on the bases, however, when the next three men fanned. Harris presence in the lineup seemed to make a vast difference in his team, for in the seventh inning they threatened to make things interesting before the last man was retired. Harris started it again with a walk, Mansfield keeping the ball away from the plate. After Cormier fanned, Simcox singled between first and second, Harris going to third. Things looked bad for the E. C. P. when Whalen also fanned. Simcox then took second unmolested and both he and Harris scored when Collins and Sullivan collided trying to catch McCarthy's high fly to short centerfield. McCarthy took second on a wild throw and scored when Spicer let Fitzgerald's grounder go through him. Flynn then ended the game by striking out.

BULKELEY - WILBY GAME IS POSTPONED, WET GROUNDS

There is a high possibility that Wilby will come here on Saturday to play the State champions. Further developments in regards to this game materializing will be announced in The Bulletin. At present the team has disbanded for the year, the game with Leominster Mass. High school being the final game of the present season.

MANY NOTED HARNESS HORSES IN LOCAL BAY STATE MEETING

Included in the entry list for the Bay State meeting here next week are many horses of national reputation and horses that will be seen on the Grand Circuit later in the season. Several of these horses will race at Norwich and then at Avon after which they will be shipped to the North Randall track at Cleveland, O., where the Grand Circuit opens.

Among the horses that are best known is Margaret Spangler winner of the $35,000 race at Kalamazoo last season. Another fast horse is Guesswork which lost only one race last season and was the ruling favorite in all races. These two horses will be pitted against each other in the feature event on Thursday's card. Frank Manager is another horse that was one of the Grand Circuit favorites last season and which will be shipped to North Randall after the Avon meet. Norwich is indeed fortunate in having these horses at the local track as they will appear on only one other track on the Bay State Circuit.

Billy Crozier, with the Berry stable will be present next week racing a number of horses which will later go to the major circuit. When Crozier takes a horse in charge it is pretty certain that the horse shows some speed for Billy is very particular about his horse flesh. Others who will be seen at the track this year will be F. S. Whitcomb of Springfield, millionaire horseman who races his stable for simply the fun of the thing. Whitcomb was never known to make a bet on one of his horses or any other. It is simply the love of horse racing that satisfies him. Bill Flemming will again race here. Bill is an old favorite with the light harness boys and has many friends in Norwich. Another is Tom Ashworth, who is well known here and also Johnny Pilgard of Hartford another lover of horse racing.

The Bay State opens its season at Worcester today and the horses will be shipped to Norwich directly after the meet. The track at the Fairgrounds has been put in excellent shape and is expected to be in first class condition when the horses get the word next Wednesday. The entry list is as follows:

MARKET WAS QUIET.

Net gains in the oil shares were generally [illegible] fractions although Texas company [illegible] throughout the new high record for the year.

United States Steel common held relatively firm despite the unexpectedly large decrease during May 400,000 tons in May unfilled tonnage, which brought the orders on hand at the end of the month to the lowest figure since last November. The Independent Steels showed mixed changes, Crucible closing 1 1-8 points higher at 66 1-4, after having sold a point above that figure, while Gulf States Steel dropped from 80 3-4 to 73 5-8, where it was off 1 5-8 on the day.

A rather thin market developed for some of the recently strong public utilities. West Penn Power broke 12 points to 120 on a few sales while Havana Electric, which scored an extreme gain of over twenty points yesterday, fell back six points on profit taking. Electric Power & Light issues were in good demand, the preferred certificates mounting to a new high record for the year. American Foreign Power jumped over four points to 88 3-8 and then slipped back to 87. Good buying also was noted in International Telephone, Ahlbhi Power and LaClede Gas.

Tobacco issues continued to respond to reports of large current earnings. United Cigar moved up three points to 72 and then yielded slightly and American Tobacco and Tobacco Products issues showed net gains of a point or more.

Revival of activity and strength in Robert Reis was based on reports that the company's plants were operating at capacity and that May earnings established a new high record. Moderate gains also were recorded by Central Leather preferred, Ginter company, Pacific Gas and Electric, F. G. Shattuck and Standard Milling.

Renewal of selling pressure against the Northwestern rails sent Union Pacific down one point to 133 3-4, or within a half of the year's low and brought about a similar recession in Chicago and Northwestern. Heaviness also cropped out in New York Central, Atlantic Coast Line and Frisco component, all of which closed more than a point lower. Lackawanna showed independent strength as buying influenced by reports of a coal company merger involving its former subsidiary.

Call money opened at, 4 per cent. and then dropped to 3 3-4, the approach of a tax day apparently having little effect on the volume of lonable funds. Time money and commercial paper rates ruled unchanged.

Renewal of selling pressure against French francs, which dropped over seven points to 4.87 cents, featured the irregular foreign exchange market. Italian and Belgian rates reacted in sympathy but the Scandinavian exchanges held firm. Demand sterling ruled practically unchanged around $4.85 3-4.

CHICAGO GRAIN MARKET.

Chicago, June 10.—(AP)—Wheat prices underwent a sudden fall 7 1-2c per a bushel today from an earlier gain of 4c. The bulge, due chiefly to a rush of buying that resulted from the United States government crop report, was more than offset later through heavy selling to realize profits and to prepare for the first Canadian government report of the season. It was expected the Canadian report would show a probable Canadian wheat yield of more than 100,000,000 bushels in excess of last year's harvest. Closing quotations on wheat were weak, 2 3-4c to 4 1-2c net lower, July $1.60 1-2 and September 1.60 to 1.60 1-4, with corn 3-8 to 1 3-4c down; oats 2c to 2 1-8c off, and provisions at 10 1-2c to 25c decline.

Highest prices of the day in the wheat market came as soon as the market opened. It was only in the final hour, though, that values started downward in good earnest. Then the fact became more and more apparent that an enormous amount of selling which during the first part of the day has been carried on to realize profits had overweighted the market, notwithstanding that the official United States crop figures pointed a probable domestic production 6,000,000 bushels less than recent private estimates had called for.

Corn and oats advanced and reacted in line with wheat. Rye also trailed the leading cereal, and closed 4 3-4@8 1-4c net lower.

Provisions were responsive to the decline both of hog values and of grain.

BOND MARKET.

New York, June 10.—(AP)—Cross currents of trading imparted considerable irregularity to today's bond market, although prices generally held steady and United States government obligations again displayed market strength. Four of the Liberty and Treasury issues scaled new peak prices on a fairly large turnover, which exceeded $1,400,000 for the Third Liberty 4 1-2s.

Interest in new financing was revived by the announcement of J. P. Morgan and company that they would offer for public subscription on Friday a $50,000,000 Belgian thirty-year sec. on per cent. loan, priced at 93 to yield 7.15 per cent. to maturity. Half of the proceeds will be devoted to developments in the Belgian Congo.

Indications that a rival plan of reorganization for the St. Paul railway would be mapped out by interests opposed to the present program contributed to the future reaction of the road's bonds. Several of the Junior liens fell back a point. Chicago, Terre Haute & Southeastern Income 5s, however, advanced 2 3-8 points. Price movements of other rail issues were mixed, with buying interest centered more in speculative than in investment obligations.

The approaching expiration of conversion privileges caused Standard Gas 6 1-2s to break almost 3 points to below 121, compared with their recent record high of 185 1-2. Convertible Oil bonds were strengthened by the improving outlook for the industry and their continued rise imparted a steadier tone to the industrial list.

A $5,000,000 five per cent. bond issue of the New Orleans Public Service company has been purchased by Dillon, Read and company, and will be offered to the public at an early date.

WESTERLY

Washington county, Rhode Island, of which Westerly is the largest town, continues to grow in population for Hopkinton and Charlestown are keeping the pace of other, though smaller towns in reporting their population, according to tentative figures given out Wednesday by the State Census Bureau.

Hopkinton now has a population of 3127, a gain of 421 in the last five years, which is 13.3 per cent.

Bradley, regarded by some as another Woonsocket town, has a population of 1,153, a gain in five years of 150, or 14.5 per cent. This increase compares very favorably with some of the more progressive towns, and exceeds all of the cities thus far announced.

With the tentative figures so far announced there is every indication Washington county will show very substantial increases in its population. On the basis of population, it appears probable it will lead the State.

Exeter shows a steady gain in the last 10 years. In 1915 it had a population of 906. Compared with 1847 at the present time, the increase is 273, or 30.1 per cent., while for the last five years it was 14.5 per cent.

Hopkinton, like Charlestown, shows a drop in 1920 from the 1915 figures. In the latter year the town had a population of 2494, while in 1920 the federal census gave it but 2314, a loss of 180, of 7.7 per cent. The current figures of 2727 show an increase of 14.2 per cent. for the past five years, or after the 10-year period the increase of 17% is 9.2 per cent.

Mrs. Stephen T. Potter, formerly Miss Sarah Burton Wilbur, and one of the oldest women in the town of Hopkinton died at her home on High street here Tuesday afternoon at the age of 96. She was born in Hopkinton Dec. 1, 1827, the daughter of William and Mihitabel Phillips Wilbur. She was a member of the First Baptist Church of Hope Valley.

She leaves two sons, Stephen C. Potter of Hope Valley and John Potter of Providence.

H. B. Joy, a well known Watch Hill summer resident, writing in a recent number of the North American Review, under the heading, "Prohibition Against Human Nature," has this to say:

"Have the American people lost their balance wheel of common sense so that they can no longer understand nature? We might as well legislate against the natural functions of existence as to seek to continue on our present path towards a complete disrespect for our laws and for the natural right of a free people.

"It was once stated that this country could not survive half slave and half free. It is perfectly safe to state today that this country cannot survive with half of its people trying to put the other half of the population in the penitentiaries of our country for following the natural dictates of human instincts.

"There must be some leaders big enough and brave enough to stand out and save this country from the disastrous disregard of our Constitution and of our laws, which laws as they pertain to Prohibition and which Eighteenth Amendment of the Constitution are absolutely contrary to human nature."

The evening being a warm and muggy one the greater part of the evening's drill, in the manual of arms and school of soldier was conducted outside of the armory building. Some of the company members busied themselves in the laying of the cement foundation bead for the Armstrong rifle, on the lawn in front of the armory. The big gun was formerly located at Fort Adams, Newport, R. I., having been brought to Westerly by auto truck.

JEWETT CITY

Postmaster William T. Crumb, received his orders Wednesday afternoon from the superintendent of the First Division of the Railway Mail mail car heretofore operated on the service, with offices in Boston. The train reaching here at 6 p. m., known as train 704, will, beginning June 15, be operated as train 710 which reaches Jewett City at 9:03 a. m. The Boston milk train No. 704 will reach here as usual and will bring made up paper mail in sacks and parcel post. No letters will arrive until 9. The Ashinook Co., the Textile Novelty Co., The Ashland Cotton Co., The Ninigret Co. and the A. B. Burleson Co. will be hard hit by this radical change in operation, as they, the Ashinook company especially, depend upon an early mail, for requisitions on orders, which shall regulate the work of the plants for the day. Then in the afternoon the boat train No. 771 will leave at 4, hence all outgoing mail must be at the post office, not much later than 5 o'clock. On account of space in the baggage car of 704, the Bulletins will arrive as usual, but mails for Voluntown, Glasgo and the R. F. D. route, which are dispatched from this office, will be affected by the change in train schedule. The R. F. D. man, instead of leaving at 7 a. m. for his 25 mile delivery in the outlying districts, will not leave until 10.

Miss Mabel H. McBroomle leaves today (Thursday) for Worcester, Mass., where she will take a special course in corset fitting, at David Hale Fanning's Royal Worcester Corset factory. This course will include not only special training, where the corsets are manufactured, but will be supplemented by a plan of home study and application.

Harris', voted to co-operate with Whatsoever circle and The Pathfinder if htey decide to take part in the Fourth of July parade. Misses Mabel Wilcox, Ethel Fisk, Grace Olin and Beatrice Read were appointed a committee to confer and make arrangements with the other circles. They voted to contribute the necessary sum to purchase the articles to fill the Christmas bags for the Red Cross to send to the sailors for Christmas gifts. The circle is to have a traveling suitcase for its way of raising money during the summer vacation. After a programme of readings by Mrs. E. B. Cheney, Ethel Fisk and Mrs. Ella Geer, ice cream and fancy wafers were served by the social committee.

Miss Phoebe Ayer, 89, died at her home in Lisbon, Tuesday evening. Heart trouble is given as the cause. Miss Ayer was the daughter of Chester Ayer, and for a long time, she and her surviving sister, Mrs. E. M. Barrett, have lived alone in thert home on the Newent road.

The Methodist Quarterly Conference meets tonight (Thursday) from 7 to 8. The new superintendent, Rev. M. E. Genter, will preside. He will also be at the Bethel church at 2 and the Voluntown church at 3:30 in the afternoon for their conferences.

Ben Schlieffer, proprietor of the Red Wing flour and grain store, has been missing considerable amounts of money, evidently stolen from his office safe, during the time it was off the combination in the day time. Small children, found to be mostly Polish, ranging in years from 8 to 12, have been noticed of late to have plenty of coin in their pockets. Putting two and two together, a watch was kept at the grain store and at the proper time the office was left unoccupied. Soon two small boys crept in and loaded up with the small coins in the till of the safe. Supt. F. H. P. Clement took the matter up and the parents of several of the boys were summoned to his office. Guilt was established and the boys taken with the goods. No arrests have been made as yet, but, as the superintendent says, what's to be done when one father declares he whips his 8-year-old son every day, but can do nothing with him.

Dahlia growers are having unusual trouble with cut worms this summer. The worms appear to be epicures, too, for they will skip a half-dozen 20 cent shoots and knaw one off in the next row that cost $2.

Honorable mention goes to Mrs. Sibyl Dunbar for a fine display of the beautiful hardy hybrid rose, Paul Fabien. The variety is partly a tea rose of the hot house sort.

LEBANON

One of the prettiest weddings of the season took place at the First Congregational church, Saturday afternoon, at 4 o'clock, when Miss Abby Dutton Wetmore, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles H. Wetmore, of Lebanon, became the bride of Leslie Paul Clarke, only son of Mrs. Sarah Clarke, of Liberty Hill. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Stanley Sellick, pastor of the church, and the single ring service was used.

The bride's gown was of white crepe de chine and she wore a veil with a band of Irish crochet lace, and carried a shower bouquet of Ophelia roses and sweet peas. The bridesmaids were Miss Maxie A. Parker, of Hartford, who wore rose crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of rose color sweet peas, and Miss Flora Bruce, who wore orchid crepe de chine and carried a shower bouquet of orchid sweet peas. The best man was Clayton Williams and the ushers were Clarence Geer, a brother-in-law of the bride, Myron Hoxie and Charles Abell, brothers-in-law of the groom.

The wedding march was played by Mrs. Harold Mason.

The church was beautifully decorated with weigelia, snow-ba.l. syringa and swamp apple blossoms, the seats for relatives and intimate friends being marked with white crepe paper. The church was filled with friends and about 50 attended the reception at the bride's home, immediately following the ceremony, when a wedding lunch was served. The house decorations were syringa and white peonies and the place assigned the bridal party was beneath a large white bell.

Guests were present from Hartford, Williamstown, New Britain, Vernon, Ansonia, Westerly, New London and Willimantic. The bride received an unusually large number of beautiful presents, among them being money to the amount of $100 of which $80 was in gold, a chest of silver, china tea set and many other articles in silver and china, cut glass, linen, pyrex rugs, pictures, embroidered linens and other useful gifts.

The bride's traveling gown was blue and tan striped silk with tan coat and tan crepe de chine hat trimmed with forget-me-notes.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke left by auto for a camping trip through New England. On their return they will reside at Liberty Hill. Both Mr. and Mrs. Clarke are very popular young people and their host of friends wish them many years of happiness.

GOSHEN

The farm house of Mr. Jelio in Coreyville was burned to the ground recently. It was thought the fire caught in the cellar from an oven that became overheated. The house was situated on what was known years ago as the Randall place, and was also owned by Isaac G. Avery for many years.

Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Randall spent the wee kend with friends in Weekapaug and Matunic, R. I.

It was fortunate that no one was seriously injured in the automobile accident on the iron bridge, known as "Ghost" bridge, near the Bozrah line, on the state highway, Sunday evening. The crash of the three autos was heard over a half a mile away, and but for the strong railing the machines would have probably gone over into the Yantic river. The bridge is very narrow for autos to pass each other unless they are going very slowly.

The Ladies' Aid Society met with Mrs. E. L. Waterman Tuesday afternoon.

A. J. Randall and family and Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Kenyon were visitors in Wakefield, R. I. Wednesday.

Eastern Connecticut Mills Association Textile Exhibit

Forty Textile Manufacturers, Mill Machinery Corporations, Mill Supply Houses, and Allied Industries ARE THIS WEEK, on Thursday, Friday and Saturday, Holding a Splendid Showing of Their Lines at the State Armory, Danielson.

Danielson, Conn., June 10th.—People of Eastern Connecticut and adjoining areas have in the textile products exhibit at the State Armory, Danielson, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week an unusual opportunity to obtain a comprehensive idea of what a tremendous asset to this section of the state its textile organizations are. Under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Mills Association a group of 40 textile manufacturers, mill machinery corporations, mill supply houses and allied concerns are demonstrating the remarkable versatility in textile manufacturing today and the really marvelous things that are being done in producing beautiful fabrics in which cotton, silk, wool and worsted are used.

This exhibit will set forth for thousands of people a great many things about the great textile industry that will be amazing even to those more or less familiar with the manufacturing of cloth. It will show the diversity of the industry in this territory, the excellence of the products and will be certain to make one proud of such a giant development, considered as a whole.

Co-operating with the Eastern Mills Association and individual members thereof, The Bulletin this morning issues this special supplement in which something is told of numbers of the plants that are exhibiting in Danielson, sketches of their histories and development and other matter that may aid in stressing the significance of the textile industry in the wool and yarn of the industrial, and commercial life of the eastern part of the state. There is reference also to Danielson's banking institutions, who serve the manufacturers there and in surrounding communities.

ASHLAND COTTON CO., JEWETT CITY.

Jewett City, June 10.—Among the exhibitors at the Textile Products exhibit being held at the state armory, Danielson, June 11-12-13, by the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, of which organization Norman Parkhurst of Jewett City is president and Prentice W. Chase of Jewett City secretary-treasurer, is the Ashland Cotton company. This company has an exhibit of its finished product—high grade sateen, artificial silk constructions and a particularly interesting cabinet showing processes through which the cotton passes from the bale to the finished product.

Grosvenor Ely is president of this company and Lewis M. Carpenter agent and assistant treasurer. It has 1,104 looms and gives employment to nearly 450 people.

The Ashland Cotton company is located on a site that is historic in the textile annals of New England and its present modern and splendidly equipped plant is a far cry from the "Old Mill," which Prentice W. Chase writes entertainingly about, as follows:

About two years ago this ancient structure was threatened with total destruction by fire and at that time effort was made by local histgrians to determine the exact age of the building which the officials of the company have always maintained was second only to the nationally known Slater mill at Pawtucket in ancient prestige. The latter mill is being preserved by the Slater heirs at considerable financial outlay as a memorial to the cotton industry of this country.

At the time mentioned above, our own mill, which by the way is still doing active service in various capacities, was traced back as far as 1820, though it was known to be older than that. Its activities at that early date were not very definitely determined.

The information now available is the most complete yet uncovered but the exact year in which the building was erected is still undetermined.

According to William T. Davis, editor of a book entitled "The Textile Industry of New England," the mill as it stands today was sold by a man named John Wilson to a man named John Schofield in 1807 and at that time it was operated as a woolen mill. Wilson operated a fulling mill on the present Slater property in Jewett City at that time and a stimulation in the deed of sale was that Schofield should not full any cloth except that which was woven in the plant purchased by him. In those days there was considerable cloth woven on hand looms in the dwellings, and Wilson evidently did the fulling or shrinking of the product of these looms.

With this date to work on, we are sure that this part of our mill is at least 118 years old.

In 1815 Schofield built a building across the river and operated it as a cotton mill.

In 1820 the property was sold to Trumbull & Breed of Norwich.

It was later owned in turn by the Griswold Manufacturing Co., Christopher Lippitt and Morgan & Fanning.

In 1845 it was sold to Adams, Anthony & Tucker, who operated it until 1863, when the mill and privileges were conveyed to the Ashland Cotton company.

In 1864 the brick mill of five stories was erected and this date appears carved in one of the capstones on the tower.

The original president of the Ashland Cotton company was Moses Pierce. The first agent and treasurer was N. T. Adams. The agents who followed were S. W. Mowry, R. T. Budlong, J. S. Carew, James O. Sweet, Grosvenor Ely, who is now treasurer and president of the company, and Lewis M. Carpenter, present agent and assistant treasurer.

Ashland Satteen, which constitutes our entire product at this time, was one of the products of the original company, though for some years various other products were manufactured, principally duck.

The original mill was and is today 40x80 feet, four and one-half stories high.

The addition built in 1864 was 180x70 feet and five stories in height. An addition 110x70 was built in 1881. This is of two stories and was in turn added to in 1909 with a 200x150 feet two-story structure.

The latest addition of consequence is the one-story addition 175x175 feet to the weave shop built in 1919.

HISTORY OF THE PUTNAM TRADE SCHOOL

Putnam, Conn., June 10.—In 1909 an act of the general assembly authorized the state board of education to establish schools for instruction in the arts and practices of the trades and vocations and provided funds for the support of such schools. Since that time the Trade school has come to be an accepted and necessary limit in our educational system. The State Trade school at Putnam was organized in 1914 and in order that it might provide training in the predominant industry of this section an especially well equipped textile department and course of study was organized to provide the widest possible range of experience and study in the field of cotton textile manufacturing. With this object in mind, it is the policy of the school to duplicate actual mill conditions as far as this is consistent with good instructional arrangement. All training is maintained on the basis of a useful product meeting the established standards of the cotton manufacturing industry.

Manifestly there is no better business proposition from the point of view of the individual or welfare of the state than to provide opportunity which will enable young men to help themselves. A boy upon taking up the textile course is introduced in a general way to the history of cotton and the industry. He is then started upon the elementary processes and studies until he has become familiar with most of the processes and calculations necessary in yarn preparation. Having received a working knowledge of this, he is introduced to the problem of preparing warp and filling necessary for a given amount of cloth—usually three to five hundred yards—of plain weave. When this is carried through the preparatory processes his next experience is getting the warp into the loom and learning to weave. This method is carried on until the student has prepared materials for a wide variety of cloth from plain weave to jacquard. Definitely connected with these practical experiences is the necessary academic subjects involved and a suitable amount of drafting, machine shop practice, any parts or replacements on textile equipment being drawn by the student and made in the shop when the next machine shop period comes around. Approximately one-fourth of the student's time is spent on such class room subjects as yarn calculations, cloth analysis, designing and mill costs.

A standard medium of instruction is the manufacture of high grade oxford, cheviots and madras with occasional warps of dobby loom and jacquard weaves. All this material must be prepared and woven into a product acceptable to the cotton textile trade.

Men prominent in the textile industry in and around Putnam approve highly of the courses as laid down in the Putnam school. Every year we have a great many men from the mills in the evening classes who are overseers and second hands taking cloth analysis and design. They are but adding to their personal and valuable experience.

A feature in the textile department is the cloth woven by the students and used by the home economics department in the High school in making a variety of garments.

Besides the textile department, the school has four other departments—machine shop, electrical, carpentry, and drafting. Evening classes are a very important part of the school work and are proving of great benefit to those who are employed and wish further knowledge in some particular phase of the work they are already doing. Machinists come to these classes for blue print reading and mechanical drawing, weavers take up cloth analysis and design, draftsmen get experience in certain phases of machine work necessary to the drafting trade and spinners take up yarn calculations. Evening classes are also conducted for women of the community in various phases of cooking, sewing and millinery. The total enrollment for all classes during the month of November was 427.

Classes organized at the school at the present time are the Regular All Day Trade, High School Co-operative, Part Time, Evening, Home Economics, and Pre-vocational classes for grade students of the common school.

The Regular All Day Trade course is the one usually embraced by boys who are bent upon a definite trade training upon leaving the grammar school. A little over two years is required to complete this course.

The High School Co-operative course consists of a general High school education and a trade training in four years' time. This is accomplished by requiring the student to attend High school in the morning and Trade school in the afternoon, 1,600 hours being allowed for High school subjects toward completing the required 4,800 hours trade application. This, for a young man who can afford to spend the time and who desires a little broader general education, is a very splendid course.

Part Time classes are made up from those students who cannot attend school a full day and for High school students who desire some trade training after regular High school day is completed.

Pre-Vocational classes come to the school once a week from the 7th and 8th grades of the grammar schools of the town, the boys receiving a general knowledge in the arts and practices of the trades and the girls receiving elementary instruction in cooking, sewing and household management. This enables a boy to more intelligently decide what vocation he wishes to follow when he is ready to take up his secondary education and helps to train girls in many beneficial branches of the domestic arts.

The Home Economics classes are conducted in co-operation with the High school, two large rooms being provided in the High school building, where all girls enrolled in the general and commercial courses are required to devote four periods a day, five days a week, the time being divided between cooking, sewing, chemistry of foods, laundry work, dietetics, and household management.

In all trades the courses of study are outlined as the result of a careful analysis of the various trade processes and the work is graded in a manner making for the greatest educational progress of the student. No practice work is done in the school shops, all work being of a useful and necessary nature. At first thought this might seem a difficult thing to do, yet in most any job, such as the building of a machine, instruction of a nature suitable to the beginner and that suitable to the advanced student can be found in the details. Simple parts being picked out for the beginners, the more difficult for the further advanced, and the higher grade jobs requiring greatest skill and auxiliary knowledge are given to those for whom it will have the greatest possible educational content.

Experience proves that the student working on something which is never to be utilized loses his interest in the work, and his instructor likewise does not feel the necessity of as careful planning and attention to details, as he does in the case of work that is going to be inspected and criticised by the public.

While there is no definite way to estimate the value of any system of education, yet the general results from a particular type of training are a very good indication. Graduates of the school are able to go from the school directly into industry as journeymen and compare favorably with men having had a number of years' experience.

The age requirement for entrance to the Trade school is 14 years, with preferably a common school education. There are cases, however, where boys who have no taste for academic training and who drop out of grammar school at 14 in the 7th or 8th grade, have been taken into the Trade school and found to develop into very good tradesmen. A large number of this type of boy who does not take kindly to study for the sake of study but who will make good progress when he realizes there is a definite need and application for his arithmetic and geometry.

The greater the number of educated and skilled tradesmen, the greater the development in manufacturing and the lower the cost of production.

As the cost of production decreases the market broadens by bringing the commodities within the reach of a larger number of consumers. As this occurs more opportunity is provided for skilled tradesmen by the increasing manufacturing requirements to meet the demand.

To adhere to one line of education is to have the so-called cultured nonproducer and the uneducated producer. There is no economy in having 100 % machinery and equipment and employing 25 % mechanics to run them. A blind alley workman is produced from blind alley methods in education. It should ever be our ideal to provide equal educational opportunity for all.

A boy coming from the school trained to handle his job in a workmanlike manner with an understanding of the fundamental principles of his trade is a decidedly good factor in any industry and makes for self-respecting, desirable citizenship.

ASHLAND COTTON CO. PLANT

CENTRAL WORSTED CO., CENTRAL VILLAGE, CONN.

Central Village, Conn., June 11.—In the town of Plainfield, industrially an outstanding community in Eastern Connecticut, the Central Worsted company of Central Village is a pre-eminent example of what a well organized, well officered and efficiently managed plant, with high grade operatives, can do to obliterate all the barriers that stand between mediocrity and real success. The plant of the Central Worsted company has been operating at many times when scores of worsted mills in New England were closed tight, with no business and not a prospect of any in sight. This very week it is not only running days, but also has a night force on duty, as looms almost steadily throughout the twenty-four hours of each working day turn off a grade of worsteds that are unrivaled in the markets of America—and that is saying a great deal. But the Central Worsted company does not confine itself to worsteds, made into high grade patterns for men's wear. It is versatile. It produces overcoatings, top coatings, flannels, plaid-back overcoatings and various designs of fancy worsteds not rated as men's suitings.

Charles Bragg is the central theme about which the symphonic success of the Central Worsted company has been written—and the keynote is the word Vision. This concern appears to be thinking nearly a year ahead of the market at all times. At just this time it has a line of flannels, designed for those who have the time and money to spend winters in the south or in California, that would tempt even a miserly prude to open her purse and pour forth her gold. These flannels are really beautiful. This is no retail advertisement for the Central Worsted company. It doesn't need any such publicity. The particular flannels herein mentioned are for wear during the winter season of 1926 at Miami and Palm Beach—or wherever nature smiles and flowers bloom, while the mill that makes the goods for those who can afford to frequent such places may be set in a blanket of snow and the temperature at zero. These flannels are sold far ahead by the Central Worsted company, and you will see them worn by the elect at the gilded palaces of the south next winter—if you happen to be there. If you do not expect that happiness, you may view them at the Textile Products exhibit now open at the state armory, Danielson, and the booth attendants will tell you all about them, and the other products of the concern that are in the display.

The Central Worsted company is not the greatest textile plant in eastern Connecticut, but it is a remarkably successful one. Its history goes back to a day in 1906. On Oct. 1 of that year construction of the plant was undertaken and so rapidly was the work rushed that the first product of its looms was taken off on Washington's birthday, 1907. It started with 20 looms. At the present time there are 52 looms in the plant, these running night and day, and giving in production the equivalent of 104 looms, a sizeable mill as worsted mills go. Using only the very highest grades of worsteds, wool and silk as the basis of its products the total investment runs into the hundreds of thousands of dollars. The plant may be small, but it is mighty. It employs 130 operatives, and among them are numbers who earn a wage each year that would compare in the days before the World war with the annual salary of many a small town bank treasurer. The company pays the highest possible scale to its workers—and does not quibble about it. It wants high class help, is willing to pay for it, that its output may ever remain about the best in America, as far as vision, skill and efficiency can make it.

Attorney J. Fred Carpenter of Putnam is president of the Central Worsted company, Albert E. Shoales, vice president; William T. Wilkinson, secretary; Charles Bragg, general manager and treasurer, and John Greenhalgh, superintendent and designer.

Charles Bragg is the outstanding figure in the organization. He is of Plainfield since the days of his youth, and he has that still, in greater measure than almost any man of his years than one can think of out of memory. He appears a human dynamo. His connection with manufacturing in the town of Plainfield goes back to 1872—a long look backward. He was with the Milner Co., later as agent of the American Woolen Co., to which the American Woolen Co. sold its interests in 1889. He was agent in Moosup for the Aldrich & Milner Co. He was one of the leading figures in the promotion and development of the Plainfield Woolen Co., which built what is now known as the Farnsworth mills at Central Village in 1901 and the real promoter of the Central Worsted Co. He is heavily interested in another successful plant, The Bragg Woolen Co., operating a plant in Rhode Island, at Tarklin.

HISTORY OF E. H. JACOBS MANUFACTURING CO., DANIELSON.

The business of E. H. Jacobs Manufacturing company was established by Edward H. Jacobs in 1869. It was originally conducted under the firm name of E. H. Jacobs & company, as in its early years the company did not manufacture but simply dealt in mill supplies made by other manufacturers. E. H. Jacobs & company sold these supplies through traveling salesmen to textile mills in all parts of the country.

With the constant growth of the textile industry, the demand for mill supplies expanded rapidly, and accordingly E. H. Jacobs & company began to manufacture a number of lines on its own account, including reeds, harnesses, bobbins, spools, shuttles, leather belting, loom pickers and canvas lug straps. In the course of time the company found it economical to specialize in only a few of these lines, and consequently it dropped everything but pickers, picker loops and lug straps. Since that time it has added other lines, including dobby cords, round harness straps, loom straps and canvas hold-ups, but it still limits its business to specialty lines, in which it has undertaken to hold the premier position in the industry.

In 1899 the firm was incorporated under a special charter granted by the Connecticut legislature, taking its present name, the E. H. Jacobs Manufacturing company. At about the same time it discontinued selling its products direct to the mills, and began to distribute them through jobbers. Also, about that time, the company, finding the demand for its products in excess of its output, erected an up-to-date factory of brick mill construction, to which it moved from its previously inadequate quarters. As the business continued to grow year by year, these new quarters proved insufficient, so that finally in 1917 the company was forced to double its plant. Within the last year the company has installed an entirely new manufacturing system, has replaced a large portion of its former machinery, and has equipped the entire plant with electric power.

During its long career, the E. H. Jacobs Manufacturing company has made many notable contributions to the manufacture of lug straps and pickers. When it first undertook to produce these articles, most of the work was done by hand. From time to time, however, the management invented new machines and discovered new processes, whereby the company was enabled to make superior goods at less cost. At the present time, nearly all the work done in the E. H. Jacobs factory is by machinery, and nearly all of this machinery was developed in this same factory. In fact, nearly every new process developed in the manufacture of pickers and lug straps, and nearly every improvement in their construction, were originated by this company.

Some years ago the E. H. Jacobs Mfg. Co. patented its now world-renowned "Very Best" lug strap, which has been paid the highest compliment possible by having many of its advantages copied by other manufacturers, and is now used by the textile mills in all parts of the world.

In March, 1924, this company patented another improved lug strap, the result of careful study and observation of lug straps while in actual use on the loom.

Having always maintained the highest possible quality of its products and fifty-six years of an honest, square-dealing business policy this company enjoys that enviable reputation that "Jacobs" and "Quality" are synonymous to the textile trade throughout the civilized world.

To better accommodate its large southern trade, a branch is maintained at Charlotte, N. C., where a large stock is always carried to permit immediate shipments—large or small.

Mr. Frederick A. Jacobs, treasurer of the E. H. Jacobs Mfg. Co., is well known through Connecticut, having served as state senator in 1903, and the textile trade both north and south, having handled the sales end of the business since its inception in 1869, when with his brother he formed the partnership of Edward H. Jacobs & Co., which in 1890 became a corporation.

Mr. W. Irving Bullard, the vice president and general manager, is well known internationally, having traveled extensively not only throughout this country and Canada, but also South America and Europe in the interests of this company and the textile industry in general.

Thus Danielson, through the business done by the E. H. Jacobs Mfg. Co., has the distinction of supplying the entire textile world with nearly all the lug straps used, as well as most of the pickers, dobby cords and strapping used on weaving looms. This company's products go from Danielson to every part of continental America, Europe, Asia and all over the world.

JAMES B. TATEM & SON.

Putnam, Conn., June 10.—Typical of New England and its diversity of manufactures is the organization of James B. Tatem & Son of this city, one of the exhibitors at the Textile Products exhibit now being held at the state armory, Danielson, by the Eastern Connecticut Mills association. The Tatem company may be regarded as specialists, catering in an unusual way to manufacturers of mill machinery, automobiles, sporting goods houses, mills and other interests of large and important activities.

The Tatem concern is engaged in wood turning. Its machines are capable of turning out anything from a skewer to a baseball bat. It makes picker sticks, golf shafts, a great variety of wooden handles, loom parts, baseball bats, handles for automobile and machine shop uses and a great variety of other things. The splendid and strictly modern mechanical equipment of the plant makes it possible for the Tatem company to produce an unlimited variety of devices turned from wood.

Its shipments go all through the east and its activities connect it with New Orleans and the lumber districts of certain southern states. It is an important link in Eastern Connecticut's chain of textile industries and allied manufactures.

The business of the Tatem company dates back to 1864 by James B. Tatem, for many years a well known resident of Woodstock and of Putnam. It was established in Woodstock Valley and was continued there until 1888, when the plant was destroyed by fire, a fate that was to overtake the concern's plants repeatedly in years to follow, the fire hazard being great. The plant was rebuilt. In the years that followed Mr. Tatem had associated with him J. M. Tatem, who eventually purchased the original business and formed the J. M. Tatem Handle company.

Then James B. Tatem took into a new concern with him H. A. Tatem and leasing what was known as the Sayles plant at West Thompson began operations, this about 1898. In 1900 H. A. Tatem decided to dispose of his interests in the business and go south, which he did.

At that time James B. Tatem, Jr., a graduate of Brown university, was in Illinois and perfecting his plans to go to Wyoming to establish a sheep ranch with a cousin. At the request of his father, he returned east to assist in his parent's plan to close out the business of the Tatem company. The junior Mr. Tatem saw possibilities in the concern beyond anything it had previously accomplished. The idea to close it out was abandoned and plans to continue it and develop it were worked out. The younger Mr. Tatem entered the concern, has since been associated with it and since the death of his father a few years ago has been its active directing head and executive.

In 1911 the concern removed from West Thompson to a new plant on George street, Putnam. At that time with an increasing business the concern gave employment to eight or ten men.

Growth of the business was steady, but a fire that destroyed the plant in 1912 checked its activities until another plant could be erected. This new plant contained additional equipment and was in every way of superior appointments as compared with the plant it replaced. Between 1914 and 1921, when the plant was again destroyed by fire, the company's business showed a splendid growth and eventually gave employment to between 25 and 30 operatives.

Another new plant to replace a destroyed one was not quite completed when fire—the Nemesis of the concern—destroyed it, this on April 24, 1922. With the characteristic energy with which he had met previous disasters of the kind and overcame them, Mr. Tatem again started rebuilding and in 1923 completed the present plant, which is as near fireproof as it is possible to make it. Practically every fire hazard has been eliminated and a fine automatic sprinkler system installed. To this plant comes hickory from distant southern states for use in the many products turned out.

A special development of the Tatem company is a hickory and steel picker stick, which it patentedin December, 1924. This stick has all the resiliency of an exclusive hickory picker stick with the additional advantage of steel reinforcements that add greatly to its usefulness and length of service.

Since 1915 the Tatem company has been the New England representative of the Ancher Saw Mills Co. of New Orleans. This feature of the Tatem business brought a development requiring the construction of a stockhouse in the railroad yards here, for the storage of large quantities of high grade lumber used in the operations of the concern.

PACO MFG. CO., DANIELSON.

Danielson, June 10.—Out of an industrial acorn an oak has grown. Such a short time ago as 1920, as things industrial are considered, a concern that was incorporated under the name of the Paco Manufacturing company was brought to Danielson, largely through the activities of the Danielson Development association. This Development association was, and is, a group of business men interested in the affairs of Danielson, with a vision as to its future and the courage to venture into an arrangement that would give the town a new industry.

The Paco named considerations under which they would locate their business here, these including, among other things, the providing of a manufacturing plant. The conditions were met. The Development association acquired by purchase the old armory property on Furnace street, pictured elsewhere, as it is now developed, in this issue, remodeled it and enlarged it. The Paco company began to do business.

Danielson can count the day lucky that brought this manufacturing corporation to Danielson. It began operation with no flare of trumpets. It grew. It expanded. An addition was built to the plant. Further growth demanded still greater manufacturing space, and in 1924 the Paco company took over on lease from the Connecticut Mills company the big Main street plant of that concern, long known as the Danielson Cotton company plant, began to install looms and bleaching equipment and is now operating it as it is also operating its original plant on Furnace street.

But this is not all. To supply yarn for the hundreds of looms that it is operating at its two Danielson plants, another unit has been brought into the system—the Powdrell-Alexander company, operating one of the group of mills formerly owned by the Manhasset Manufacturing company at Putnam. The yarn from the Putnam plant is trucked to Danielson. In the three plants upwards of 600 operatives find employment today—steady employment. All through the past four years, when the textile business of New England has been in a more or less precarious state, the Paco company's plants have been in constant operation and have been a great asset to Danielson.

The policies and the system of the Paco company, which is owned by the Powdrell-Alexander company, hence its name from initials, are of very special interest. The headquarters of the Powdrell-Alexander company are in Boston. Their product is marquisette, in a great variety of patterns and excellent qualities. The company uses practically the entire output of the Danielson mills in the manufacturing of curtains, 20,000 pairs a week of which are now being made in Danielson in addition to what the company makes in its Boston factory. From the raw cotton direct to the jobber or retailer, the Powdrell-Alexander company and its subsidiary, the Paco Manufacturing company, do not miss a step in their ability to meet every manufacturing requirement and to produce a material that goes direct from them to the selling trade. Their remarkably efficient organization bulks large in considering the great success they are achieving.

High class workmanship all through the manufacturing and bleaching processes, beautifully designed and finished materials and attractively made curtains are all good and sufficient reasons why these allied concerns find business always good. Their products go to every nook and corner of the United States and to many foreign lands.

In five years of activity in this territory the growth of these corporations has been remarkable, especially in view of the general adverse conditions in the textile industry. In view of all this, it is not too much to expect further expansion in the years to come.

J. S. Alexander is president and F. W. Powdrell treasurer of the Powdrell-Alexander company, and the Paco company J. W. Powdrell is president and William H. Brown treasurer.

At the Danielson plants Herbert R. Pepler is agent, while at Putnam the agent is George Payne.

At the Textile Products exhibition now being held at the state armory, the Paco Manufacturing company has a most interesting display, showing products that will justify the enthusiasm shown for the concern in this article.

THE STAFFORD CO., READVILLE, MASS.

LARKIN REED CO., DANIELSON.

Danielson, Conn., June 10.—Unique in the service it renders textile manufacturing concerns not only in eastern Connecticut but through many states is the Larkin Reed company with its plant at Danielson. This business was established in 1850, and during the three-quarters of a century that has elapsed since that time has ever served with a certain standard before it—that of producing the best possible reed out of the very finest selections of materials and through the efforts of long experienced and highly skilled executives and operatives.

The company's plant is on East Franklin street and a testimonial to the excellence of its products is the fact that it knows no slack periods even when depression is general.

The company manufactures reeds of all descriptions for use in woolen, worsted and cotton mills, makes a specialty of polished wire used by manufacturers of reeds for silk weaving, turns out slasher combs and various other kindred lines.

Within the past two years the first re-weaving reed ever made was turned out by the Larkin Reed company, this reed being as great an innovation in the line as the trade has seen in many years. It is about 70 inches in length, has two knife blades for each two inches of its length and is used in re-weaving tire cord fabrics that are imperfect upon first weaving. This reed saves tremendous losses to manufacturers engaged in producing tire fabric, and is a patented article, although the patent is not held by the Larkin Reed company.

The Larkin Reed company's output is known as The Holdfast line of reeds and is sold under the ironclad guarantee that every reed is as represented and as perfect as the best materials and high class labor can make it.

The Larkin Reed company is owned in equal parts by William J. Ross, John B. Bassett and Alfred W. Bassett.

Only recently the concern completed a large addition to its plant and has installed one of the most complete machine shops in eastern Connecticut, with heavy lathes, boring mills, etc., etc., making it possible to handle the heaviest kind of machine work. This concern has been highly successful and is co-operating in the Textile Products exhibit at Danielson.

DANIELSON AND PLAINFIELD GAS AND ELECTRIC CO.

Danielson, Conn., June 10.—The Danielson and Plainfield Gas and Electric company is a subsidiary of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, with headquarters at Norwich, and serving 32 towns. Its president, R. W. Perkins, says:

Someone has said: "Tell me the amount of power used per individual worker by any community, and I will tell you the state of civilization of that community." Power is an absolute essential in modern industry and no community can progress without an ample supply at reasonable cost.

Investigations that were made throughout Connecticut as a result of the great war disclosed the fact that there were in the eastern end of the state only small and inefficient electric power stations. Recognising the fact that eastern Connecticut could not secure its proportion of the industrial development resulting from the war without an adequate supply of power, the promoters of the Eastern Connecticut Power company, in 1917, consolidated a number of small stations and immediately made plans for the construction of a great modern station in the town of Montville, on the Thames river, near New London.

This was among the first of the large modern steam stations built in New England and it is today one of the most efficient stations, being located on tidewater with exceptional facilities for the reception and storage of coal, which comes in 3,000 ton barges, and it is also supplied with rail facilities. Its water supply for boilers and condensing purposes is ample, and its physical advantages are recognized by the public utilities of the eastern end of the state to such an extent that today every public utility in its territory is being served by it, with the result that this organization accomplished an economic saving, in 1924, of 84,000 net tons of coal, 49,000 tons of this as the result of the operation of the steam plant at Montville and 35,000 tons resulting from the operation of hydro electric stations.

This system of power generating plants and transmission lines is now a part of the eastern superpower system, for it is tied with the high voltage transmission lines that reach east to Boston and west as far as Windsor (just opposite Detroit, Mich.), north to Ottawa and south to Pittsburgh, Pa. That doesn't mean that power can be transmitted from Montville to Windsor, but it does mean that, in an emergency, power can be drawn upon from Montville to help the voltage conditions on this entire system, and the New England system is today a substantial customer of the Eastern Connecticut Power company.

The Eastern Connecticut Power company is, for its revenue, largely dependent upon the activities of the people in 32 towns in the eastern end of the state, and to a considerable extent the growth of those towns and communities served is dependent upon the use that they make of the power facilities available to them. Long ago the available water power was exhausted, and competition and conservation of labor calls for still greater use of mechanical power in the industries, and the adaptability of electrical power to the uses of mankind is such as to make it more and more important in connection with all modern progress, both industrial and social. It is this fact which makes this power system such an important asset of the eastern end of the state.

ASSAWAGA WOOLEN CO., DAYVILLE.

Dayville, Conn., June 10.—One of the motors in Killingly's very dependable industrial power plant is the Assawaga Co., Inc., of Dayville. Its activities are just about as dependable as those of the solar system or the tides. Like the brook made famous by one poetic writer—its products seem to flow on forever, finding a ready market even in times of depression.

A policy of the Assawaga company is to avoid publicity. It never seeks it. Not that the company desires to hide its light under a bushel but more because it does not care for that sort of thing.

On such an occasion as the Textile Products exhibit at the state armory, Danielson, June 11-12-13, where it is co-operating in making a great success as a member of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, brings a cause for exception to this rule. The corporation steps out to lend its aid in establishing before the world that New England continues to be a manufacturing center of supreme importance in the nation's affairs, and that its products have a part in maintaining New England's age-old reputation for producing materials that are highest in quality, up-to-the-minute in style and design and on a price basis that wins a quick market where the competition is exceptionally keen.

The Assawaga Co., Inc., specializes in men's suitings. In 1903 it took over at Dayville a mill erected in 1882 by Sabin L. Sayles, this structure built about an original plant that dates back over 100 years. Success has marked the activities of this company from its inception. It has increased the plant by buildings from time to time until the increase in productive capacity is now 100 per cent over what it was 23 years ago. Additions and extensions include a new weave shed, at present elsewhere in this issue; a new power plant, a new stockhouse, dwellings, etc., etc. The plant has 110 broad looms and employs 300 people, paying the wages that the employes are exceptionally skilled and loyal.

The Assawaga is another plant that has been through many periods of general depression in the textile industry without feeling much of the effects. At present it is running full time and is as active as one could wish.

The Assawaga Co. is fortunate in having Angus Park of Hanover as president and general manager. Mr. Park rates among the most successful woolen manufacturers in the United States. He is interested in a large way in the Airlie mills at Hanover and the Angus Park Manufacturing Co. of East Glastonbury. He is also president of the Bankers Trust Co. at Norwich.

With Mr. Park at Dayville is N. Lorne Greig, vice president and treasurer, and William G. Park, secretary and treasurer.

The Assawaga company is Dayville's industrial mainstay. And in addition it gives employment to workers from Danielson and various other communities in the vicinity. In addition to its big plant it has large areas of land at Dayville, 72 tenements, 10 of the houses being of recent construction. It is a concern of builders, constantly engaged in keeping the plant modern in equipment and appearance, concerned about the neatness of its village and the welfare of the residents therein. For miles around business interests benefit each week from the payroll of several thousand dollars that this concern puts out.

CONNECTICUT MILLS, DANIELSON.

Danielson, Conn., June 10.—One of ...ngly's great industrial plants is ...e Connecticut Mills company. This ...rporation, starting operations in ...nielson as recently as the fall of ...22 with about half a dozen looms ...voted to the manufacture of auto...obile tire fabric, has grown almost ...raculously. Today it has a plant ...ere that is approximately 1,000 feet ...n length and three stories in height, ...s well as other mills at East Taun...on and Fall River that are engaged ...n producing yarn for the Danielson plant. The local plant includes 22,560 twister spindles. In addition a separate company, the Canadian Connecticut Mills at Sherbrooke, P. Q., has been developed and a large plant constructed to care for the Canadian trade.

The Connecticut Mills was originated particularly for the purpose of manufacturing tire fabric in the days when the automobile business, as compared with what it is today, was barely out of the infant industry days. William B. Fitts, dead now for several years, was the active manufacturing head of the little concern that came here and took over what was a small idle plant at Industrial Place, installed a few looms and started to make cloth. The venture was a success from the start and the development very rapid. Within a half dozen years the company was not only occupying all space in its original plant but also had taken over another plant just to the north, built a section to connect them and increased the height of the mills to three stories, making a complete plant. Amazing growth and volume of business marked the corporation's activities during the World war. In that period, Connecticut village, housing hundreds of the operatives of the mills and members of their families was developed at a cost of several hundred thousand dollars. During that period, too, the corporation took over the Danielson Cotton company property, but did not operate it, and has since leased it to the Paco Manufacturing company.

The Connecticut Mills has a reputation for excellence of product and its output goes to some of the best known tire manufacturers in America. It was a pioneer in the manufacture of cord tire fabric, a product that revolutionized the tire manufacturing industry. Equipment used in making this fabric was developed at the Connecticut Mills and is now in general use in the trade.

Following the general depression in the textile industry in 1920, the Connecticut Mills company made a remarkable recovery and today is going along splendidly. It has an organization of remarkable efficiency, both as to executive personnel and operatives. It is operating steadily and has both a day and night force of operatives.

Obadiah Butler, with the corporation for years, is the president, Harry L. Burrage, vice president and secretary, Roland H. Bates, vice president and sales manager, and Victor Anderson is treasurer. The board of directors is made up of Charles Walcott, chairman, Obadiah Butler, J. Preston Rice, Laurence P. Dodge, W. J. K. Vanston, W. Irving Bullard, J. A. Lowell Blake, Harry L. Burrage.

THE GROSVENOR-DALE COMPANY—No. 1 MILL—NO. GROSVENOR- DALE.

THE GROSVENORDALE COMPANY.

North Grosvenordale, June 10.—This attractive community, ideally located in the French River valley, is the home of the Grosvenordale company, manufacturers of cotton goods for more than half a century. The company operates two mills, the No. 1 mill at North Grosvenordale, the No. 2 mill at Grosvenordale, nearly two miles to the south. This great textile organization rates among the very finest in southern New England and its products stand second to none.

More than a century has elapsed since textile operations were first undertaken at what is now known as North Grosvenordale. Fisherville was the name by which this community was known back in the second decade of the 19th century, and it continued to be known by that name until 1870, when the Grosvenordale company began to put in the foundations for a mill that was destined to develop into one of the greatest industrial assets in northeastern Connecticut, and it has been that very thing these many years.

Few not in immediate touch with the textile industry of Eastern Connecticut can fully appreciate what a splendid organization is maintained by the Grosvenordale company. In its two mills it operates approximately 125,000 ring spindles and nearly 4,000 looms, giving employment to hundreds of operatives.

The steadiness with which the Grosvenordale company has operated its mills has become a tradition, and is indicative of the superior quality of its products and the demand that exists for them in the selling field. There have been various occasions in the past half century when many cotton mills in southern New England were idle during periods of depression and the mills of the Grosvenordale company continued to operate without interruption. This meant a great deal financially not only to the stockholders and operatives, but also to the business interests of this community as well as to Putnam and Webster, to which accrue important business returns through trade and other channels. The Grosvenordale company's plants have been the source of streams of gold flowing into many pockets and contributing in an impressive way to the business stability of the northeastern corner of Connecticut.

Pictures of the plants appearing in this issue show only in a minor way that the Grosvenordale company has had an eye for the beautiful as well models of neatness and good order. The grounds are kept with meticulous as for material things. Its plants are care. The same rule applies through the residential sections of the villages made up exclusively of company dwellings, though this is not intended to imply that there is not much business and residential property in the Grosvencrdales that is privately owned.

The company has adopted many innovations for the benefit, comfort and well being of its employes, being in the forefront of such concerns in this section of the country.

One hears little of the Grosvenordale company, great asset as it is to northeastern Windham county, excepting on such occasions as the Textile Products exhibit now on under the auspices of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at Danielson or some such similar or public enterprise. It does not seek publicity. Its fame is based on the excellence of its products and service in the trade.

The Grosvenordale company manufactures sheetings, long cloths, twills and fine sateens, and these products are on display at the company's exhibit at the state armory in Danielson.

William Grosvenor is president of the Grosvenordale company; A. W. Dimick, treasurer; William S. Pepperell, assistant treasurer, and John F. Reardon, in direct charge, is agent.

QUINEBAUG MILLS, DANIELSON, CONN.

Danielson, Conn., June 10.—The Quinebaug Mills have for many years been one of the mainstays in the industrial prosperity of Danielson. They are really the old standby here. They have been a certain source of revenue through the years and that fact has caused scores of operatives to remain with them through a lifetime of labor.

The history of the industry is interesting. The following brief but competent review of it recently was compiled by E. C. Babson, overseer of the cloth room and for 47 years in the employ of the company:

About the third mill started in the state of Connecticut was on the site of the present Quinebaug Mill. Consent of the state was secured in 1807 by Gen. Danielson, Zadoc and James Spalding to build a dam at the Quinebaug Mills, this being necessary as salmon ran up the stream to spawn.

A short time later these rights were transferred to Comfort and Ebenezer Tiffany.

Comfort Tiffany was the father of Charles L. Tiffany, founder of Tiffany & Co., New York and Paris, jewelers. Charles being born Feb. 15, 1812, in one of the houses near the mill village.

The building of the original mill was completed about 1820, the building being 32 feet by 72 feet, two and a half stories high, with basement, the weaving of cotton beginning about this time, starting with 1,000 spindles.

Jan. 7, 1848, a deed was given by Chloe Tiffany (widow of Comfort Tiffany), Charles L. and William H. Tiffany to a group of Rhode Island capitalists, who included Amos D. Lockwood, Moses Lockwood and Dr. Tobey, who for the consideration of $10,000, organizing at that time under the name of Quinebaug company, working under the original charter and title, until 1921, when it was reorganized under the name of "The Quinebaug Company," with a capital stock of $1,000,000.

Starting with a plant that cost $10,000, gradually about every decade adding additions, either from an increase of capital stock or from its earnings, it now has a plant that covers nine acres of floor space, capitalized at $1,000,000, and at present prices could not be replaced for that sum, has its own water plant for its village of 133 tenements, a large general store, where the homes are all wired for electric light, have running water and sewerage, are upwards of 250 tenements.

The concern manufactures cotton goods along lines in keeping with the modern demand for various fancy weaves and is using at the present time a great amount of artificial silks in some of the very beautiful materials that it is exhibiting at the state armory in Danielson this week in connection with the Eastern Connecticut Mills association Textile Products exhibition.

Kenneth F. Wood is president of the Wauregan company; J. Arthur Atwood, treasurer; C. M. Robinson, agent; F. D. Harrower, assistant agent.

The Wauregan company usually operates with the steadiness of a high-priced watch. Only the most extreme depressions in business have caused it to curtail operations. It has deserved the loyalty that the personnel of its workers always accords it. The company has a personal interest in every soul in its village and among them all are none who do not feel welcome at any reasonable time to seek personal conferences with executive heads of Treasurer J. Arthur Atwood relative to even small matters that for the time being may concern them.

PONEMAH MILLS, TAFTVILLE.

Largest of any mill industry in New London county, and one of the largest in the country, is the Ponemah mills at Taftville, which was chartered in 1866 under the name of the Orray Taft Manufacturing company by E. P. Taft, and associated with him were Cyril Taft and James S. Atwood, who in company with Moses Pierce of Norwich formed the Occum Power company.

The first mill, now called Mill No. 1, had originally 40,000 spindles, all American make. The original 80,000 spindles have been increased to 161,000 and the original 1,500 looms to over 3,800. Fine lawns, organdies, mechanical cloths and fancy goods for ladies' wear, men's shirtings, ginghams, mixed silk and cotton goods and tire yarns are a few of the products of the company.

The mills now include Mill No. 1, a five-story structure, 750 feet by 75 feet, with an ell; Mill No. 2, built in 1880, 500 feet by 200 feet; Mill No. 3, 200 feet by 120 feet; Mill No. 4, built in 1910, 600 feet by 200 feet, with 2,300 looms. For power the mills have 2,500 horse power developed at full water by its water power and the difference of 1,500 horse power needed for operation is developed by steam, which develops further any deficit in water power due to low water.

During the war the mill was busy making cloth for balloons and airplanes, etc., on government work. The Ponemah mills form the nucleus of a whole community life, in its mills, its homes, its farm, its reservoir, its electric plant and its many community activities it is a model village.

The company owns 500 tenements, with an estimated population of 3,500. It owns four miles of streets, eight miles of sidewalks, covering nearly a square mile of land. It has its own water supply for fire protection. The annual product is approximately 20,000,000 yards of cloth of a value of five and a half million dollars, one-fifth of the whole manufactured product of Norwich. The payroll is $30,000 a week, about one-fifth of the total payroll of all industries of Norwich.

The financial offices are in Providence, and the average wage of all operatives, without including oversight, salaries, etc., is $20 per week for all workers, of whom approximately 1,500 are employed.

BURGLAR SCARE

"Say, I had a fierce time last night," Bobby began after dinner. "I was over to stay all night with Jimmy and that's when it was."

"Oh, was that is?" said his father. "I thought there was something missing around the house, but your mother didn't say anything about having sold any of the furniture or anything. So you were away?"

"Sure," said Bobby, grinning appreciatingly. "Jimmy's mother she'd gone to see her aunt and Jimmy's father was left for New York or somewheres, I don't know, maybe it was Peoria, and there wasn't anybody home but he and Jimmy and Jimmy's grandma.

"We made fudge and there was a lot of cookies and we had a swell time all evening till the grandma said we must go to bed. We had a pillow fight and both of us took a bath and splashed a lot of water.

"Well, anyhow, after me and Jimmy was all settled in bed and Jimmy was telling me a swell story he read in a book and I was just almost asleep, we heard the grandmother go out of the next door where she's got friends. Of cours she thought us fellers was fast asleep.

"Jimmy was a whole lot scared and he told me three keen burglar stories right off the bat. Of course then we heard all sorts of things and I made Jimmy stop talking and I fell asleep just as fast as I could so's morning would come along faster, like it does when you go to sleep, you know.

"Yes, I've noticed it," agreed his father. "I am glad you weren't too afraid to sleep. There was nothing that could hurt you."

"That's what you don't know," said Bobby with satisfaction. "Because I was just dreaming that I was making a speech to a mob when Jimmy he up and pokes me in the back and hisses for me to keep still, there was a burglar in the house. I didn't believe him a little bit on account of him always having some kind of a joke to put over, but sure enough when I sat up I could hear him creeping along the hall downstairs as careful as anything. I whispered back it was his grandmother and he says his gramma ain't come home yet and that was right at that, because she hadn't.

"We sat straight up in bed and we listened fit to bust our ears and we could hear that guy go right through the house to the dining room and there we heard him poking around a whole lot. Jimmy climbed out of bed whispering he was going to be a real Sherlock Holmes, you know, the feller who caught burglars as a regular job.

"Well, of course, when Jimmy got out in the hall I wasn't going to stay all alone in that room, where it was dark, and a burglar downstairs; no siree, so I up and went along. We was in our pajamas and we tiptoed down as quiet as anything, and when we got to the kitchen we found that old guy had gone down cellar. Jimmy says he was looking for hooch and I whispered back, "Let's shut the door on him," and so we did, the door at the top of the stairs, and we locked it and then we ran like sin back to bed, you bet."

"That was well done," said his father. "But why not call the police while you are about it?"

"It was more fun to listen to him pound on the door," chuckled Bobby. "And, anyhow, the grandmother came home and we told her, only it was three hours before she came in, and the guy got tired and stopped pounding. But, I can tell you, I ain't going to catch any more burglars, I ain't just to get blamed and scolded for butting in, as if Jimmy didn't do most of it. Makes me tired."

"Nobody's scolding you. What's the matter?"

"Well," said Bobby resignedly, "they did, and all because when the grandma came home the guy began to yell and it was Jimmy's father who had to go and come home unexpected that's all."—Chicago News.

WINDHAM COUNTY NATIONAL BANK

WINDHAM COUNTY NATIONAL BANK, DANIELSON.

Danielson, June 10.—On the occasion of the Textile Products exhibit by the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at the state armory here, the relation and association of the manufacturing plants in Danielson and vicinity and its bank institutions stand out as of real importance. Of these banks, the Windham County National of Danielson has a history dating back more than a century and today is more virile than ever in its history.

The Windham County bank, for under this style it was first brought into existence as a state bank, was chartered by an act of the Connecticut legislature in 1822. Eight years later, in 1830, there were but 33 miles of railroad in operation in the United States. In 1837 the telegraph was made of practical use. The bank had been successful doing business for half a century before the telephone came into practical use. A hundred other important inventions and developments of paramount interest have crowded the nation's history since the bank began to do business.

There was no banking institution in this part of the state when the Windham County bank was established, and those who had banking business to transact had to travel to Norwich and other cities to be accommodated. Travel was overland, so the journey entailed much effort and consumed much time.

The first meetings of those concerned with the organization of this bank were held in Brooklyn. The capital stock was quickly subscribed and a small banking house erected at Brooklyn, where it still stands and is in use by the Brooklyn town library.

In 1865, availing itself of the new national banking act, the Windham County bank ceased to be a state bank and became a national bank under the name of Windham County National bank.

That it might better serve its clientele, the institution was removed from Brooklyn to Danielson in 1895, and has since continued to do business here, occupying its present quarters in 1914, when it erected a new building in the very heart of the business district.

Since that date the growth of the bank has been really remarkable. The opening of the World war brought a great boom in business. In 1915 the bank's surplus and profits account was $50,000. This has grown in 1925 to $150,000. The deposits in 1915 were $480,000 and the resources $658,000. Today the deposits are in excess of $2,700,000 and the resources are $3,-100,000.

The president of the bank is Nathan D. Prince, who also is president of the Hartford-Connecticut Trust company, one of the greatest banking institutions in New England. Mr. Prince first became associated with the Windham County bank upon graduating from Killingly High school and by rapid strides and his unusual capacity as a banker advanced to the cashiership and eventually to the vice presidency, being named for the later place in 1915. Though attending to his duties in Hartford the greater part of each week, Mr. Prince keeps in most intimate touch with the Windham County bank, in which he succeeded to the presidency following the death of President Timothy E. Hopkins, who passed away Aug. 19, 1924.

Francis E. Storer is present cashier of the bank, a post he has filled with splendid success since April, 1915, coming here from one of Boston's great banking institutions. Mr. Storer has a wide acquaintanceship throughout this territory and is rated an able banker, ever courteous and accommodating.

Frank J. G. Bailey is assistant cashier of the bank, and the board of directors is made up of Nathan D. Prince, William A. Gaston of Boston, Charles A. Tillinghast, Nathaniel G. Williams, Obidiah Butler and A. D. Bitgood. The late Justice Milton A. Shumway of the supreme court of Connecticut was a director of the bank for many years up to the time of his death, Oct. 20, 1922.

What the Windham County National bank means to this territory may be indicated by noting that it serves not only great manufacturing concerns but hundreds of their employes, as well as scores of commercial firms and others with varied business interests.

INTERIOR BROOKLYN SAVINGS BANK

BROOKLYN SAVINGS BANK, DANIELSON, CONN.

Danielson, Conn., June 10.—The Brooklyn Savings bank, largest savings institution in northeastern Connecticut, is another bank that had its origin in Brooklyn but found that the trend of the times as to centers of popular means of communication and convenience of depositors and others having business with it demanded its removal to Danielson.

The bank was established in Brooklyn in 1872 and continued to do business there until 1913. In the many years between its incorporation and 1913 there had come great changes in methods of doing business, development of trolley lines and state highways. These changes tended to handicap the bank doing business in Brooklyn, which does not happen to have rail service and is inconvenient of access for hundreds who do business with the bank.

Sensing this and seeing opportunity for expansion by removing to Danielson, steps were taken to make the change, which was opposed by some in Brooklyn. However, in July, 1913, the bank was removed from Brooklyn Center to a new banking home on the West Side, virtually in Danielson, but actually still within the limits of the town of Brooklyn. The bank remained in that location until April, 1915, when, by permission of the legislature, it was removed to Danielson, taking over the quarters it now occupies in the Phoenix block and in the former banking quarters of the Windham County National bank.

The vision of the bank's officials as to its opportunity for growth in Danielson has been realized. When the bank left Brooklyn in 1913 its deposits were somewhat in excess of $1,000,000. Today they are in excess of $4,500,000, and are growing steadily.

The deposits of the institution represent savings of more than 7,000 depositors. These depositors, in turn, are representative of all sections of eastern Connecticut, for the Brooklyn Savings bank enjoys an enviable reputation. Numbered among them are many hundreds of people who are in the employ of the great textile concerns in eastern Connecticut. At this time of the state armory exhibit of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association it is germane to recall that hundreds of thousands of the deposits of the Brooklyn Savings bank represent the savings of workers in these mills, and are an evidence of what opportunities are offered faithful workers for saving if they will but improve them and still enjoy many of the good things of life.

Danielson is proud of the strength and stability of the Brooklyn Savings bank, proud of its safety and security. It has ever been under exceptionally competent management. J. Arthur Atwood is the president; Frederick A. Jacobs, vice president; Sidney W. Bard, treasurer, and J. Dyer Potter, assistant treasurer.

DANIELSON TRUST CO., DANIELSON, CONN.

Danielson, Conn., June 10—It is hardly credible that a banking institution established such a comparatively short time ago as the Danielson Trust Company could have developed in a community the size of Danielson to its present estate of power and resources in a little less than 11 years. Yet such is the case. The present week the resources of the bank are in excess of $2,000,000.

Opening in the fall of 1914, the Danielson Trust Company flourished vigorously from the very first and enjoyed a real phenomenal growth during the years of the World war and those immediately following that great struggle. In the years that have since come and gone the Danielson Trust has gone steadily on, broadening its field of service and considerably gaining in strength and influence.

The original issue of stock of this bank was immediately over-subscribed on offer and has since been increased, the original stockholders taking all that was made available.

J. Arthur Atwood was the moving spirit in the organization of the Danielson Trust Company, which numbers among its board of directors, representatives of various manufacturing concerns in Killingly and the town of Plainfield and professional and business men of these towns.

An outstanding bit of the record of progress of this bank is the list of its achievements in the World war in the interest of the nation. It not only bought heavily of Liberty bonds on its own account, but was of tremendous value in putting over the top the great drives for Liberty bond quotas to which the communities hereabouts responded so promptly and patriotically.

It has been of inestimable value in achieving other great community movements of the past few years, lending its facilities and aid to numerous worthy projects.

But above all, it has been a bank of service. It has both commercial and saving departments, a trust department.

Upon organization this bank fitted up splendid quarters in what was then known as the Bradley building. It has since remained there, but in the meantime has acquired the building by purchase.

Patrons of this bank represent all the communities for miles around. It has been largely instrumental in attaining for Danielson the position that it has won in the banking field in northeastern Connecticut during the past decade and is an institution of which this town is proud.

Its banking equipment is unusually fine for a community no larger than Danielson is to have. The huge vault is of ultra modern construction and appointment and is equipped with every safety device against loss of its contents through any cause.

With Mr. Atwood as president of the Danielson Trust company are Frederick H. Jacobs as vice-president, Clifford H. Starkweather as treasurer and Harry E. Magoon as assistant treasurer.

NORWICH BELT MFG. CO

Norwich, Conn., June 10—The Norwich Belt Mfg. Co., cooperating with the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at the textile products exhibit in the state armory, Danielson, Thursday, Friday and Saturday of this week, has a history dating back to 1845. From the plants where it tans its leather and manufacturers its belting has come these many years a heavy percentage of the belting used by manufacturing concerns in eastern Connecticut, a beehive of textile activities.

This company, headed by Henry H. Gallup as president, treasurer and general manager has long prided itself on the quality of its products and the skill with which they have been and continue to be prepared.

In certain lines of manufacture automatic machines, uniform materials and standardized methods of production enable all manufacturers of those lines to make an equally good product.

In the belting business conditions are different. Modern machines and modern methods, of course, have their part; but there are many phases that always will partake of the days when every manufactured article was the product of individual craftmanship—the expression of the character and skill of its maker.

To begin with, the belt manufacturer's supply of raw materials is not uniform. No two hides are exactly alike. To sort the best hides from those of inferior grade requires careful selection. Thus, individual judgment and experience are brought to bear upon the quality of the product at the very start. And in the course of transforming the hide into the finished belt, there is scarcely an operation in which the experience, skill and expertness of the organization and its workers is not a factor in determining the quality of the finished product.

Established in 1845, the Norwich Belt Manufacturing Company has built up a loyal organization of experienced workers of which it is justly proud. The character, the skill and the dependability put into the making of Norwich Belts have won for them an enviable reputation wherever belts are used.

Germ-Killing Metals

Germs that come in contact with certain metals are destroyed as shown by recent experiments. Copper, zinc, brass and silver are capable of killing microbes, but these metals also are most easily attacked by chemicals. In the tests the germs were not harmed by platinum, nickel nor pure gold freshly cleaned and polished.

GOODYEAR MILLS, INC.

Danielson, Conn., June 10—In connection with the interest in textile affairs now so keen in eastern Connecticut because of the Textile Products' exhibit by the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at the state armory the consideration of the manufacture of tire fabric is of special moment. The town of Killingly is fortunate in having great industries engaged in making this material. One of these is the Goodyear Mills, Inc., of Goodyear, a subsidiary of the Goodyear Tire and Rubber Co., of Akron, O.

Tires Too Are Made of Cotton

The world thinks of the automobile tire as made of rubber. But it is cotton fabric, rubberized and built up in a series of plies, that gives body, strength and endurance to the tire, carrying it safely and sturdily through to its destination despite the hammering blows of the highway.

Tires can be made of rubber alone. The solid rubber tire still has an important place in industrial hauling. But it was the highly resilient pneumatic tire, carrying compressed air within its casing of rubber and fabric that made the universal use of the automomile possible, that gave to the gasoline-driven car its fullest usefulness.

The Goodyear Tire & Rubber Co., the world's largest time manufacturer, took over the picturesque, century-old plant of Killingly Manufacturing Co., located on the Quinebaug river at what is now Goodyear, Connecticut, in the year 1916.

Its purpose was to learn more about fabric, to try to determine what cottons and what methods of manufacturing were best adapted to the special needs of the automotive industry, and finally to try if possible to discover improvements in tire fabric itself.

Improved products have been evolved, the most important of these is the famous Goodyear Supertwist, which was worked out in the old Killingly plant on the Quinebaug.

Supertwist Cord fabric, with its remarkable resiliency, stretching and giving, rather than breaking, under unusual roadway shocks, has greatly improved the high pressure tire.

But it has given to the balloon tire the maximum advantage of easy riding qualities and of economical operation of the car with a minimum strain on the tire itself.

As showing its faith in the integrity of New England manufacturing methods Goodyear within the last year has taken over another large plant of 57,000 spindles at New Bedford, Massachusetts, now called Devon Mills, Inc. These two mills together with the Goodyear Textile Mills at Los Angeles, adjoining its western tire factory, enlarges its capacity to serve the automobile owners of America.

All three mills are devoted entirely to the manufacture of tire fabric.

LORRAINE MANUFACTURING CO., WESTERLY, R. I.

Westerly, R. I., June 10.—The Lorraine Manufacturing Co., with plants in Westerly and Pawtucket, is among the interesting exhibitors at the Textile Products exhibit sponsored by the Eastern Connecticut Mills association at the state armory, Danielson, June 11-12-13.

This concern, giving employment to 3,000 operatives, is another great industrial asset to southern New England, one of the numerous plants that has earned for the oldest part of the United States the pre-eminence it has enjoyed for more than a century in the textile field.

Lorraine manufactures fancy dress goods, shirtings, worsteds and silks. Its products have an unsurpassed reputation for excellence and perfection. Its plants have in excess of 75,000 spindles and just under 4,000 looms. The number of cotton spindles is 65,816, the number of its worsted spindles 39,620. It operates 2,204 cotton looms, 692 worsted looms and 60 silk looms.

Its products have a national reputation. Visitors to the Textile Products exhibition will find the Lorraine Manufacturing Co. display of special interest. They will show a line of fine worsteds and cotton dress goods, shirtings, silk fabrics and other materials. Representatives of the corporation representing the Westerly and Pawtucket plants will be in charge of the Lorraine Mfg. Co. booth.

POETRY

SCHOOL DAYS.

Lord, let me make this rule,
To think of life as school,
And try my best
To stand each test,
And do my work
And nothing shirk.

Should someone else outshine
This dullard head of mine
Should I be sad?
I will be glad,
To do my best
Is Thy behest.

If, weary with my book,
I cast a wistful look
Where posies grow,
O let me know
That flowers within
Are best to win.

Dost take my book away
Anon to let me play,
And let me out
To run about,
I grateful bless
Thee for recess.

Then recess past, alack,
I turn me slowly back,
On my hard bench
My hands to clench,
And set my heart

To learn my part.
These lessons Thou dost give
To teach me how to live,
To do, to bear,
To get and share,
To work and play
And trust always.

What though I may not ask
To choose my daily task?
Thou hast decreed
To meet my need.
What pleases Thee,
That shall please me.

Some day the bell will sound,
Some day my heart will bound,
As with a shout
That school is out
And lessons done,
I homeward run.

A ROSE.

'Twas a Jacqueminot rose
That she gave me at parting;
Sweetest flower that blows.
'Twas a Jacqueminot rose,
In the love garden close,
With the swift blushes starting.
'Twas a Pacquemінot rose
That she gave me at parting.

If she kissed it, who knows—
Since I will not discover;
And love is that close;
If she kissed it, who knows?
Or if not the red rose,
Perhaps, then, the lover
If she kissed it, who knows—
Since I will not discover.

Yet at least with the rose
Went a kiss that I'm wearing!
More I will not disclose,
Yet at least with the rose
Went whose kiss no one knows—
Since I'm only declaring.
"Yet at least with the rose
Went a kiss that I'm wearing."
—Arlo Bates.

It was announced that the annual cache ceremony for the knights and squires would be held next week. At this conclave, from which the pages are excluded, the members will assemble at a late hour in a secluded spot in the woods, and a casket containing the records of the two members who were recently elevated to the circle of the Round Table, will be buried, a golden trowel being used. At the next Feast of Pentecost, the cache will be unearthed with appropriate ceremonies, the history of the two members read to the castle, and new names added if any others have won that honor. John Soroski was appointed master of ceremonies and he will preside at the burial of the cache.

SUPREME COURT SUSTAINS FINDING BY COMPENSATION COMMISSIONER

By a decision just handed down by the superior court, a workmen's compensation award made by Commissioner J. J. Donohue of this city is sustained in the claim of Mrs. Catherine D. Markham, widow of Walter R. Markham, who was the tree warden for the town of Middletown.

Mr. Markham was killed while doing work on a tree after an ice storm in Middletown and Commissioner Donohue made a compensation award to his widow on the ground that the fatal injury had arisen out of and in the course of his employment. The town of Middletown appealed the case to the superior court for Middlesex county where it was heard by Judge Marvin, who vacated the award by the commissioner.

From the superior court decision the widow appealed to the supreme court, which now sustains the commissioner and remands th ecase to the superior court with directions to enter judgment confirming the award of the commissioner.

The opinion is written by Judge Curtis as follows:

The plaintiff is the widow and dependent of Walter R. Markham, of Middletown, who was killed in February, 1923, while doing manual work on a public tree of the town of Middletown. Mr. Markham was then the duly appointed tree warden of the town, under general statutes No. 2,-145.

His widow and dependent seeks compensation from the town upon the ground that when injured he was in the employ of the town, and that his injury arose out of and in the course of his employment. The town claims that he was killed in performing his duty as tree warden, and that as a public official injured in the performance of an official duty was not entitled to compensation.

Sibley v. State, 89 Conn. 682.

McDonald v. New Haven, 94 Conn. 403.

The case therefore turns upon the question whether Mr. Markham, while sawing off a limb of a public tree on the day of his injury, was doing that manual work as an employe of the town. As a public officer his duties are prescribed as follows in Section 2145: "He shall have the care and control of all public shade trees in the town, except those in public parks and open places under the jurisdiction of park commissioners, and of these he shall take the care and control if so requested in writing by the park commissioners. He shall expend all funds appropriated for the setting out and maintenance of such trees": Section 2145 also prescribed that "The tree warden and his deputies shall receive such compensation for their services as the town may determine, and in default of such determination as the selectmen may prescribe." These provisions clearly relate to his compensation as a public official. Neither the town nor its selectmen has made any provision for such compensation.

It appears from Statutes (Nos. 2145 and 2146) that the official duties of a tree warden are a supervisory nature including the employment of persons to do manual labor in relation to public trees. The duties of this office are now the same in substance as when the office was created by Chapter 174 of the Public Acts of 1901. Mr. Markham was engaged in the private business known as tree surgery, and the finding discloses that in addition to his supervisory duties as tree warden, he with the consent and approval of the selectmen did necessary manual work upon public trees for which he was paid by the town.

The finding discloses that when injured he was not engaged in his supervisory work as tree warden, but engaged in manual labor in removing limbs from a public tree broken by an ice storm. He was authorized to procure manual work to be done at the expenses of the town, and it was not a part of his official duty to do the manual work. It was immaterial that he procured this manual work to be done by his own services instead of by the services of another, the selectmen having sanctioned such procedure.

The provision of Section 2145 that the tree warden shall have the "care" of public shade trees, does not mean that it shall be his official duty to do all manual labor upon them that may reasonably be required.

Therefore, when injured, Mr. Markham was in the employ of the town and his injury arose out of his employment.

There is error, and the case is remanded with directions to enter judgment confirming the award of the commissioner.

In this opinion the other judges concurred.

HEALTH HINTS GIVEN FOR THE HOT DAYS

The Connecticut State Department of Health has issued the following hints for hot days:

I. In the first place try to become absorbed in something so interesting that the temperature is forgotten. Watching the thermometer every hour of the day is not conducive to this. Although the weather furnishes a common topic of conversation, it emphasizes the extremes which makes it more difficult to forget the grievance.

So keep the mind off the weather.

II. Reduce energy expenditure to the minimum. When the temperature approaches the 90's it is not the time for over-exertion, no matter how alluring that game of baseball or tennis or golf may be. The body is already taxed to the utmost to get rid of its excess heat.

III. Movement of air is one of the prime factors in evaporation of moisture. So—seek a favorable place in some shady spot where there is a natural breeze, or set in motion an electric fan directed at such an angle that a continuous direct draft is avoided. Whether the use of a hand fan will accomplish the same purpose may be questioned since the motive power requires energy. However, the balance is probably on the cool side.

IV. Dress comfortably. Dark colors absorb heat, while white reflects it, so the choice of colors should approach the light rather than the dark end of the scale. Loose clothes allow greater freedom of air movement, than those which are confined at any point. Light weight clothing should be the rule, and excessive layers should be avoided as each layer provides an air space which is a non-conductor of heat, thus making it more difficult for the temperature to be dispelled.

V. Choose the right foods. Hot weather is no time for a high protein diet—one with an excess of meats or fish. Such foods cause a noticeable rise in temperature. Fried foods or those rich in fats should also be avoided as these place a greater tax on the digestive system. Graham crackers and milk, or prepared cereals and milk are ideal for hot weather luncheons. Salads, fruits and vegetables may safely be used in excess.

An overabundance of food, unwise at any time, should be strictly avoided in these hot days. Fortunately, nature reduces the appetite at such a time so this is not difficult. At the other extreme, however, those whose appetite is naturally poor should make an effort to eat sufficient food for strength.

In-between food such as ice cream, sodas, and sundaes with their strange concoctions are not altogether wise since they are likely to be taken too frequently, and destroy the appetite for other foods essential to health.

VI. Drinking too much ice water or iced bottled goods is detrimental to health, especially if taken too rapidly as is usually the custom. Plenty of cold water should be the rule as the body is losing water rapidly by evaporation and must be replaced. While some adults may safely take a glass of iced-tea or coffee, these should never be given to children. Adults often abuse this habit. The tall glass holds more than the cup—multiply this by two or three and the quantity of tea or coffee consumed may reach the danger point.

Lead a moderate, well balanced life during the hot days and rest a-plenty.

Attended Dental Hygienist Association

Miss Helen Christ, Dental Hygienist of the Schools of Norwich, has returned from Albany where she has been attending the convention of the New York State Dental Hygienists Association. Many interesting addresses were delivered by leading dentists. Great stress was laid upon the diet and its relation to the teeth. Ideas gained at the convention will be shown in a window demonstration of the Norwich School Dental Clinic in the near future.

FORMER CHRIST CHURCH ORGANIST RECEIVES DEGREE

The many friends of Ernest M. Ibbotson, formerly organist at Christ church and now organist at the Church of the Messiah, Detroit, will be pleased to learn of the progress he has made in his musical studies since he left Norwich a little over a year ago and of the honor which has come to him.

At a recent meeting held in New York, Mr. Ibbotson was elected a fellow of the American Guild of Organists.

This is the highest degree obtainable in the United States and is granted after a severe examination of technique and composition. There are less than 100 fellows in the United States.

In 1921 Mr. Ibbotson passed examinations in New York which gave him the degree of associate in the Guild.

Since going to Detroit he has studied with Dr. Edward B. Manville F. A. G. O. president of the Detroit Institute of Musical Art, under whom he prepared for the Guild examination.

Ascension Day Important

The young son of a Norwich superior court judge has caused amusement to family friends through a frank remark, just leaking out. On Ascension Day, his teacher explained the meaning of the word. Her pupil eagerly held up his hand and after attracting her attention, informed her that Ascention Day was an important one for him, "Because," he explained, "I descended from Heaven ten years ago today."

SILK WORMS EXHIBITED IN BOSTON STORE WINDOW

In one of the windows in the Boston Store there is an exhibit of live silk worms spinning silk. The unique exhibit is attracting considerable attention. A statement issued by The Boston Store says:

Few persons have ever seen this wonderful process before but through the courtesy of the Corticelli Silk Company we are able to display the live worms in our show windows where everyone can see and learn how silk is made. The live worms were shipped to us all the way from Florence, Mass., where the main Corticelli mills are located.

This exhibit is as interesting and fascinating as it is instructive. It will be on display this week only. Souvenirs will be given to those visiting the store during the display.

C. V. TRACK BLOCKED AT MANSFIELD DEPOT

The single track of the Central Vermont railroad north of Willimantic was blocked all night and Wednesday afternoon by derailment of cars in Extra 341 southbound freight at Mansfield depot. The train had 32 cars. The brake beam on the second car from the engine dropped and nine cars buckled and turned over. These cars were laden with merchandise.

Wreckers were sent from Midway by the New Haven road, and from Brattleboro, Vt., by the Central Vermont.

There are only two passenger trains a day over the line, one being the boat train in the morning, and passengers on it were transferred around the wreck.

FOUND NOT TO BLAME FOR AUTOMOBILE FATALITY

Gerald Casey, of 498 Orchard street, New Haven, a 15-year old, unlicensed operator who took without its owner's permission, the automobile of Samuel Berkowitz, 55 Connecticut Avenue, New London and involved it in a collision in Woodmont on May 31, in which Jack M. Griffin, Yale student of Fort Wayne, Ind., and Miss Helen G. Barnes, actress, 15 Belmont avenue, Woodmont, were killed, is exonerated from responsibility for their deaths in a finding issued by Coroner Eli Mix of New Haven county. The coroner's report finds that the couple died through no criminal act or omission of any person other than themselves.

The coroner's report in part is as follows:

"About midnight on May 31, accompanied by Miss Barnes, Griffin went to Savin Rock in a Buick touring car, Connecticut register No. E-6966, owned and operated by him, he being a licensed operator of motor vehicles in Connecticut, to purchase eatables to prepare a lunch on their return to Woodmont.

"As deceased was operating said vehicle and approaching a bend in the highway in the vicinity of what is known as Aimes Point, a Maxwell motor vehicle, Connecticut register No. N-3047, owned by Samuel Berkowitz of 55 Connecticut avenue, New London, Conn., operated by Gerald Casey of 498 Orchard Street, New Haven, 15 years of age, an unlicensed operator of motor vehicles in Connecticut, and taken by him without permission of the owner, was proceeding easterly toward West Haven and slightly to the right of the center of said highway, at a rate of speed estimated to be 25 miles an hour.

Following said Maxwell vehicle and about 60 feet distant therefrom was a Chandler motor vehicle, Connecticut register, No. 2137, owned by Irwin P. Wener of 137 California street, West Haven, a licensed operator of motor vehicles in Connecticut.

"Casey endeavoring to slow up at said curve, put out his arm as a warning to the following Chandler operator. As he did this deceased who evidently was operating his car at a high rate of speed side-swiped said Maxwell vehicle on its left, and then continuing to his left crossed the highway diagonally over the concreted portion and across the sidewalk, striking a boulder with his left front wheel, bending the axle and then headed toward a side street of the Aimes Point property known as Ocean avenue, where it struck a pole and overturned."

FITCHVILLE PREPARING FOR OBSERVANCE OF THE FOURTH

Supreme and spectacular amusement features are planned for the proper observance of the glorious Fourth in Fitchville by the committees elected at a community meeting of the village, which was held in Palmer hall, Tuesday evening. Although details of the entire program have not been formulated fully at this early date citizens of this section of the state may rest assured that the happenings this year in the quilt town have been unsurpassed in previous years. A baseball game between the local nine and the fastest amateur team in these parts will be but one of the star attractions. An honest to goodness home cooked dinner, athletic events, parade, fireworks and dance will all contribute in making the celebration a gala affair.

COMBAT BETWEEN STRIKERS AND POLICE IN NOVA SCOTIA

Battle Over Possession of the Waterford Power Plant, Which Operates Several Mines—One Striker Killed and Scores of Miners and Police Injured—Government to Take Action to Restore Order—Striking Miners Were in Possession of the Streets of New Waterford Last Night.

New Waterford, N. S., June 11.—(AP)—Striking mine workers were in undisputed possession of the streets of this town tonight after a day of struggle in which one of their number was killed by gun fire, a second shot and seriously wounded, and a large numbre of miners and police employed by the British Empire Steel Corporation were injured, some of them seriously. General Manager H. J. McCann, of the corporation and a number of officials who were in the New Waterford power station when it was captured by strikers about noon were missing and were believed to have sought safety in the woods. Of the force of company police which sought to defend the station 24 were in the town jail for their own protection, several were in a hospital and the others were dispersed.

William Davis, a striker, was shot dead when company police opened fire to defend the power station. Gilbert Watson, also a striker, was shot through the stomach and is in a serious condition. The trouble, the first serious disorders in a strike now three months old, began early today when officials and company police seized the power station three miles from the center of New Waterford and got up steam preparatory to starting the plant, which generates power for the maintenance of a group of mines in the southern area of the Cape Breton coal fields.

Pickets of the United Mine Workers of America, who have taken possession of the plant several days ago, retired to the baseball park where they were joined by hundreds of miners from collieries in the vicinity. In the meantime the force at the station proceeded to consolidate their position by erecting barbed wire entanglements.

The police entered the plant about 4:30 o'clock in the morning. About noon a force of strikers estimated at 2,000 marched from the baseball park, and surrounded the place, cutting off all communication with the outside. It was led by McNeil, a member of the United Mine Workers' board for the district. The company's mounted police, about 45 in number, charged the crowd, hoping to disperse it, but the men were either unaccustomed to horses or insufficiently trained and the charges were not pressed.

As the horses lost their way in the crowd, swarms of strikers surrounded them and began to drag the policemen to the ground. It was then that the shooting started, and Davis and Watson were struck. Four more men three strikers and a policeman, were seriously injured in this battle and were taken to a hospital. In 15 minutes the power station was in the hands of the miners and its defenders had fled.

The mounted men were the center of a milling mob and some of them were able to retreat toward the town, where they were given police protection and lodged in the jail. Of the 24 rescued in this manner, several were wounded, and all bore marks of battle. Chief of Police Dan Graham refused to allow the wounded men to be taken to the hospital in the fear that the latter building might be attacked, so they remained behind the bars of the jail. Several f the horsemen who were able to reach the town were dragged from their mounts and beaten, while others escaped to the woods.

General Manager McCann and a number of officials of the British Empire Steel Corporation, were known to have been in the plant when it was recaptured and not been heard from early tonight. It was believed that these officials had sought safety in the nearby woods when the little force of company police was driven out by the army of miners.

Tonight the victorious miners were marching and celebrating in the streets of New Waterford, but the local police reported that there was no disorder.

The strike in the Cape Breton coal fields began early in March when 12,000 miners threw down their tools after the British Empire Steel Corporation closed several collieries and suspended store credits to 2,000 striking miners in the southern section. Negotiations for a return to work failed when the company insisted upon a wage cut of 10 per cent. and concessions in working conditions. While there had been many threats of violence during the long and stormy negotiations since the strike was called, today's battle was the first open outbreak.

GOV'T TO TAKE STEPS TO QUELL DISORDERS

Halifax, N. S., June 11.—(AP)—An announcement that steps to quell the disorders at New Waterford have been taken by the government which will throw all its resources toward restoring order, was made here late today by Attorney General W. J. O'Hearn. He was called back to the capital from a political tour when news of the outbreak reached this city.

SITUATION REFERRED TO AS STATE OF CIVIL WAR

Ottawa, June 11.—(AP)—The New Waterford strike situation was referred to as "a state of civil war" by J. S. Woodsworth, labor, center Winnipeg, in the house today when he asked how far the disorders were to proceed before the government would interfere.

Minister of Labor Murdock said official dispatches confirmed details given in the newspapers but the government assumed the provincial authorities would ask assistance if needed and up to a late hour this afternoon no such request had been received.

HARRY K. THAW OBJECTS TO TREATMENT BY PRESS

New York, June 11.—(AP)—Harry K. Thaw, whose return to the bright lights of Broadway a week ago for the first time since his release from an institution, caused widespread comment and whose second return last night, when he spent a quiet evening in a night club with a bevy of chorus girls, brought him renewed publicity, issued a statement through his counsel tonight saying that he would not submit to any further "hounding or pounding."

He demanded the "same fair and square chance which every American is entitled to" and asserted that he had done nothing to warrant "exploitation" in the newspapers. The statement follows:

"I propose to prosecute any false accounts published against me in the future. I will not submit to any further hounding or pounding. The public in general has been giving me the same fair and square chance which every American is entitled to. There is no reason why I should be treated differently by the press.

"I protest against being exploited in the newspapers in sensational headlines and news items when I have done nothing to give warrant to such spreads. I have a right to go about my business as long as my conduct is not different from that of any other man.

"I refuse to be made the target any longer for false reports and cartoons, or to be the victim of press agents whose accounts are swallowed whole by newspapers without investigation. The stories recently published about me are utterly false.

"I gave no gifts, nor extravagant tips, nor lavish entertainment. I have been demeaning myself in the same manner as any decent citizen. I realize that on account of my having been so much in the public print I am in the public eye wherever I go.

"At times I have found it difficult to escape intrusion, and whenever I have been approached by the management of any public place and have been introduced to different people, I have considered it good policy not to be rude, but to accept these courtesies. This gentleman's conduct on my part ought not to be the basis of a lot of stories made out of whole cloth and sheer imagination to create a sensation."

PRISONER O'MAHONY HAS BROKEN HUNGER STRIKE

Bridgeport, Conn., June 11.—(AP)—James N. B. O'Mahony, confessed slayer of his sweetheart, Miss Beatrice Donnelly in Greenwich Easter Sunday, broke his six days' fast in the county jail today by eating everything on the bill of fare. O'Mahony had gone on a hunger strike for the purpose of hastening his trial, according to attendants. The trial is being delayed until fall in order to permit further investigation. O'Mahony called in a priest this morning. The latter had little trouble in persuading him to break his fast. In fact, it appeared O'Mahony had called for the priest so as to make it appear he had been influenced to break his hunger strike, not because he had weakened physically, according to one of the attending physicians.

APPEAL TO GOV. TRUMBULL TO VETO STATE TAX ON FILMS

Hartford, Conn., June 11.—(AP)—Declaring that "spite influences" and the "meddlesomeness of self-appointed custodians of the public morals," were largely responsible for passage of the bill, Benedict M. Holden, of this city, today appealed to Governor Trumbull at a hearing at the capitol to veto the moving picture tax bill. Speaking for about ninety small theatre owners, who were present, he gave as his opinion that the bill is unconstitutional; that it could not be forced because of interstate commerce complications which would arise and that its tax features would be ruinous to the picture theatre industry.

Representative Harry Durant, of Guilford, chief sponsor of the bill in the legislature and formerly managing editor with the Famous Players Lasky corporation, defended the proposed measure. He declared the opponents were "putting up a censorship smoke screen," to avoid paying the tax and characterized the hearing as a trial of himself, Tax Commissioner Blodgett, the members of the general assembly and "everything and everyone but the bill itself."

Tax Commissioner Blodgett created considerable stir by opposing the censorship provisions. "I don't believe pictures should be censored because they move any more than books should be censored because they don't move," he said.

ALLIES HAVE TEXT OF FRENCH NOTE TO GERMANY

Paris, June 11.—(AP)—Foreign Minister Briand today forwarded to the allied governments the final text of the French reply to the German proposal for a western European security pact.

Immediately upon his return from Geneva today, Foreign Minister Briand conferred with M. Berthelot, general security of the French foreign office, on the security pact. Agreement having been reached with Foreign Secretary Austen Chamberlain, of Great Britain, approval is awaited from Rome and Brussels.

When this is indicated, the answer to the German proposal will be sent to Berlin, and will be made public. The text of the original German security offer will be published at the same time.

New Haven, June 11—The appeals of five eclectic doctors in the action of the state of Connecticut were taken up by the supreme court of errors here today. The doctors were represented by John B. Dillon of Bridgeport and the appeals all came from Fairfield county. Attorney General Frank E. Healy presented the arguments for the state. Although the cases were listed separately, the five cases were combined as one, the arguments dealing with the cases collectively.

Those who appealed were Harry Chalmson, Arnold H. Brien, Gerald A. Richardson, Isadore Yochelman and Barnard Rolka.

TRIBESMEN ARE BRINGING PRESSURE UPON SPANISH

Madrid, June 11.—(A. P.)—An official statement issued here today, says the enemy tribesmen in Morocco are exerting pressure upon Spanish for locations on the eastern and western fronts of the Spanish protectorate.

The rebels yesterday attacked a Spanish convoy at Ben Karrich. The Spaniards lost ten European troops killed or wounded and 30 native troopers killed or wounded.

FRENCH TO SUPPORT SULTAN OF MOROCCO

Rabat, French Morocco, June 11.—(AP)—The sultan of Morocco can count upon the entire loyalty and energy of France to maintain intact his authority. This information was conveyed to Sultan Mulai Yussef today by Paul Painleve, the French premier, in the course of a visit he paid the Moroccan ruler. M. Painleve was accompanied to the palace by Marshal Lyautey, the French resident general.

The reception of M. Painleve, who flew to Morocco yesterday from France, by the de jure ruler of Morocco took place amid a picturesque setting in the palace.

When M. Painleve was officially presented to the sultan the conversation between them was conducted through an interpreter.

"You have the sultan's salutations," said the interpreter to M. Painleve. "The visit of the president of the French council to Morocco gladdens the heart of the sultan. It means that France has interested herself in Morocco with all her heart."

Replying, M. Painleve said: "I am happy to present my respects to the sultan. He can count on the entire loyalty and energy of France."

The sultan spoke again, and the interpreter said: "The sultan heartily believes your sentiments and begs you to give all support to Marshal Lyautey in the present circumstances."

"Marshal Lyautey and myself are very old and intimate friends," replied the premier.

The interpreter conveyed this remark to the sultan and then translated to the premier the reply of Mulai Yussef. "The most important thing for the sultan is the maintenance of the French protectorate in Morocco."

"That is precisely the view of myself and the French government," replied M. Painleve.

The interpreter: "The authority of the sultan remains intact?"

M. Painleve: "It remains undivided and undividable."

The premier then visited war wounded in the hospitals. He will inspect the front lines tomorrow.

DOROTHY PERKINS TO TAKE STAND TODAY

New York, June 11.—(A. P.)—Dorothy Perkins, alleged slayer of her sweetheart, Thomas A. Templeton, of Jersey City, at a Bay Ridge, L. I., party in her home, will take the stand tomorrow in her own defense.

Sydney R. Lash, defense counsel, indicated the girl would be brought to the stand after Mickey Connors, her married suitor, has testified. Connors will be brought from the workhouse where he is serving a sentence for wife beating.

In its attempt to prove the shooting was accidental, the defense introduced today as evidence a coat and vest worn by Rudolph Perkins, the girl's father at the time of the shooting. The coat had a hole in its right side as though made by a bullet, and the vest beneath showed a furrow.

Adjournment came today with Mrs. Letitia Dunlop, an aunt of the defendant, under cross examination.

Mrs. Margaret Perkins, mother of the defendant, testified the fatal shot was fired when she grabbed her husband by the arms, as he attempted to slap the girl. She declared her husband was "very drunk" at the time. Cross examination appeared to confuse the mother. She said her husband held the gun at the time of the shooting but that Dorothy dropped it. The prosecution introduced a statement of Mrs. Perkins, taken by the homicide squad stenographer, which it declares failed to agree with her testimony today.

OPENING OF TRIAL OF WILLIAM D. SHEPHERD

Chicago, June 11.—(AP)—Castigated by the prosecution, William Darling Shepherd, Chicago lawyer, went on trial today, charged with the murder of William Nelson McClintock, millionaire orphan. Shepherd and his wife saw a fortune slipping away from them when young McClintock planned to marry and Shepherd greedily slew his wife's ward to gain control of the $1,000,000 estates, the prosecution charged. Shepherd was described as a constitutionally lazy man, who with his wife lived as panhandlers upon the bounty of a boy.

"He saw his meal ticket slipping away from him and his wife," said Robert E. Crowe, the state's attorney, in outlining what the state regards as the motive for the alleged murder.

"She didn't have a dime and he didn't have a dime. After sixteen years in possession of this large estate, which they considered theirs, it looked as if Shepherd would have to go to driving a truck to make a living. It was pretty hard to contemplate the dreary winter ahead of them."

AUTOMOBILE ACCIDENTS CAUSE OF TWO DEATHS

Stamford, June 11.—(A. P.)—Two persons died at the Stamford hospital tonight as the result of automobile accidents. Eugene Clark of Sound Beach died from injuries received last Saturday night when the automobile in which he was riding was driven by Charles Eurner of Stamford, collided with a machine driven by Ralph Studwell of Stamford. Both drivers were held by the police pending investigation. George Hamlin, 60, of Stamford, died tonight from injuries received Wednesday when he was hit by a machine driven by Miss Edith A. Robbins of Greenwich.

A NEW RULING FOR MAILERS OF PARCELS

Washington, June 11.—(AP)—The postoffice department announced today that beginning August 1, mailers of parcels must guarantee return postage in event of non-delivery or renounce all claim to the parcel. The regulation postal officials calculate this will reduce by one-third the number of parcels sents to the dead letter office, save thousands of dollars for the mailing public and for the government and eliminate an immense waste of time.

Russia Would Push Hostilities at Canton

Has Offered $10,000,000 and 60,000 Rifles, With Ammunition, to the Yunnanese.

Canton, June 11.—(AP)—Yang Hai Min, Yunnanese commander, told the Associated Press correspondent today that soviet Russia had offered the Yunnanese $10,000,000 and 60,000 rifles with appropriate ammunition, provided a certain agreement was signed. Gen. Yang said the offer was refused. He did not say what the proposed agreement contained.

Fighting continued today although a shortage of ammunition on both sides was reported. The site of the battle was unchanged, despite the fact that leader of both the Yunnanese, who hold the city, and the Cantonese, who are attacking the city from the island of Honan, had expressed themselves as willing to remove the fighting to some point outside the urban limits.

The consul said the committee at Shanghai in charge of food conyrol announced that available supply was ample. He reported that Admiral McVey commanding the American forces and the senior naval officer in the Shanghai region had informed him that local civil authorities and military in the upriver ports had the situation under control and gave ample assurances of protection for foreigners. This had made the landing of naval guards unnecessary except in isolated cases and practically all of these had already been withdrawn.

The Shanghai strike has extended to the Japanese coast and river steamers but the consul general pointed out that it was not as serious a situation as would otherwise have been caused in view of the fact that there was "no freight available" for the vessels at Shanghai.

NO CAUSE FOR ALARM FOR AMERICANS IN SHANGHAI

Washington, June 11.—(AP)—Consul General Cunningham reported to the war department today that there was "no cause for alarm for the safety of American lives and property" at present in the Shanghai region. There had been "great improvement" in general conditions, he said, although the strike was, "not subsiding perceptibly."

RIOTERS ATTACKED THE BRITISH ARMORY

Shanghai, June 11.—(AP)—After a series of anti-foreign disturbances here today, the rioters attacked the British volunteer armory. Firehose was used against them, but proved unavailing, and a machine gun was turned on the rioters, eight of whom were killed and many wounded.

MAKES SIXTH ESCAPE FROM STATE HOSPITAL

Providence, R. I., June 11.—(A. P.)—Frank Weeden, escaped for the sixth time today from the state hospital for mental disease at Howard, R. I., police of Providence, Cranston and other neighboring communities, have stretched a cordon around highways and woods in the vicinity in the effort to apprehend him. Weeden has a record of four escapes from the Hudson River hospital, PUoughkeepsie, N. Y.

With a heavy plank left in the basement, by workmen, Weeden pried his way through a grating formed by three quarter inch steel bars six inches apart, while other inmates of the clothes room, where he had been working, were taking a ten minute airing this afternoon.

Weeden's most sensational escape was in July, 1923, when he was accused of the murder of 7 year old Vincenzo Picano of Thornton, but later exonerated. He was sought for a year in Rhode Island and Connecticut and finally given up for dead. In August, 1924, he was found in the Hudson River hospital at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where he had been an inmate since the previous August.

Weeden was committed to the state hospital as murderously insane in 1902, after an attempt to kill his cousin, a young woman with whom he was infatuated. He is a powerful man, 48 years old, almost bald, and with only one eye. He weighs 190 pounds and is five feet, seven and one-half inches tall.

STUDENT CHARGED WITH VIOLATING AVIATION LAWS

New Haven, June 11.—(A. P.)—A warrant was issued tonight for the arrest of Thomas B. Sweeney, Jr., a student at Yale in the class of 1926 and whose home is in Washington, D. C., charged with violation of the aviation laws. Sweeney, in his own plane which he keeps at the Bethany flying field, flew over Yale field during the Yale-Princeton freshman baseball game May 23, and it is claimed that at one time his machine was but fifty feet above the press box.

The issuing of the warrant was made upon complaint of the Yale Athletic association. Harold F. Woodcock of the association was in communication with the state motor vehicle commission and the ownership of the plane was traced. It is understood that Sweeney will give himself up to the police tomorrow.

The charges against Sweeney are that he flew over an athletic field in which persons were assembled and that he flew over New Haven at a height less than 2,000 feet.

TESTIMONIAL DINNER TO MRS. ELIZABETH COE

Waterbury, June 11.—(A. P.)—Lieut. Governor J. Edwin Brainard of Branford, State Tax Commissioner W. H. Blodgett of Winsted, Congressman James P. Glynn of Winsted, County Sheriff James Geddes of this city and Mrs. Alice Russ of Shelton, republican national committee woman were among the republican figures of prominence who expressed appreciation for the legislative activities of Mrs. Elizabeth Coe at the testimonial dinner given her at the Elton here, tonight, by the Women's Republican club.

Mrs. Coe is the first woman from Waterbury to represent the city in the general assembly. She was presented with a set of resolutions by the Republican Women's club, a platinum watch by the republican town committee and a diamond and platinum bar pin by the Pallotti club and an emeral and platinum bracelet by the Italian Women's Republican club.

MacMillan Without Special Instructions

Government Proceeding on Theory That No Action is Necessary Until Discoveries Are Made.

Washington, June 11.—(AP)—The Macmillan expedition when it departs for the Arctic June 17, Secretary Wilbur said today, will carry no special instructions concerning the course it should pursue in claiming any lands which may be discovered or in flying over disputed territory.

The question was brought up in a letter to Mr. Wilbur from Donald B. Macmill, head of the expedition who asked if there were any special instructions in view of statements at Ottawa indicating an interest of the part of the Canadian government in the plans for the undertaking. The letter was transmitted to the state department, but Mr. Wilbur said today no reply was expected, adding, however, that the two departments were in accord on the decision to provide no special instructions for the explorer.

It is understood to be the position of the departments that no question has been raised as to the right of the navy planes which will accompany the expedition to fly over Ellesmere Island or any other territory, including that claimed by Canada north of its generally recognized boundaries. Inasmuch as no question of sovereignty would be raised unless land were discovered in the unexplored region to be visited by the expedition, the responsible officials also appear to feel that no necessity exists for proceedings on the theory that such discoveries may be made and that if any developments arise requiring action, it will be time enough then to consider them.

N. Y. LAWYER INDICTED FOR GRAND LARCENY

New York, June 11.—(AP)—Described by District Attorney Eaton as the "master mind" of a band of robbers and swindlers that has stolen thousands of dollars from Wall street messengers, Israel Brinkman, a lawyer, was indicted today for grand larceny in the first degree and receiving stolen property. Brinkman is alleged to have tendered stolen securities to several banks as collateral for large loans.

Samuel Kosandorf, alias Braunstein, was indicted with Brinkman on charges of being implicated on a $58,000 fraud on Mark Rothkrug, a clothing merchant, who was a client of the attorney. The investigation of Rothkrug's charges, Mr. Eaton said, led to the indictments on the stolen securities charges.

Rothkrug alleged that Brinkman told him last September that a friend had invented a "little press" for copying bank notes and that he would allow Rothkrug as an old client to share in the illicit gains.

Rothkrug said that the next day he withdrew $54,000 in cash from the bank, all in $500 and $1,000 notes and brought it to Brinkman's office to be "copied."

FIVE DAYS EXTENSION IN GERALD CHAPMAN CASE

Hartford, June 11.—(A. P.)—An extension of five days for the filing of the last papers in the appeal of Gerald Chapman, the time for which expired today, was granted by Judge Newell Jennings today on the application of Chapman's junior counsel, Nathan O. Freedman.

Chapman is appealing to the supreme court his conviction in the superior court for the murder of Patrolman James Skelly in New Britain, and has been granted a reprieve until December 3 to allow the supreme court to hear the appeal at its October term in Hartford.

The law requires that after the finding of the trial judge had been made in an appeal preceding the appeal must be filed one week later. Mr. Freedman having been engaged with the trial of a case in Tolland county since the filing of Judge Jennings' finding June 4, was unable to work on the Chapman case, he said. When the time expired today he telephoned to Judge Jennings at Bridgeport, where he is engaged on the bench, legislated to the judge how busy he had been and was granted the five days additional to get in the appeal.

8 MONTHS FOR RESISTING A FEDERAL OFFICER

Hartford, June 11.—(A. P.)—Alphonso Mengione of New Haven was sentenced to eight months in prison for resisting a federal officer in the performance of his duty here before Judge Thomas in United States court today after the jury had been out two hours. "Choose your own jail," the judge told the convicted man after the jury had returned with the "guilty" verdict. Sentence was pronounced after Assistant United States Attorney George H. Cohen had appealed to the judge to inflict a seve sentence, "New Haven is a hot-bed for dope-peddlers and their addicts," the United States attorney said. "The eyes of every violator of the Harrison Narcotic act is turned upon Hartford and the result of this sentence. "Dope peddlers" will govern themselves accordingly. The maximum penalty is one year in jail or $2,000 fine or both. Assistant United States Attorney George Cohen prosecuted the case for the government.

STUDENT CONFESSED HE KILLED FOOTBALL PLAYER

Shreveport, La., June 11.—(A. P.)—George A. Gill, 23, senior law student at Loyola university, New Orleans, tonight confessed here, the sheriff's office announced, that he killed Robert (Bob) Reid, missing Center college football player late Wednesday night at Pleasureville near here. Gill's confession was said to have stated that he killed Reid with an oar after an altercation over Mrs. Gill.

Gill, who was locked in jail here following the alleged confession was quoted as having said that his wife had complained to him of attentions from Reid and that he accompanied his wife to a secluded spot near Pleasureville, a swimming resort, where she was to have kept an apartment with Reid.

The admission credited to Gill says that a fight ensued and the two, struggling near the water's edge, fell in. After killing Reid, by blows on the head, he left the body in the water. The body has not been recovered.

A charge of murder has been filed against Gill.

RELIEF PROVIDED FOR THE VICTIMS OF FIRE AT NAHANT

The Red Cross and Salvation Army Have Established Relief Stations, to Furnish Food and Clothing—Seventy Buildings Were Destroyed, of Which 68 Were Homes—Loss is Placed at $500,000—Timely Arrival of a Boston Fire Boat Prevented Furthur Disaster.

Nahant, Mass., June 11.—(AP)—This little seacoast resort town, home of the late Senator Lodge and a neighbor of Swampscott, where President Coolidge will make his summer home, tonight viewed a scene of desolation where fire today destroyed seventy buildings. Driven by a strong shifting wind the flames cut a swath across the top of Center Hill at Bass Point, nearly half a mile long and at some places almost a quarter of a mile wide. The damage, which could not be accurately estimated, was placed at half a million dollars. Of the buildings burned 68 were homes, a large proportion of which were permanent year-around residences.

Only the timely arrival of a Boston fire boat prevented a disaster which might have engulfed the entire beach resort of the Bass Point side of Nahant. The fire had quickly swept beyond control of the little local fire department which attempted to fight the flames with water drawn from four-inch mains laid down 40 years ago. Lack of water also hampered firemen and pumpers sent from Lynn. A big Boston fire boat made the long trip here in 59 minutes.

Soon two 1,100-foot lines of hose were delivering 3,000 gallons of sea water a minute and in three-quarters of an hour the fire was under control.

Only one man was severely injured and there was no loss of life, despite the fact that more than 200 persons were forced to flee from burning homes clad only in night clothing.

The origin of the fire which started at about 2:40 a. m. in the Winthrop club, a Boston young men's organization, may never be ascertained, it was said. Police and fire chiefs inclined to the belief that a smoldering cigarette stub might have started the flames.

Elton Dussault, forced to jump from the roof of a house on which he was helping fight the flames, suffered a broken arm and other injuries. Otherwise injuries were confined to slight burns suffered by residents as they made their way from blazing homes and slight cuts and bruises sustained by firemen.

Private and organized charity tonight wa providing relief to scores of persons who lost their entire property and belongings. The Red Cross, the Salvation Army and the board of selectmen organized relief stations which furnished food and clothing. Business firms from Lynn rushed food, trucks, teams, men and clothing to the scene.

The Winthrop cottage in which the fire started, was in the rear of the Remy House. This hotel, however, was saved, as was the Bass Point House. Driven northward for a time, the flames destroyed a few cottages. Then the wind shifted. Meanwhile policemen and militia spread the alarm. Then the breeze, blowing strongly southward, swept all before it.

Losses among the townsfolk were heavy. High rates had caused many to carry small amounts of insurance. One aged resident wept as he surveyed the ruins of his little home.

Investigation was at once undertaken to determine the cause of the fire. Town officials today declared their intention of replacing the antiquated water system with large mains throughout the district.

STRIKE OF PLASTERERS AN IMPORTANT PROBLEM

Washington, June 11.—(AP)—The jurisdicational dispute between the plasterers' and bricklayers' unions has developed into one of the most important problems ever brought to the attention of the conciliation bureau of the labor department, in the opinion of officials there, who have been studying the situation for some time.

Despite secrecy placed by officials around their attempts to settle the dispute, it became known today that the entire case had been laid before Secretary Davis in an effort to prevent a general strike of the two organizations.

The present controversy, it was explained, is primarily between the plasterers' and bricklayers' unions, the contractors holding that they are in the position of innocent bystanders, the International Plasterers' union has attempted to organize into separate unions plasterers who have previously been under the jurisdiction of the bricklayers' unions in various localities. The bricklayers' union has apposed this policy and the dispute already has led to cessation of work in affected cities at various times.

The strike announced by the plasterers' union in New York last night, when carried out, will affect property under construction by the George A. Fuller company, Thompson Starrett company and the Long Acre Engineering and Construction company, valued at approximately $75,000,000.

BROTHERS ARE TO SEARCH FOR WILLIAM W. NUTTING

New Brunswick, N. J., June 11—Robert W. and J. Seward Johnson, brothers and members of the surgical supply firm of Johnson & Johnson, announced today that they will leave this week for Newfoundland, to search for William Washburn Nutting and three companions who have been missing since August 10, 1924, when they sailed from Iceland to cross the Atlantic in a 40-foot sloop.

At Newfoundland the Johnson brothers will be met by their 120-ft. schooner, Zodiac. According to their present plans they will cruise north from Labrador on June 25. The vessel will be manned by a crew of ten, including D. B. Stoneleigh, Yale mineralogist.

With Nutting were Arthur S. Hildebrand, author, John Townsahi, marine painter, and a Norwegian amateur skipper. The party sailed from Reykjavik, Iceland, in the sloop Leif Erickson, intended to "follow the trail of the Vikings" to Baddeck, N. S., last winter, the U. S. Cruiser Trenton made a futile search of northern waters for the missing men.

MONOPOLY ALLEGED OF TANNERS CORPORATIONS

Washington, June 11—Dissolution of alleged trust engaged in the manufacture and sale of cattle and calf hair and soft hair felt is sought by the government in a civil suit filed today in the United States district court for northern Illinois.

Named as principal defendants in the suit were the Tanners Products company, formerly the Illinois Leather company, which was founded by the late Wendell King, in 1864, and the American Hair Felt company, both of them Delaware corporations with headquarters in Chicago.

In addition, 115 subsidiary tanning corporations were listed as defendants together with 13 officials and employes of the concerns, five unincorporated firms doing business as partnerships, and 12 individual stockholders in the Tanners Products company.

The defendants are charged with maintaining a combination and conspiracy in restraint of trade through contracts, price agreements and corporate stock acquisitions. Their product is used extensively for plastering purposes and in the manufacture of various kinds of soft hair felt.

The Tanners Products company, the American Hair Felt Co., and their subsidiaries, were said to be engaged in the manufacture of or production and sale of "substantially every commodity in the manufacture of production of which cattle and calf hair is used." The former company was described as controlling 85 per cent. of the cattle and calf hair business and approximately 50 per cent. or more of the goat hair sold in the United States, and the latter as producing 85 per cent. of the supply of soft and insulating hair felt.

The alleged monopoly had its inception, it was charged in 1885, when the Illinois Leather company was reorganized and its officers "inducted a number of tanning concerns" to become stockholders.

"In order to gain control of the entire output of cattle and calf hair and market same cooperatively, and eliminate competition among themselves," it was alleged, these tanning concerns "acquired stock in and were designated 'contributing stockholder'" of the Tanners Products company, and each "agreed to deliver its entire output" to the company.

COOLIDGE'S SPEECH WELL RECEIVED IN NORWAY

Oslo, Norway, June 11—President Coolidge's recent address at the Minnesota state fair grounds in commemoration of those Norsemen who emigrated to the United States a hundred years ago, has called forth unbounded enthusiasm in Norway, which is reflected in the despatches, special articles and editorials in the Norwegian papers.

The Norwegian mercantile shipping gazette remarks: "President Coolidge's words in high recognition of our compatriots who emigrated from the home country must go directly to the heart and attach Norwegians still closer to the nation of which they are now a part. But words of joy and pride in Norway will also arise, for the president's words will be heard by the families and friends of the immigrants and will be remembered by all Norwegians, because more than all else they are evidence of faith and confidence in the Norwegian people and Norwegian abilities in a great country where competition is keen."

The Aftenposten declared that the messages describing the commemoration have been received everywhere in Norway with the most sincere joy.

WILLIMANTIC

The June monthly, which is the final meeting for the school year of the town school committee, was held Wednesday evening at Windham High School, with five members present. In the absence of Chairman William J. Sweeney, Mayor Hickey was chosen chairman pro tem. Minutes of the May meeting were read and approved as read by the secretary, Superintendent of Schools, Egbert A. Case. A letter of acknowledgement was read from John A. McKenna for his appointment as truant officer. His report of no cases of truancy for the month of June was accepted. The report of school physician, Dr. W. P. S. Keating was deferred owing to Dr. Keating's inability to be present. The budget for next year, presented by Mr. Case was then discussed by the committee. An estimate of the school expenses for the year, subject to a revision in September, when the registration will provide a more reliable basis for estimate, calls for $173,000, an increase of $10,000 over the expenses for this year. A statement preceding the budget stated that Windham's schools have again reached that condition from which they can promise standing room only for any additional children, while the number of children is steadily on the increase. Windham High School itself, designed for the accommodation of six hundred pupils, has already a registration of six hundred sixty for next year. If these can be accommodated, the increase in our tuition income will approximate $3,000, and make it possessing year without increasing the table to conduct the schools for the burden of the tax-payer. The committee looked over a report of the survey of the schools of the town made by experts of a Hartford fire insurance company within the last few months, containing suggestions in the way of installing fire extinguishers, fire escapes, automatic doors, boilers, etc. The report was accepted, and it was voted to carry out the suggestions contained in it. Mr. Case suggested the following to be appointed enumerators of school children in the fall: First district, John A. McKenna; second district, Thomas F. Connelly; Windham district, Miss Elisabeth Anderson. The recommendations were adopted. Following the custom of some years, meetings of the board were voted discontinued during July and August, with urgent bills to be paid at the sanction of the auditors.

At a conference of members of the strikers' committee, City Health Officer Dr. W. P. S. Keating, Acting Fire Chief Henry J. Kelley, and a representative of the state department of health, held Wednesday afternoon, the site chosen for the strikers' tented city was looked over, questions of fire hazards, sanitation, and surroundings examined, and a change in the location of their future headquarters decided upon. Instead of the Bacon lot on Natchaug street, final choice was made of land on North Windham road, just over the city line and across from the war-time liberty gardens on the Capen estate. It was stated that plans are to be furthered by the strikers' committee for the use of this lot, if the American Thread Company goes through with its intention of dispossessing former operatives now occupying company tenements.

The coming week is the time set for graduation exercises in the local schools. The first will be Tuesday evening at 7:45 at High School auditorium, with a class of 34, from Windham Street Model School. School Committeeman Robert O. Snow, making the presentation of diplomas. Henry Quinn; also for Natchaug Grammar School in high school auditorium at 8:45, a class of forty-nine receiving diplomas from Dr. W. P. S. Keating, a member of the school board. On Wednesday, exercises will be held in village hall, North Windham, a class of four receiving diplomas, presented by Joseph F. Gaudreau, and seven candidates from South Windham Grammar School will be given diplomas by L. Lee Thompson in Guilford Smith Hall at 2:30 p. m. J., ordering him to quit the old Jim Robertson Place on the Hebron-Colchester highway for non-payment of rent. A civil suit instituted in conjunction with the order to quit the premises asks for damages of $500. The total of unpaid rent to date is $107. The case is returnable before the Tolland county superior court the first Tuesday in September. Egan alleges that he does not hold any property and must pay the rent. More About Benedict Arnold

Benedict Arnold, the revolutionary traitor in the United States, has some apologists today, but they are not among the residents of St. John, New Brunswick, where, known in Canada, he and some other New York royalists helped to found both in 1783. Arnold's memory is not held high by the Canadians there, who resent that his haughtiness and high-handed methods ex-asperated the other royalists. He was acutally hanged in effigy at one time and driven from the community. It is said he indulged in sharp practices and swindling. He was also accused of incendiarism in connection with some richly stocked stores.

World's Oldest Bush

According to Dr. Edgar T. Wherry of the department of agriculture, a box huckleberry bush in Perry county, Pa., is the oldest bush in the world. This remarkable bush is a mile and a quarter long and covers the entire side of a hill. Dr. Wherry estimates that it grows 6 inches a year. Taking that as a basis the plant must be some thing like 12,000 years old.

DANIELSON

Graduation exercises of eight grade pupils of various schools in the several communities of the town of Killingly were held at the town hall on Thursday afternoon. The exercises attracted a capacity audience and were reminiscent of many similar functions in other years. There were many of the touches that suggest the high school commencement exercises and much of the impressiveness.

This year list of graduates and the schools of Killingly they have attended is as follows:

The processional, Pomp and Circumstances, played by Miss Grace Stanton, opened the exercises. The invocation was by Rev. Roger C. Stimson. Rosebuds was sung by the members of the class of 1925. A recitation, A Legend of Alexander's Lake, was given by Miss Doris Bateson of Attawaugan. Girls of grades 7 and 8 of the Attawaugan school sang a Venetian Boat Song. A dialogue, given by members of the eighth grade of the East Killingly school, was the next summer. A violin solo, Theme de Mercandante, was given by Arthur Veilleux of Goodyear and Lullaby by grade 3 of the Center school. Frances Swainson of Dayville presented an original poem—June. The essay of the afternoon—Ever On! was by Miss Ruth Nichols of Danielson. An interesting feature of the program was a patriotic discussion by members of the 8th grade of the Dayville school—Our Flag—What It Stands For; Why We Honor It. Other numbers were a song, Whispering Hope, by the 8th grade of the Danielson school, a flag drill, Interger Vitae, Horace Ode XXII, by the class of 1925 and the singing of America. Benediction was by Rev. Leonard Richards of St. Alban's church. Members of the class received diplomas.

That of which much has been said in this column during the past fortnight—the Textile Products exhibit of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association—opened most auspiciously at the state armory Thursday evening. Scores of the towns, villages and cities of eastern Connecticut were represented in the attendance that crowded into the armory to see what is unqualifiedly the finest exhibition of its kind ever staged in southern New England. This is admitted by those who have seen many such expositions.

A prediction often made relative to this mammoth display has come true. People—even mill men—are amazed at the variety, the beauty and the quality of the fabrics displayed by mills in this immediate territory. The big drill hall of the armory is very much like a department store with a wonderful line of textiles—textiles that are the last word in the lines of materials represented. There are always glittering displays of materials in imitation silks, perfectly stunning things in printed designs, curtain materials galore, worsted, woolens, flannels and a score of other products of the loom that women will love to feast their eyes on. They may look to their heart's content, too, the only hardship being that there are no salesmen on hand, though every booth has attendants to explain all about each display.

The entire exposition rates as an educational display. So fine as the show developed that the exhibitors are delighted with their success—and well they may be.

The drill shed was brilliant with lights and handsomely decorated when the exhibit opened Thursday evening. Formalities of the opening night included the presentation of a gold key by Warden Walter Anderson to President Norman Parkhurst, Jewett City, of the Eastern Connecticut Mills association, an address by E. Kent Hubbard, Middletown, president of the Manufacturers' association of Connecticut, and other addresses by representatives of textile organizations and associations.

No display lacked attention during the evening. There were crowds before every booth and crowds moved from one quarter to another. The crowds saw several types of modern looms in operation, these in exhibits by machinery manufacturers. They could watch if they wished the actual weaving of some materials in Rayon silk products for which there is a great demand just now. Many found interest in the humidifying system that has been set up and is in actual operation as a feature of the show. They found the displays of the mill supply and accessory houses of great interest. There was so much to look at that there need be little surprise over the fact that many were bewildered. Exclamations of delight of one particular thing or another were to be heard on every side.

The armory exhibit would convince the sourest pessimist that Eastern Connecticut is a wonderful textile manufacturing area. It will make anyone loyal by nature to this section of the state proud of the really wonderful things its textile corporations are achieving. It will kill much of the gloom about New England and its industries slipping. The show is a tonic to those who have faith in Eastern Connecticut.

Borough police picked up Lee Barber, 17, of Webster and held him until Officer Reed of that town could come here and take him in charge to answer in Webster to a charge of theft from a boarding house where he had been staying. Barber formerly lived in Killingly. When apprehended here he was wearing a suit of clothes he is charged with having stolen and possession also was regained of a suit case and a gold watch that he is also alleged to have taken upon making an unannounced departure from the Massachusetts town.

Miss Emma F. Pilling and Luther Pilling are entertaining their niece, Mrs. Gulian Lansing and her friend Mrs. Charles Brasier of Ploesti, Roumania.

Several from Danielson were at Worcester, Thursday afternoon, to attend the opening race meeting of the year.

There are twenty-one members of the class to be graduated from St. James' school next Tuesday.

Miss Blanche Gauthier, of the operating force at the telephone office, is having a vacation of two weeks.

Miss Helen Cronin, of Mt. St. Vincent college, on the Hudson, is at her home here for the summer holiday.

Gordon W. Keegan of the Philadelphia Textile school is at his home here for the summer holiday.

Gordon W. Keegan of the Philadelphia Textile school is at his home here for the summer vacation.

Mrs. Ella Woodworth will have the members of the Ladies' Reading Circle at her home for a meeting next Monday.

Gifts of clothing, shoes, hats, quilts, blankets, a mattress, rugs, canned goods, fruit, berries, flowers, ice cream, medicine, malted milk, groceries, food, toys, cooks, skates, games, magazines and much old linen have been given to the sick, children, shut-ins and needy.

This has been made possible by the generosity of the following people:

Mrs. Henry Smith, Miss Louise Danielson, Mrs. Oswald Street, Miss Ada King, Miss Kate Looney, Mrs. Charles Wheatley, Mrs. E. V. Wilbur, Miss Laura Sheldon, Mrs. Walter Jacobs, Mrs. Bretschneider, Mrs. V. Gartland, Mrs. J. C. Williams, Mrs. F. E. Cunneen, Mrs. G. B. Guild, Mrs A. J. Tillinghast, Mrs. C. H. Barber, Mrs. George Stone, Mrs. Esther Jacobs, Miss Evelyn Salmon, Mr. A. F. Wood, Miss Emma Pilling, Mrs. Simeon Danielson, Miss Frances Danielson, Mrs. John M. Paine, Mrs. James M. Paine, Mrs. Mortimer Marlor, Mrs. Miller, Mrs. W. I. Bullard, Mrs. A. P. Burns, Mrs. M. Olsson, Mrs. William Litch, Mrs. M. Heiman, Mrs. S. Herman, W. C. T. U., Mr. W. A. Burrows, Eastern Star, American Legion Auxiliary, Killingly Woman's Club, and several unknown contributors

Five patients have been taken to hospitals for treatment or operation other than tonsillectomy. In July 1924 the nurse assisted in clinics at which 1,000 persons were vaccinated. The following is a summary of the results of the health examination of the pupils in the public schools:

|---|---|
| Number of pupils examined | 1,000 |
| Number reported to parents as needing attention | 352 |
| Cases referred to doctors | |
| Tonsils | 112 |
| Adenoids | 10 |
| Defective eyes | 45 |
| Defective teeth | 204 |
| Skin disease | 14 |
| Pediculosis | 18 |
| Wry neck | 2 |
| Deafness | 4 |

This eight half-days have been spent in the school rooms. Nineteen children were taken to Day Kimball hospital for removal of tonsils. Others were operated on in the home. Many children had dental stry done, but there is a crying need for a dental clinic. We have in Danielson two dentists who will cooperate with us in establishing a clinic. They are already giving much valuable time to the work with very little reward.

The tuberculosis work established in 1919 is a very valuable part of our health program. Owing to quarantine measures taken last summer no clinics were held in June and July.

Dr. Campbell came to us eight times during the year. These clinics were attended by 119 people 40 of whom were new patients, 8 were found positive pulmonary, 2 bones and laryngeal cases, 5 of these have been hospitalized. 26 are suspicious cases, or contacts and are kept under observation.

Milk has been furnished to three families in which are 11 children. This was paid for with money from sale of Christmas seals. This is a preventive measure in tuberculosis work.

Each month a visit has been made to the town farm, the nurse carrying fruit, candy and small gifts and favors, for the people there. The treats are bought with money provided for that purpose by the late Miss Mary Dexter, who was much interested in that institution.

Our store closet contains the following articles, which are available for the public:

Six wheel chairs, 10 pairs crutches, 5 bed pans, 2 air cushions, 2 hospital beds with mattress, feeding cups, urinals, Betsco lamp for treatment, ice cap, bed hoops, pus basin and other articles

These things can be obtained from Mrs. A. H. Armington or myself.

Respectfully submitted,
MIRIAM BOOMHOWER,
Visiting Nurse.

PUTNAM

The friends of Miss Ester Gustafson of Pomfret, an interpreter of music through the dance, will be pleased to hear of her recent engagement at the Wanamaker auditorium, New York, when she shared the program with the orchestra of the S. S. Pranconia, just returned from a world cruise.

In spite of the heat the auditorium was filled with a large and appreciative audience. Miss Gustafson appeared in a group of dances of which a critic has said: "As an original interpreter of music her work is beautiful and moving beyond words. Just as the violinist or singer, through his art, expresses the inspiration of the composer, so in her dancing Ester visualizes the music for her audience."

Her program was the following: Humoresque, Dvorak; Fantasie, F. Minor, Chopin; Pastorale, Scarlatti-Tausig; Clair de lune, Debussy; Prelude No. 1, Op. 28, Chopin; Prelude No. 11, Op. 20; Chopin; Waltz, No. 2, Op. 39, Brahms; Waltz, No. 9, Op. 39, Brahms.

Ernest Whittemore attended the conference at Hartford in the interest of the adult blind which was held at the State Capitol.

At this meeting business was transacted and plans were made whereby the blind of the state may enter business. Another meeting will be held in the near future when more definite plans will be made.

Mr. Whittemore was born in Putnam and although totally blind has been doing business for several years and his lack of sight does not prevent making an occasional trip to the city.

Howard Seder, the ten year old son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Seder, who has been seriously ill at their home in Boston, is very much better.

Mrs. Howard Knight has returned to her home in Bridgeport after having been here almost continuously since the death of her father J. Harry Mann.

David Beausoliel has sold his interest in the meat and grocery business on Providence street to his brothers Ulric D. and A. D. Beausoliel and to his nephew, Camille Beausoliel. The former has not yet decided in what business he will engage.

Mrs. Clarence Thayer of Slatersville, R. I. has been the guest of her sister, Mrs. Thomas V. Rawley.

The grammar schools of the town of Thompson held their annual picnic at Roseland Lake. Games were played and refreshments were served.

Miss Elizabeth Rafferty and Chandler Morse are at Natick, Mass., where they attended the commencement exercises of the Walnut Hills School where Miss Rhoda Gilpatric is a member of the graduating class. The address was made by Rev. Dr. Harry Emerson Fisdick.

At the regular meeting of Putnam Lodge of Elks special Flag Day exercises were held. Flag Day this year is Sunday, June 14, but owing to the warm weather the officers of the lodge thought it best not to hold a special meeting on that day. At this same stalled as Tiler.

Rev. Dr. Karl Reiland will deliver the commencement address at Pomfret School this (Friday) morning. Dr. Reiland is the rector of St. George's, New York City and is a distinguished divine and a scholary speaker.

The boys will have their celebration including the traditional bonfire on Thursday evening.

Miss Isabelle Byrne, superintendent of the Sloane Hospital in New York City, is spending the month of June at her home on Seward street.

Mr. and Mrs. A. J. Delisle of Woodstock avenue have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Lillian Delisle to Thomas J. McDonnell of Pomfret.

After the regular meeting of the Odd Fellows Wednesday evening, memorial services were held for the departed brothers, Rev. N. B. Burton delivered the address and a quartette consisting of Mrs. Karl Kent, Miss Lucy Ellis, Kenneth Sharpe and Fred Ash sang with Miss Ethel Ellis at the piano. The committee having the affair in charge were Charles Richardson, Allie W. King and Herbert A. Johnson. There was a large attendance.

E. L. Davis is at Lord's Point for the summer. He is the postmaster, runs a store and has several cottages to rent.

Mrs. Orris L. Barber has returned to her home at Stratford after spending a week with her sister, Miss Lillian Giles, and Mr. and Mrs. Ernest W Whittemore.

On account of the extreme heat last Sunday the weekly tournament of the Putnam Country Club was not held. Very few people were brave enough or enthusiastic enough to attempt it.

Saturday, June 13, there is a team match scheduled with the Cohasse Country Club of Southbridge, at Southbridge, starting at 2 p. m. daylight saving time. All members wishing to go should get in touch with some member of the tournament committee immediately. It is hoped that a large representation will be present. There will be bridge in the afternoon for the ladies and possibly a dance in the evening.

The Field Day which was planned by the 43rd Division Headquarters Company for last Saturday, and had to be postponed on account of the excessive heat, will be held this week Saturday, June 13.

There will be a band concert on the square from 1:30 to 2 o'clock. The company will then form and march down Main street to Woodstock avenue and from there to the old Tourtellotte grounds now owned by Henry A. Keach. It was first planned to have the events at the Adams baseball grounds but the grounds owned by Mr. Keach are much larger and there is more shade for the spectators. There will be booths of all kinds and ice cream and cool drinks for sale.

After the track events are over the five mile race will be run. This will start at the church crossing at Norin Grosvenordale and finish at the Bugbee and Wulf corner.

Owing to the warm weather there will not be a dance at the Armory on Saturday evening as planned at first.

The judges will be Major J. J. Russell, Anson A. Buchanan and Representative William Pechie.

NEW TRAIN SCHEDULE NOT GOOD FOR PUTNAM

(Special to the Bulletin.)

Putnam, June 11.—Sunday morning, June 14, the new schedule on the New Haven will go into effect. It means a serious curtailment in passenger service, and business firms, especially the banks, will be seriously affected by the new mail schedule unless the postoffice department will co-operate with local authorities in an effort to remedy the situation.

Under the new schedule, the last mail to leave Putnam will be at 4:23 in the afternoon. This means that mail for east and north as well as mail destined for New York and the west.

Mail to go out at this hour must be in the postoffice by 3:30 or 3:45. As far as the banks are concerned it means that checks on their New York correspondents might be two or three days in reaching them, with the loss of interest for that time, a very appreciable amount during the course of the year.
